House Votes Biggest Fund Of All History To Beat Axis

Nearly 43 Billions Will Provide for 4½ Million Army Throughout Globe

More Money Needed

CHIEF OF ARMY ENGINEERS reports to Congress that 14 or 15 million dollars more are needed to finish New War Department building for which 35 millions have been appropriated—Story on Page 4.

Passage Unanimous

By Robert C. Albright
Post Staff Writer

The largest single appropriation in history, providing $42,821,943,067 for a 4,500,000-man Army within the next 12 months—an Army prepared to fight "in practically every portion of the world"—yesterday was unanimously passed by the House.

The stratospheric war outlay, exceeding military costs of the first World War, was sped to the Senate by a chorus of 352 "ayes," after Maj. Gen. J. T. McNarney, Army Deputy Chief of Staff, told an Appropriations Subcommittee:

"The War Department regards our present situation as the most critical which this country has ever encountered."

Republicans joined Democratic committeemen in support of appropriations designed to overshoot where possible the President's production goals and to carry the war to the Axis around the globe with the best paid and equipped Army in the world.

No Cost Is Too High

To the committee's report that the bill carried net total war appropriations for the 1941-42-43 fiscal years to $262,023,539,537, members replied in debate that the cost could not be compared "to the price of living under Hitler."

"I will vote for every dollar necessary to win, even though it means going through some kind of bankruptcy," Representative Engel (Republican) of Michigan, told the House.

Representative Powers (Republican) of New Jersey, struck the keynote of the debate:

"I would rather see the national debt go to some ethereal figure and live in a democracy."

11 Billions for Air Corps

Representative Snyder (Democrat) of Pennsylvania, chairman of the subcommittee handling the bill, told reporters it was safest to assume the war would last five years, "and then hope, pray and work to cut that period."

Biggest single outlay in the bill was $11,316,698,910 for the Army Air

Taxi Union, 100 Strong, Votes For 'Vacation'

The United Taxicab Drivers, Inc. called upon drivers to take a "vacation" beginning last midnight, but there was little evidence of a cab shortage early today.

Officials of the drivers' union explained that the cabs were to go off the streets "gradually" with 4700 "on vacation" by daylight today. Drivers were to be asked to go off when they finished their day's work; and hundreds of them were not scheduled to change shifts until 4 a. m.

Police officials, as a precaution, notified all precincts to "pay special attention to all taxicabs in operation on the street and to taxicab stands to the end that there will be no disorder, damage to property, personal injury nor violations of the law or regulations during the period of this strike."

A number of drivers associated with the United Taxicab Drivers cruised the city in their cabs—not in quest of fares—but to urge other drivers to cooperate in the "vacation" plan.

Taxi and PUC officials were skeptical of the chances for more than 100 cabs to be taken from the streets, however. The walkout call resolves itself into a test for the union, other taxicab officials said, pointing out that the organization never claimed to have more than 100 members, and never has been in good standing with the PUC.

The immediate cause of the "vacation" is the District Court decision Monday, dismissing the plea for a hearing on the new rates which went into effect yesterday. An appeal to the Court of Appeals will be filed by the union tomorrow.

Cost-Plus Contracts Under Fire

Military Committee Assails Careless Spending, Bureaucracy

Hitting at "reckless spending," mounting bureaucracy and cost-plus Army contracts, the House Military Committee yesterday issued a strongly worded report asserting that "nearly every conceivable type of extravagant waste" had been reflected in its investigation of War Department business dealings.

"There has been evidence of widespread and inexcusable waste of public funds amounting to millions of dollars," declared the report prepared by Chairman May (Democrat) of Kentucky, who said the year-old inquiry would continue.

The committee split sharply on the findings, with three Democrats reported to have joined nine Republicans to approve the report, 12 to 9.

The report, which declared that the "contractors' honeymoon at the expense of the taxpayers of the Nation must end," precipitated a heated debate on the floor of the House. Dissenting Democratic members of the committee argued that the findings of the majority threatened to destroy confidence in the progress of the war effort and undermine national unity and said they would file a minority report.

Representative J. Ewing Thomason (Democrat) of Texas, a dissenting member, charged that the majority report constituted "a blanket indictment, not only of the War Department, but also of the War Production Board and other agencies." Begging the House to keep "an open mind" and not to "pass judgment" based on the majority views, Mr. Thomason declared: "In these critical days when unity is so much needed, we ought to be fair."

Mr. May said the report was a mere compilation of earlier reports of three special subcommittees set up to investigate various phases of

U. S. Pays $9361 Rent On $4500 Truck

By the Associated Press

A story of how a second-hand truck purchased for $4500 returned $9361.05 to its owner through Government rentals, was related yesterday by the House Military Committee in its report on War Department contracts.

The truck, the report said, sold new for $9000, but was purchased second-hand for $4500 and "through negligence and collusion, the Government as of April 1, was induced to pay a total rental of $9361.05," before the committee reported the incident to the Justice Department.

Prices Frozen In Service Industries

All Repairs, Laundry, Storage Charges Included in Order

By Robert De Vore
Post Staff Writer

Price Administrator Leon Henderson yesterday set up maximum price machinery to control, for the duration of the war, the amount the American consumer will pay for such things as a shoe shine, a clean shirt, mending of a silk stocking, straightening of a fender and all other accommodations supplied by the service industries.

Price ceilings for these services—in general, the highest price charged for them during March, 1942—will go into effect July 1, a week from today, in a far-reaching move bearing importantly on living costs for every citizen and establishing history-making Government regulatory procedures for nearly one million American business establishments.

For these services, brought under the same over-all price ceiling structure that now governs the cost of almost all food and clothing, the Office of Price Administration estimated that American public pays upward of five billion dollars a year.

A list of the service industries covered by the new regulation "would fill pages of type," said the OPA announcement, while "a detailed description of them literally would fill a book." The range of affected industries is indicated by the following:

Laundry, dry-cleaning, garment repair and alteration, hat cleaning and blocking, shoe shining and repairing, auto service, storage and repair (including parking lots), repair of electrical appliances and radios, film developing and printing, undertakers' service, food locker service and rental, storage of

Tax Committee Adopts 14% Postwar Credits

Firms Subject to 94% Excess Profits Levy Would Be Affected

The House Ways and Means Committee yesterday, in a sharp reversal of previous action, adopted a plan for 14 per cent postwar "rehabilitation" credits to corporations subjected to a 94 per cent excess profits tax.

The plan, recently strongly urged by Chairman Donald Nelson of the War Production Board as an offset against steep excess profits levies, was approved on motion of Representative A. Willis Robertson (Democrat) of Virginia.

The vote was reported as 11 to 10. Recently the committee had rejected a similar plan, despite indorsements by the Treasury and a warning by Nelson that the 94 per cent rate might endanger war production unless eased by provision for refunds.

Net Tax of 80%

Under Robertson's plan, the postwar credit would equal 14 per cent of that part of a corporation's earnings subject to excess profits taxes.

This would bring the net excess profits rate, after the post-war refund, down to 80 per cent, the level above which Nelson said profits taxes could not go without threatening efficiency.

The refund would be effected by the post-war redemption of non-negotiable and non-interest bearing bonds issued within three months after payment of the tax, or the final quarterly installment.

Subject to Capital Gains Tax

The bonds would be assignable only after the war. They would mature in three equal installments beginning at the end of the second calendar year following "cessation of hostilities." Upon three months' notice, the bonds would be callable at any time prior to the maturity date.

Treasury payments in redemption would be subject to a 15 per cent capital gains tax. In addition, four specific restrictions would be placed on corporate use of the refunded money. No amount available to a corporation by reason of the issue of bonds or their redemption could be used for payment of dividends in cash or stock, or bonuses or salary increases to executives, for increase of cash re-

War Pinches East

OPA Expects to Approve 2 or 3 Cent Gas Price Rise

A rise in the price of gasoline in the District and 17 States of the Eastern rationing area will be announced this week by the Office of Price Administration, officials said last night, but they insisted at the same time that the amount of the rise has yet to be determined.

Published reports have put the rise at two and three cents a gallon, and officials said the increase would be "in the neighborhood" of those figures.

The pending increase, which Price Administrator Leon Henderson discussed at a press conference last Saturday, is necessary to enable handlers to pay higher land carrier charges for bringing into the East oil and gasoline that formerly came by water routes, now infested with submarines.

While the need for higher gas prices, based on an increase in the price of oil, is acknowledged by OPA, agency officials are divided on the question of whether to rescind an order under which filling stations in the rationed area are limited to 80 per cent of normal sales.

The proposal has been made to rescind the order when the new coupon rationing system is put into effect July 22. Some officials believe allocation of deliveries to sta-

Attack Impends As U. S. Bombers Join A. A. F. Raid On Bengasi Base

By Edward Kennedy
Associated Press Staff Writer

Cairo, June 23 (AP).—Heavy Axis mechanized formations, bringing with them the threat of impending attack, rumbled toward hastily consolidated British outposts near the Egyptian frontier today as American bombers joined the Royal Air Force in a devastating raid on the Axis supply base at Bengasi.

A dispatch filed by an Associated Press correspondent with the British forces near the Egyptian frontier at noon today said big armored units under the command of German Field Marshal Gen. Erwin Rommel have moved toward the British border positions.

"There is no indication when the battle will be joined but the enemy seemed to be moving the greater part of his armored forces toward this area," the correspondent, Harry Crockett, said.

Battle Reported Begun

[The opening shots of the battle of Egypt already have whined over the Libyan-Egyptian frontier as German long-range artillery posted near Fort Capuzzo set its range on a moving column of British tanks, the United Press reported.]

The bombing attack Sunday night left numerous fires in Bengasi, 300 air miles west of Egypt, and caused damage to railway sidings and ship pier, the Royal Air Force announced.

A formation of the four-motored Consolidateds, which the Americans call B-24's and the British call Liberators, only last week set fire to one battleship and other vessels of the Italian navy.

Air scouts reported Axis trucks moving up about 12 miles west of the border, but the main strength of Field Marshal Gen. Erwin Rommel's army was said to be still about 50 miles distant.

Joined by South Africans

Roving patrols of both sides prowled the desert southwest of Fort Capuzzo, but a British communique reported no great amount of action.

(Axis reports asserted armored forces already had reached the frontier, and dispatches from the desert confirmed that they had seized Sidi Azeiz airdrome, only 12 miles west. Sidi Azeiz also was the railhead on the line from Matruh, Egypt. The British recently had been extending the line toward Tobruk.)

A serious aspect of the situation was the extent of British equipment

Germans Begin New Assault; Lines Still Hold At Sevastopol

By Henry C. Cassidy
Associated Press Staff Writer

Moscow (Wednesday), June 24.—A powerful new German offensive on the Kharkov front has forced Marshal Timoshenko's forces to fall back to new positions while Sevastopol's defenders continue to hold off numerically superior Nazi forces after closing breaches torn in their fortifications by the enemy, the Russians announced early today.

"On the Kharkov front our troops conducted operations against advancing German troops," said the midnight communique. "Our troops were pressed back to new positions."

Violent new fighting erupted in this area Monday after a period of quiet in the struggle for this industrial center and one of the keys to the Caucasus. Detailed information was lacking but it was possible that Hitler might be starting one phase of a grand assault in an effort to reach the oil of the Caucasus even before a decision is reached at Sevastopol.

Germans Play the Fox

Presumably the renewed fighting was in the Izyum-Barvenkova sector, below Kharkov, where the Russians stand athwart the rail line running south to Rostov, the main gateway to the Caucasus. It was here that the Russians got the jump on the Nazis and bent their lines back in their surprise spring offensive which broke up Hitler's own preparations for a massive drive upon Rostov.

(The Germans, apparently playing the fox on their operations and intentions, Tuesday reported only "mopping up" activities on the Kharkov front and made no mention of fighting on a scale as large as the Russians indicated.)

In raids up and down the front Monday the Russians listed 20 German tanks, 100 troop-laden motor vehicles and two Nazi infantry battalions smashed.

In the battle for Sevastopol the Russian defenses about the Crimean base stiffened after Red forces threw the Germans out of their newly pierced fortifications but despite this the peril to the Russians there remained of the utmost gravity.

Fleet Shells Enemy Lines

Roosevelt, Churchill Tackle Major Problem of Shipping

Nonconfidence Motion In Commons Condemns Direction of War

By Drew Middleton
Associated Press Staff Writer

London, June 23.—Angry Commons insurgents moved tonight to challenge Winston Churchill's government with a nonconfidence motion condemning the military direction of the war, despite the announcing that substantial land and air reinforcements now are reaching the battle-weakened defenders of Egypt.

An important group of M. P.'s headed by Conservative Sir John Wardlaw-Milne drew up a motion for submission to the House declaring they had "no confidence in the central direction and strategy of the war." Among the signers were understood to be Leslie Hore-Belisha, David Lloyd George, Earl Winterton and Arthur Greenwood.

They will lead the opposition in a two-day debate which awaits the Prime Minister's return from the United States.

White House Reveals President and Premier Also See T. V. Soong

The shipping problem, an essential point in any consideration of Allied strategy, was attacked yesterday by President Roosevelt, Prime Minister Churchill and their ranking advisers. The conference was officially described as one of the most important of the British officials' current visit.

In addition, the White House disclosed that the President and prime minister conferred at length Monday with Dr. T. V. Soong, the Chinese foreign minister. The subject, said Stephen Early, Mr. Roosevelt's secretary, was "of course, China in a military sense."

The Churchill-Roosevelt consultations, Early said, had not yet reached the stage at which they could be discussed in detail and in public, and Mr. Roosevelt's usual Tuesday afternoon press conference was canceled. Early, however, reiterated a previous assertion that a statement would be issued when the meetings are ended.

308 Craft Lost In West Atlantic; 11 New Victims In Caribbean

By John G. Norris
Post Staff Writer

The Navy yesterday announced the sinking of 15 more United Nations merchant ships by Axis Submarines in Western Hemisphere waters—2 in the Atlantic and 13 in the Caribbean.

Two of the Caribbean sinkings previously had been announced by Latin-American countries, but the other losses brought to 308 the unofficial toll of Allied freighters, tankers and other commercial craft sunk by enemy submarines in the western Atlantic or adjacent waters.

A total of 229 persons are dead or missing from the 15 ships.

4 Die Trying to Save Ship

In announcing late yesterday the loss of the 13 ships in the Caribbean, the Navy said the vessels were attacked in the period June 3 through June 14. Earlier in the day, they disclosed that an American merchantman had gone down in the Atlantic June 15 and last midnight announced the sinking of a medium-sized British freighter some 75 miles off the New England coast.

It was by far the largest list of sinkings released by the Navy in a single day.

Survivors of the latest announced sinking disclosed that the skipper of the vessel, Capt. H. E. Jeffry of London, and three men from a rescue vessel lost their lives June 15, hours after the attack, when they returned to the stricken vessel in a futile effort to save it.

Survivors of the 13 ships attacked in the Caribbean were picked up and taken to "a Caribbean port," the Navy said. Associated Press dispatches from that city declared that 635 of the 770 persons aboard have been saved.

Rescue Ships Sunk

A Navy spokesman explained that the ships were attacked singly, but announced together because all the survivors were taken to a single port within a short space of time.

So intense was the campaign of the marauding U-boats during this period, that some of the ships which picked up survivors of the first vessels sunk were themselves sent to the bottom before they could reach port.

Meanwhile, the Argentine government announced in Buenos Aires that its freighter, Rio Tercero, which was sunk Monday 175 miles from New York, was sent to the bottom

Chinese Block Japs' Drive at 2 Vital Points

Invaders, However, Reinforce Armies; Allies Need Help

By William McGaffin
Associated Press Staff Writer

Chungking, June 23.—The Japanese drive to open an all-rail route from Shanghai to Singapore and thus obtain communications immune to sea attack, has been stalled at least temporarily on two of the vital fronts and the Chinese are counter-attacking successfully at some places, Government sources announced today.

The invaders, however, have reinforced their armies in the Chekiang-Kiangsi theater, where they are trying to forge one part of the link, and, for effective counterblows, the Chinese need more weapons from their Allies, a spokesman said.

Since June 16 the jaws of the Japanese trap have remained stationary, unable to take the Chinese-held 50-mile gap on the 450-mile loop of the Chekiang-Kiangsi Railway, the spokesman said.

The high command reported that the Chinese attacking behind the eastbound spearhead had recaptured several points on the outskirts of Linchwan (Fuchow), 45 miles southeast of Nanchang in Kiangsi.

A counterattack behind the westbound forces also succeeded in regaining temporary possession of Wuyi, south of Kinhwa, Japanese-held capital of Chekiang, Chinese said, but a reinforced Japanese column struck back and occupied the town again and advanced to the south.

Some of the bitterest fighting reported today was in the Honan-Shansi border region, north of the Yellow River where Chinese charged headlong from their de-

Government Prepares New Demand on Nazis For Satisfaction

By the Associated Press

Buenos Aires, June 23.—Argentina is taking a "serious view of the sinking by a German submarine of the freighter Rio Tercero, with the loss of five lives, and will announce, probably tomorrow, what steps will be taken to obtain satisfaction from Germany, Undersecretary for Foreign Affairs Roberto Gache announced tonight.

"It has been clearly proved that the Rio Tercero was sunk by a German U-boat," Gache said. "We know this because the captain went aboard the submarine after the torpedoing."

(Capt. Luis P. Scalese disclosed for the first time in a C. B. S. broadcast to Latin America tonight, that United States airmen and patrol seamen were responsible for the rescue of the survivors. He expressed the thanks of the crew to the Air Force and the Navy for their aid in spotting and picking up the men.)

Twelve men from the District and nearby Maryland and Virginia were listed among 2207 casualties of the war in the Pacific, announced by the Navy Department yesterday.

Bullitt Sworn In As Special Aid To Secretary Knox

William C. Bullitt, former Ambassador to Russia and France and more recently a personal representative of the President, was sworn in yesterday as a special assistant to Secretary of the Navy Knox.

The Navy issued this announcement:

"Secretary of the Navy Frank Knox announces that the Honorable William C. Bullitt has agreed to accept an appointment as special assistant to the Secretary of the Navy and was sworn into office this afternoon.

"The duties of Mr. Bullitt's office are for such special assignments as the Secretary of the Navy may make.

"Mr. Bullitt, personal representative of the President of the United States with the rank of Ambassador, resigned that office effective today."

'An Outstanding Job'

Post Reporter Wins News Guild Award for Axis Agent Expose

Dillard Stokes, Washington Post reporter, won the annual Heywood Broun Memorial Award of the American Newspaper Guild in Denver yesterday for piecing together "essential points of information which exposed a ring of Fascist agents who had reached into the very halls of Congress to exploit their foreign propaganda."

"The award," announced Milton Murray, guild president, "is based not on one story nor even on a short series, but on an extensive series which contributed to the conviction for perjury of George Hill, secretary to . . . Congressman Hamilton Fish, and to the revelation that the rantings of . . . Congressman Clare Hoffman were being used as propaganda to weaken American unity."

Murray referred to Stokes' work in connection with a special grand jury's investigation of foreign propaganda agents, which began last summer and still continues, as "an outstanding job of newspaper reporting."

The $250 award was made to Stokes at the guild convention, to which Stokes is a delegate from the Washington Newspaper Guild. He is vice president of the Washington guild.

A member of The Washington Post news staff since August, 1937, Stokes lives with his wife and two young children at the Fairfax Village Apartments, 3917 Pennsylvania Avenue Southeast.

Death of Two Heroes

Pair at Tobruk Blow Up Oil, Munitions, Docks and Selves

By the Associated Press

With the British Forces Near the Egyptian Frontier (Wednesday), June 24—British army and navy men who escaped from Tobruk aboard the South African minesweeper Parktown said two anonymous heroes deprived the Germans of valuable supplies by blowing up the docks and themselves.

From far out in Tobruk Harbor, they saw the pair standing on the opposite end of the docks loaded with munitions and oil. Together, they pushed down plungers setting off five tons of explosives under the wharves.

"There was a blinding flash, the loudest roar I ever heard and everything around the harbor went up in bits, including the two boys," one soldier said.

He added that the concussion rocked the ship and must have leveled what was left of the town.

After the British surrender at 7:45 a. m., Sunday, Italian infantry were assigned to guard the prisoners, but usually there was only one to twenty because "they were too busy looting and faking food and water," the escaped men said.

U. S. Forces Warned Before Jap Blow

Hull Feared Shock Attack, Magazine Writers Claim

By John A. Reichmann
United Press Staff Writer

Two weeks before Japan's sneak punch at Pearl Harbor, Secretary of State Cordell Hull urged that American forces in the Pacific be put on the alert lest a shock attack on a wide front "stampede the hell out of our scattered forces," it was revealed last night.

The disclosure is contained in an article entitled "How War Came" in the current issue of the Ladies' Home Journal. It was written by Forrest Davis and Ernest K. Lindley, newspapermen, and purportedly is based on previously unrevealed records from the files of the White House, the State Department and other Government agencies.

It makes these other revelations:

Undersecretary of State Sumner Welles warned former Soviet Ambassador Constantine Oumansky in January, 1941, that Germany would attack Russia in June, 1941. The Nazi legions marched east on June 22.

Roosevelt Opposed Ultimatum

When President Roosevelt and British Prime Minister Winston Churchill held their first conference from which the Atlantic Charter emerged, they differed on Anglo-American policy in the Far East. Churchill wanted the President to join in an ultimatum to Japan despite the risk of war involved in such a course. The President refused, saying "I think I can baby them (the Japs) along for three months." He did for almost four months.

The President, with a "that's good, Cordell" approved the tongue-lashing which Hull gave Japanese Diplomats Kurusu and Kichisaburo Nomura on December 7 when they handed him a note accusing the United States of scheming to extend the war. Pearl Harbor had been attacked and Hull believed that Kurusu, who came here on a special mission designed to improve relations between Japan and the United States, knew the attack was imminent.

Upon the request of Churchill, the President issued a statement assuring that the United States had no underlying intentions toward the British possessions in the Atlantic leased to the United States for military basing purposes in return for 50 over-age American destroyers. Churchill wanted the assurance to placate a section of British opinion firmly convinced that the empire could be sold down the river to ingenious Americans.

Gen. John J. Pershing once was considered by the President for the post of American Ambassador to Vichy but the appointment went to Admiral William D. Leahy when Pershing's doctors ruled that his health was not up to the diplomatic assignment.

Weygand a Rock

Gen. Maxime Weygand, while viceroy of North Africa, flatly rejected demands levied on him by pro-German Admiral Jean Francis Darlan and Vichy, calling for widespread Nazi penetration of French areas under his rule. The demands called for gradual Nazi infiltration of North Africa port cities by Nazi "tourists"; a sharing of the defense of his viceroyalty with the Nazis, and a campaign to be initiated against the Free French in Equatorial Africa. On the rock of Weygand's resistance, collaboration broke in June, 1941.

Harry L. Hopkins, chief adviser to the President, was among a group of high Government officials who, before Pearl Harbor, were urging upon Mr. Roosevelt that "we polish Japan off first while the British still were holding the Atlantic." Secretary of the Treasury Henry Morgenthau, jr., and Secretary of the Interior Harold L. Ickes pressed for a more militant line. Leahy and Admiral Francis E. Yarnall, now retired, were among the naval officers who advocated joining up with the British at Singapore and "taking no more nonsense from the Japanese."

Hull was not completely surprised by the Pearl Harbor attack because he had a low opinion of most Japanese statesmen in power during the time when relations between the two countries grew steadily worse. He was not impressed by Prince Fumimaro Konoye, the former Japanese premier, and he was firmly convinced that Yosuke Matsuoka, former Japanese foreign minister, was as crooked "as a basket of fishhooks."

The article stated that five weeks before Kurusu's arrival here Hull warned the Army and Navy that the Far Eastern crisis, having passed outside the bounds of diplomacy, was now in their laps.

"Reminding his war cabinet colleagues of Japan's proclivity for beginning wars by stealth, he had suggested that all hands in the Pacific be on guard lest a shock attack on a wide front 'stampede the hell out of our scattered forces,'" it was stated.

Welles "On" to Oumansky

Welles' knowledge that Germany would invade Russia in June, 1941, represents one of the most startling disclosures in the article. The information was transmitted to Oumansky without qualification. The Ambassador, it was stated, transmitted the warning to his government but, the article said, he "exhibited some unconcern."

Four days after Russia was attacked, Oumansky again conferred with Welles and remarked that he had thought well enough of Welles' information to report on it in full to his government. Welles dryly assured him that he was aware of the report. What Welles did not mention, the article related, was that he knew Oumansky also had reported the warning to Hans Thomsen, then German Charge D'Affaires here.

Dogs Attack And Destroy Nazi Tanks

By Ilya Ehrenbourg
Soviet War Correspondent Written for United Press

Moscow, June 23 (U.P.).—This is a story of Russian dogs which attack German tanks and destroy them.

Recently on the Kalinin front German tanks were bearing down on Soviet dugouts. Hearing the dogs barking and knowing by experience what it meant, they turned back. The dogs attacked. The foremost tank was blown up by a dog named Tom, and the others were pursued for a long time by Tom's companions.

Red Army troops commanded by Second Lieutenant Konkov stemmed a German tank attack in the Azyum sector last month. Konkov had several trained dogs in his detachment, and they blew up nine tanks and two armored cars.

Red Army Soldier Churkin had a dog named Malysh, with the ears of a setter and the strength of a Great Dane. Malysh flung himself on a tank. A bursting shell stunned Malysh for a moment, and Churkin went out to meet the tank. But Malysh forestalled him. Gloomily relating his death, Churkin said, "that was a fine dog."

Save Thousands of Lives

I saw a dog which had blown up German tanks and survived. Some day I shall be able to tell how these dogs are trained and how they destroy the tanks. But one thing I can say—the dog which formerly saved men from the waves of the sea, from snowdrifts, from criminals' bullets, now saves him from tanks.

The part played by dogs in modern warfare is a highly responsible and varied one. Their native intelligence, plus patient training, works wonders.

They have saved thousands upon thousands of lives on the Russian front.

One day last winter in a forest near Gzhatsk the snow was deep, no motor vehicles could pass, and even exhausted horses had to give up. Then I saw a team of four Eskimo dogs dragging a deep sled forward. In it lay a wounded lieutenant, the company's favorite. A trench mortar bomb had smashed his knee.

Haul Wounded, Ammunition

In one sector of the central front a team of sled dogs in five weeks carried 1239 wounded from the battlefield and hauled 327 tons of ammunition up to the front lines.

Before me lies a penciled note reading: "Our division advancing with heavy casualties. Many wounded lying in church. Have no means transporting them. If possible send dog teams immediately. Situation serious." The dogs arrived in time to save the wounded.

During the winter the Eskimo dogs wore white camouflage jackets. Now their brindled color makes them invisible from afar. Hells, bombs, bullets do not daunt them.

Barss could scent a cuckoo a mile away. Cuckoo are German riflemen who snipe from concealed vantage points. In his last hours Barss discovered three cuckoos. A fourth shot him, but in so doing betrayed himself and was shot in turn.

Everyone knows the work of ambulance dogs. There was a case near Duminichi during a lull between attack and counterattack. An Alsatian named Bob crept through a forest glade. Wounded troops had crawled into shell holes and ditches. Bob found 16 of them. When he came across one he would lie down beside him and pant loudly, waiting until the wounded man took the dressing from a medical kit slung on his back.

Maintain Communication

Last January a rifle regiment was cut off in the German rear near Vereyea. Telephone communication had been cut and wireless apparatus smashed. Liaison was maintained by 14 dogs which stole through open fields under heavy mortar fire.

A dog named Tor finally brought a note saying, "Have lain down, daren't raise our heads because of fire." Tor took back the reply, "Raise your men and advance." Two hours later the men entered Vereyea.

Red Army Soldier Kozubovsk trained his dog to maintain liaison between two points on the firing line nearly 4 miles apart. While the Russians were defending a hill, the airedale named Freya made 33 trips between them. On the last she came in wounded, her jaw splintered by a bomb fragment.

"She was suffering terribly and I had to kill her," Kozubovsk said. "She was a true friend of the battalion, and we all knew what a heavy loss it was."

"Dogs Are Fine Men"

Lieutenant General Lelyushenko, hero of the Soviet Union, has a high regard for the work of dogs at the front, and his opinion is shared by officers and men.

In this war the dogs are adding luster to the words of the Russian poet Mayakovsky, who said:

Bodies of 2 U. S. Pilots Recovered After Crash

Caracas, Venezuela, June 23 (AP).—The bodies of two United States airmen, Lieut. P. P. Carter of Richmond, Va., and Sergt. Kyle Anderson of Houston, Tex., were recovered today from a lake into which their plane failed to pull out of a dive. The airmen were demonstrating dive-bombing to Venezuelan cadets and their plane failed to pull out of a power dive.

deputy, inflamed rather than pacified the critics of what Wardlaw-Milne called "one of the most serious disasters" of the war.

It was evident that the insurgents intended to launch a full dress attack on Churchill's direction of the war as minister of defense, charging overoptimism, failure to organize supplies and interference with the judgment of generals.

Churchill's position depended upon his ability to keep members of his Conservative Party from bolting to join Wardlaw-Milne and the other Tory rebels. There were indications outside Commons that he was losing many supporters. For one thing, the Conservative Daily Telegraph and Morning Post, which spoke out forcibly for the prime minister after the fall of Singapore, has been hostile for several days. For another, the Times of London called the hapless British decision to try to hold Tobruk "an error in judgment," justified only if a quick counter-offensive were planned.

Telegram From Auchinleck

Much of Attlee's statement consisted of a long telegram from Gen. Sir Claude J. E. Auchinleck, dealing with military developments up to Saturday, the day before Tobruk fell.

Neither this telegram nor Attlee's statement mentioned the fight between British tanks and antitank guns on June 13, the fight which experts call the decisive action of the campaign.

Attlee said: "The position is difficult but the fight for Libya continues. We still have strong forces in the field. Substantial reinforcements, both land and air, which already have been dispatched are arriving while others are on their way. . . . Any further advance by the enemy, who also has had heavy losses, will be stoutly opposed by our ground and air forces."

Churchill's spokesman also summarized the Mediterranean convoy battles which preceded the climactic Libyan fighting and disclosed "serious" British losses which included one light cruiser, four destroyers and two smaller escort vessels sunk. Against this, he said, the Axis lost to combined American-British air and British naval action one 8-inch cruiser, two destroyers and a U-boat sunk and "one battleship torpedoed." Previous official reports said two Italian battleships, the 35,000-ton Littorio and the smaller Conte di Cavour, had been hit by American bombs or British aerial torpedoes.

Both Equally Exhausted

Attlee said the Axis lost at least 65 planes; the British 30. Auchinleck's telegram placed the "crucial moment" on the Libyan battle at the point late in May when Field Marshal Erwin Rommel's Axis African Corps was wedged in the British advanced mine-field line, exhausted, in difficulty with supplies and having fought itself to a standstill.

"Had we been able to take advantage of the enemy's condition we might have turned the scale," reported Auchinleck. In point of fact, however, we were equally exhausted and this was impossible.

In dealing with the Mediterranean Sea-air battles, Attlee disclosed that two convoys were started for Malta, one from west and one from east, in order to divide the Axis forces which were certain to attack in heavy force. The eastbound convoy, he said, reached Malta June 16, "although with serious losses." The westbound convoy, after passing supply ships into Tobruk, cruised about while British and United States planes from Malta attacked the main Italian fleet. So much fuel was used up in this "avoiding action" that the convoy had to turn back to Alexandria instead of proceeding to Malta.

In addition to the Libyan discussion, Attlee announced a full-dress debate will be held soon on Allied shipping losses in response to growing anxiety. (This was one of the topics of the Churchill-Roosevelt conversations in Washington.)

Text of Attlee's Statement to House of Commons on Libyan Situation

By the Associated Press

London, June 23.—The following is the text of Clement Attlee's statement today to Commons on the Libyan situation:

It is now just three weeks since the Prime Minister made a statement to the House upon the battle which then was developing in Libya as a result of the attack upon our positions by Axis forces.

He then read to the House a statement he received from General Auchinleck as to the situation on the preceding day which said:

"Fierce fighting is still proceeding. The battle is by no means over. Further heavy fighting is to be expected, but whatever may be the result, there is no shadow of doubt that Rommel's plans for his initial offensive have gone completely awry and this failure has cost him dear in men and material."

The Prime Minister, after summarizing the latter part of General Auchinleck's telegram, added, "from all the above it is clear that we have every reason to be satisfied and more than satisfied with the course which the battle has so far taken. We should watch its further development with earnest attention."

The statement took events up to June 1. Unfortunately, after this initial check to General Rommel and after fighting had swayed to and fro for some days, events have gone against us in spite of the splendid courage and morale of our troops which still remain unbroken.

General Auchinleck's Statement

When Lord Winterton on Thursday last asked for a statement on the Libya campaign, I asked for and obtained a report from General Auchinleck. This gives an account of events up to June 20 which I propose to read to the House:

"An enemy attack during the last few days of May was expected and preparations had been made accordingly. The Eighth Army, on positions stretching from Ain El Gazala southward to Bir Hacheim, was waiting for this attack. The Royal Air Force began counteroffensive action about a week beforehand. The enemy's first attempt to encircle Bir Hacheim and our forward troops was met by our armored forces in the Knightsbridge-El Adem area.

"Most bitter fighting ensued in which the enemy was constantly attacked by our armored and air forces. At first, things appeared to be going well. The enemy, in spite of the gap he forced in our minefield, was having difficulty with his supplies and all our efforts, including intense air attack, were devoted to increasing his embarrassment.

"This was probably the crucial moment in the battle. The enemy was exhausted and had literally fought himself to a standstill.

Both Sides Were Exhausted

"Had we been able to take advantage of the enemy's condition we might have turned the scale. In point of fact, however, we were equally exhausted and this was impossible. On June 3, the enemy succeeded in overrunning the 150th Brigade and established for himself a forward post in our minefield area.

"In an attempt to restore the position and drive him out, General Ritchie counterattacked on June 4.

"Our information available at the time, the chances of success of this attempt seemed good and it was preceded by adequate and careful reconnaissance but it now is clear that it was, in fact, premature.

"The enemy put in a fierce counterstrike in the face of which we were forced to withdraw with considerable losses. The enemy then concentrated his attention on Bir Hacheim which was garrisoned by the Free French and already had been subjected to heavy pressure for a period of nine days.

"Every effort was made to relieve the pressure on this defended locality by employment of mobile troops. Intense air support was provided by the R. A. F. In the event, however, Gen. Ritchie decided that the risk of maintaining this isolated garrison was too great and he accordingly decided withdrawal from it June 10.

"The Free Frenchmen defended Bir Hacheim with the utmost tenacity and endurance. Their efforts served to delay the enemy and to contain considerable enemy forces. With the fall of Bir Hacheim these enemy forces were released and the enemy pressed his attack in the Knightsbridge-El Adem area.

A Skillful Withdrawal

"Heavy fighting ensued and although our troops and airforces fought with the greatest skill, three days later we were forced to abandon some positions at Knightsbridge and open the way for the enemy to break through to the coast and to try to cut off the First South African and Fiftieth Divisions in their positions south of Ain El Gazala. General Ritchie decided rightly to withdraw these two divisions, an operation which was carried out with skill and was very largely successful.

"Under cover of our armored forces which held off the enemy panzer divisions and, under the covering protection which the R. A. F. provided in spite of the fact that they were at the same time engaged in protecting a convoy to Malta, both these divisions succeeded in joining General Ritchie to the east of Tobruk. The enemy then pressed his attack in the El Adem area. A fierce battle ensued in which he succeeded in establishing himself east of El Adem in the defended local area at Sidi Rezegh. For four days the enemy was held in the air and on land until eventually General Ritchie decided to withdraw to the El Adem-El-Sidi Rezegh area under effective cover of our air force and concentrate his main strength toward frontier, leaving what he considered to be an adequate garrison in Tobruk.

Foresaw Tobruk Fall

"On the morning of June 20, the enemy attacked Tobruk from the southeast and succeeded in penetrating the perimeter and a position in that portion of the Tobruk area east of the Tobruk-El Adem road. The garrison still is fighting hard and a gallant attempt to save what appears to be an impossible situation is being made. But the fall of Tobruk is imminent if it has not already fallen. The battle is not yet over. Our air forces still are actively on the offensive and still are maintaining the moral superiority they have gained over the enemy.

"The Eighth Army still is in the field and has already received and is still receiving further reinforcements."

That is the end of General Auchenleck's statement. Since then we have received definite news of the fall of Tobruk. The attack on Tobruk began during the morning of June 20. Heavy air bombardment was followed by an infantry attack which succeeded in making the initial breach in the southeast face of the perimeter. Enemy tanks and lorried infantry passed through this gap and were brought to battle inside the perimeter during the afternoon.

We lost very heavily in tanks and, as a result, the situation deteriorated rapidly. During the night the mobile portion of the garrison began to fight its way out. We have as yet no details of subsequent fighting nor have we information as to what number of the garrison has been able to escape capture. It is not possible to give the House any further information at this stage of the battle.

Praises City's Defenders

The fall of Tobruk and the capture of a large part of its garrison is a heavy and unexpected blow. There were in the garrison troops from this country, from India and from South Africa. We deplore the loss of all these gallant troops.

I am sure this House will join me in expressing our sympathy with Field Marshall Smuts in the loss which he and his people of South Africa have sustained in the capture of forces which played such a distinguished part in the campaign.

The position is difficult but the fight for Libya continues. We still have strong forces in the field. Substantial reinforcements, both land and air, which already have been dispatched are arriving while others are on their way. The House may be assured that every possible step is being taken to restore the position.

Any further advance by the enemy who has also had heavy losses will be stoutly opposed by our ground and air forces.

It is a situation which calls for the greatest courage and devotion from our soldiers and airmen and for the steadfastness and resolution among our people. I am sure that these qualities will be forthcoming and we shall all meet this setback in the spirit that inspired that fine statement made yesterday by Field Marshal Smuts.

Supplying Malta Dangerous

I turn now to the second part of the question relating to operations in the Mediterranean. The gallant resistance of Malta deserves every possible effort we can make to sustain the people and garrison in their great fight. The passage of convoys for this purpose has for a long time been a hazardous operation. Whether they came from Gibraltar or from Alexandria, their assembly and departure became known to the enemy and he could lay plans for their interruption.

Whether from the east or west they must steam about 1600 miles, mostly through waters under constant air and submarine reconnaissance and within easy striking distance of the enemy's main sea and air bases. Thus they must fight their way through. On this occasion it was decided to sail two convoys, one from the west and one from the east. The enemy must then either concentrate on one or the other of the convoys or begin an attack on both with smaller forces against each. That was in fact what happened last week.

The western convoy under command of Vice Admiral Curteis was sighted and shadowed by enemy aircraft before it reached the Sardinia-North Africa channel, but in spite of violent air attacks and the threat of attack by two enemy cruisers and four destroyers which were driven off, this convoy reached Malta although with serious losses in the early hours of Tuesday, June 16. During this passage 43 enemy planes were destroyed for certain and 22 were probably destroyed as well as many others damaged by AA gunfire from the convoy and escorts, by naval aircraft and by aircraft of the R. A. F.

Several Hits on a Destroyer

Attacks were made upon the enemy cruisers and destroyers by our aircraft, which claim several hits and a large enemy destroyer was seen to be hit by torpedoes both forward and aft and to suffer a violent explosion amidships.

After the supply ships had been passed into Tobruk the eastern convoy under the command of Rear Admiral Vian was steering toward Malta on Sunday, June 14, when our air reconnaissance reported an enemy force consisting of two battleships of the Littorio class and four cruisers and at least eight destroyers which evidently were attempting to bar passage of the convoy to Malta.

Avoiding action accordingly was taken by Admiral Vian and meanwhile air striking forces were dispatched from Malta and from the western desert to attack the enemy fleet. These attacks developed at intervals during the forenoon of Monday, June 15.

One of these attacks was witnessed by one of our submarines who saw a 10,000-ton cruiser of the eight-inch gun Trento class hit, set on fire and stopped. The submarine closed in and sank this cruiser by torpedo.

It is certain that other damage was inflicted on the enemy.

In particular one of the enemy battleships was hit by a torpedo. During this day, the enemy's main fleet cruised between the eastern convoy and Malta, but by nightfall, the arrival of the western convoy was insured. Delay through the air attack on the enemy battle fleet resulted in expenditure of fuel by the eastern convoy which necessitated the return of this convoy to Alexandria.

Full Report Not Yet Available

Full reports of the losses inflicted on enemy airforces during the air attack on this convoy have not yet been received but it is known that at least 15 aircraft were shot down by antiaircraft gunfire by His Majesty's ships and R. A. F. fighters alone accounted for seven enemy aircraft for certain and damaged several others.

The House will already have gathered that the relief brought to the Malta garrison by the convoy was not carried through without considerable losses. The balanced sheet of naval and aircraft losses is as follows:

Royal Navy losses—one light cruiser sunk, four destroyers sunk, two escort vessels sunk.

Enemy losses actually known are—one battleship torpedoed, one eight-inch gun cruiser sunk, two destroyers sunk, one U-boat sunk.

It is also known that the enemy lost at least 80 aircraft.

As against these our losses amounted to 30 aircraft, including R. A. F. and the fleet air arm losses.

Thanks American Fliers

General Lord Gort has expressed great appreciation on behalf of Malta to the gallant men of all services in replenishing the supplies of Malta and particularly mentioning officers and men of the mercantile marine.

The government also desires to express its grateful thanks for help rendered to the Royal Air Force and the fleet air arm by American bombers which took part in the operations with success.

The House may well desire to have an early opportunity of discussing the events and situation in the Mediterranean theater of war, and if this be so the government will of course meet the wishes of the House, but as I already pointed out our information about events in Libya is incomplete and the battle still is in an acute stage.

The men in command are fully occupied in dealing with the immediate and pressing needs of the situation and the members will wish to give us full opportunity to do all the possible facts before coming to a judgment on these events. In these circumstances I suggest to the House that it would be well to wait for a few days in order that as full a statement as possible may be made so that fruitful debate can take place.

Blackstone to Get Air Force School

By the Associated Press

The War Department notified Senator Byrd (Democrat) of Virginia yesterday it had authorized construction of an air force training school at Blackstone, Va., to cost in excess of three million dollars.

Construction will be under the supervision of the district engineer's office at Norfolk. Not other details were given.

12 Pacific Casualties From District Area

Navy Lists 2207 Dead, Injured or Lost; Maj. William Benson Reported Killed

Twelve men from the District and nearby Maryland and Virginia are listed among 2207 casualties of the war in the Pacific announced by the Navy Department yesterday.

The list included those whose next of kin were notified between May 11 and June 6, and included 98 dead, 8 wounded and 2101 missing.

"The large percentage of names under the 'missing' classification is due to the fact that many of them were serving in the Manila Bay area when it capitulated to the enemy, and likely are prisoners of war," the Navy Department said. "It may be several months before definite information can be obtained on such cases, and the next of kin will be notified promptly when definite word is received."

Maj. William W. Benson, U. S. M. C., was the only fatality among District residents. He was commanding officer of the Eastern Island detachment of Marines when he was killed in the battle of Midway and adjacent islands. His widow lives at the Chastleton.

Native of Massachusetts

A native of Springfield, Mass., Maj. Benson was graduated from officers' training school and received his commission in 1927. He served in China and Nicaragua, and at sea aboard the U. S. S. Houston. He held the Yangtze Service Medal, the Expeditionary Medal from China in 1927, and the Second Nicaraguan Campaign Medal.

He leaves his widow, the former Edna M. Heiser; his parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. W. Benson of Springfield; a brother, the Rev. Richard Benson of St. Louis, Mo., and a sister, Mrs. Harold Ransom of Springfield.

Those from Washington listed as missing are: Capt. James R. Bromeyer, U. S. M. C., whose mother, Mrs. E. M. Bromeyer, lives at 2701 Connecticut Avenue Northwest; Capt. Noel Oker Castle, U. S. M. C., whose mother lives at 4104 Maryland Drive; Pvt. Edward G. Free, U. S. M. C., of 2854 Connecticut Avenue Northwest; Seaman John Sylvester Henshaw of the Naval Reserve, 607 H Street Southwest, and Pvt. Jack C. Ostrom, U. S. M. C., of 1924 Thirty-fifth Place Northwest.

Marylander Reported Killed

Pvt. James A. Richards, U. S. M. C., whose parents, Mr. and Mrs. William B. Richards, live at Naylor, Prince Georges County, Md., was the only fatality reported from Maryland.

Officers from the nearby Maryland area who are missing are Lieut. Col. Samuel W. Freeny, U. S. M. C., whose wife lives at Annapolis, and Lieut. David Long Quinn of the Navy Chaplain Corps, whose wife lives in Crisfield.

Also missing is Lawrence Franklin Tyree, a pharmacist's mate in the Navy, whose wife resides at Capitol Heights, Md.

Residents of nearby Virginia listed as missing are Sergt. June B. Begala, U. S. M. C., of Quantico; and Pvt. Talton B. Montgomery, U. S. M. C., whose mother, Mrs. H. A. England, lives at 1903 North Utah Street, Arlington.

Captain Castle, a native Washingtonian, was born in 1911 and was graduated from the University of Maryland in 1935. He entered the Marine Corps as a second lieutenant in 1936, and was on duty at Wakefield, Mass.

Captain Castle was ordered to Shanghai, China, with the Fourth Regiment of Marines in 1940, and was transferred to the Phillippine Islands shortly before Pearl Harbor. He was last heard from in the Manila Bay area.

Captain Castle's mother, Mrs. Annie B. Castle; two brothers, Alfred B. Castle and Charles E. Castle; and a sister, Thelma Castle, are Washington residents.

Captain Bromeyer also was stationed with the Fourth Regiment of Marines in Shanghai before being sent to the Philippines.

Born in St. Louis, Mo., in 1915, Captain Bromeyer was graduated from the Naval Academy and commissioned a second lieutenant in the Marine Corps in 1937. He was assigned to duty at the Navy Yard here in 1938, and left for duty in China in 1939. His mother and his sister, Rea Bromeyer, live at 2701 Connecticut Avenue Northwest.

Colonel Freeny was sent to the Far East in 1940, and was stationed with the Fourth Regiment of Marines in the Philippines just before the Pearl Harbor attack.

Colonel Freeny was born in Salisbury, Md., in 1896, and received his commission as a second lieutenant in the Marine Corps after his graduation from St. John's College in 1917.

From 1928 to 1931 he was stationed in Haiti on constabulary detail. He was made a lieutenant colonel in January. He holds the Victory Medal with West Indies clasp and the Expeditionary Medal. His wife now lives in Obery Heights, Annapolis.

Private Free, 27, is the son of J. F. Free, an insurance company adjustor here, and Mrs. Free. Before enlisting in the Marine Corps in 1940, Private Free served in the Tennessee National Guard for several years and attended Kelly Field, Tex., as an Army aviation cadet. He was stationed with the Fourth Regiment of Marines in the Philippines and was awarded the Silver Star for bravery there.

Private Ostrom, whose mother, Mrs. Elvira C. Ostrom, lives at 1924 Thirty-fifth Place Northwest, was a student at Woodrow Wilson High School when he enlisted in the Marine Corps. He was last heard from in the Manila area.

Virginians Die

Deaths among Virginia men included Lieut. Milton Ernest Ricketts of Norfolk; Lyle Francis Celia, fireman third class in the Navy, of Warwick; Alex Alexander Ewing, U. S. N., chief metalsmith of Norfolk; Duke David Gault, chief machinist mate, of Norfolk; Pvt. Rawley M. Goolsby, jr., U. S. M. C., of Danville; David Woodson Harris, U. S. N., torpedoman, of Richmond, and Patrick Nick Palumbi, seaman, U. S. N., of Norfolk.

Bertram Monroe Robinson, U. S. N., aviation ordnanceman, of Berkley, was reported as wounded.

Missing were Maj. James V. Bradley, U. S. M. C., Norfolk, and Ensign Leslie Lockhart Bruce Knox, U. S. N. R., also of Norfolk. Enlisted men on the "missing" list were: Joseph Evan Beach, radioman, U. S. N., of Richardsville; George Junior Blevins, seaman, U. S. N. Big Stone Gap; Jerry Judson Bunch, radioman, U. S. N., of Norfolk; Arthur Watson Burkholder, jr., storekeeper, U. S. N., Lynchburg; John Garland Burton, seaman, U. S. N. R., Hopewell; George Raby Dixon, pharmacist's mate, U. S. N., Cradock Bowdoin Mears Drummond, coxswain, U. S. N. R., Keller; Sergt. Edward V. Foresman, U. S. M. C., Newport News; Hubert Arthur Fowlkes, aviation chief metalsmith, U. S. N., Norfolk, and Thomas Oakley Gale, electrician's mate, U. S. N., Ocean View.

Also missing were: William Burton Gay, machinist's mate, Gwynn; Charles Campbell Gilmore, chief radioman, U. S. N. R., Strasburg; William Rufus Goodwin, U. S. N., Norfolk; John F. Hughes, jr., platoon sergeant, U. S. M. C., Gate City; Robert Edward Johnson, chief boatswain's mate, U. S. N., Radford; Charles W. Keeton, supply sergeant, U. S. M. C., Lawrenceville; Brooks Miller, corporal, U. S. M. C., Norfolk; Jack Jerome Rocher, fireman, U. S. N., Portsmouth; Darrell S. Stanley, first sergeant, U. S. M. C., Norfolk; Charles Robert Thomas, officers' cook, U. S. N., Staunton; James Francis Thompson, aircraft radioman, U. S. N., Norfolk; William S. Vaiden, platoon sergeant, U. S. M. C., Richmond, and Damon Haley Wright, fireman, U. S. N., Portsmouth.

The Gallup Poll

Large Majority of Public Favors Release Of Parolable Prisoners for War Service

By George Gallup

Director, American Institute of Public Opinion

Princeton, N. J., June 23.—Should men in American prisons who are eligible for parole be released to fight in the armed forces?

At a recent Probation and Parole Conference in Louisville, Ky., a number of parole board members expressed the view that "the public would resent the earlier release of prison inmates for war duty." The question, highly controversial, has been widely discussed among prison experts ever since the draft was put into effect.

At the suggestion of Mr. Arthur Glattke, superintendent of the Ohio State Reformatory, the Institute has undertaken a Nation-wide poll to determine just where public opinion stands on the issue.

The poll, completed this week, shows the public voting about three to one in favor of allowing prisoners who are eligible for parole in the next few years to join the armed forces.

The poll question, and results, follow:

"It has been suggested that men in American prisons who are eligible for parole in the next two or three years be paroled now to enlist in the armed forces. Do you favor or oppose this proposal?"

Favor	66%
Opposed	27
Qualified Answer	6
No Opinion	7

According to recent estimates, the male population of American State and Federal penitentiaries is approximately 160,000.

Prison Association Active

The American Prison Association has been active for many months in a drive to eliminate criminal records as a bar to enlistment or service in the armed forces. As a result the War Department has authorized Selective Service boards to exercise their judgment in selecting former prisoners, and many of them have been inducted into the service. However, those who have committed certain types of crimes, such as treason, murder, rape, arson, or who have been convicted on narcotics charges, are still barred.

In the Institute study approximately 1 person in every 16 (6 per cent) qualified his answer with the statement "it depends on the crime" or "for those who have committed minor offenses only."

Voters who are in favor of the proposal give the following chief reasons—that prisoners could pay their debt to society this way, redeem themselves and earn back their self-respect; that they could be of better use to the Nation by joining the Army than by lying idle in prison, a burden on the taxpayers; that the clean life and discipline of the armed forces would be better for them than civilian life on parole; and, finally, that they are tough and hard and would make good fighters.

Fears Expressed

People who are opposed to the plan told interviewers for the Institute that if these men are not fit for society they are not fit to associate with the boys in camp; that ex-convicts might play deserters or resort to treachery; that the Nation has enough free men to fight the war; and that, in any case, the armed forces want only first class men.

According to the Prison Association report to the New York State Legislature, inmates in many penitentiaries have given sincere evidence of their patriotism and desire to aid the war effort. At the Leavenworth Federal penitentiary, inmates have purchased $25,000 worth of defense bonds. Prisoners at the Nebraska State Penitentiary bought $2300 worth of defense bonds during the first three days after Pearl Harbor.

Aleutian Attack, Sub Menace Draw Blasts From Senators

By the Associated Press

Japanese incursions in the Aleutian Islands and continued Axis submarine depredations yesterday prompted suggestions in congressional quarters that some of the military equipment now being produced be diverted to defense of American shores.

Senator Ellender (Democrat) of Louisiana, a member of the Naval Affairs Committee, declared he was "sick and tired" of having such materials lost as were taken by the Nazis in the fall of Tobruk.

"I'm confident," he asserted, "that a lot of American people are wondering as I am why we should keep on sending our war materials and having a good deal of it captured.

Pepper Asks Sacrifices

"As a matter of fact much of it could have been used in defending our own country against the unpardonable submarine menace presently visiting our shores."

On the other hand, Senator Pepper (Democrat) of Florida, a member of the Foreign Relations Committee, contended no amount of submarine marauding should divert attention from what he termed the principal job of supplying Russia, China and Britain with equipment.

"Let's tighten our belts and step up the amount of materials that we give them," he urged. "No amount of marauding along our coasts is going to lose the war for us. But we might lose it in Russia, China and Britain if we do not make the utmost sacrifices and makes them now."

Called "Inescapable Incidents"

Senator Bone (Democrat) of Washington, of the Naval Affairs Committee, described enemy shelling of a section of the Oregon coast and of the west coast of Vancouver Island as "inescapable incidents of war."

Senator Ellender asserted that Britain had been waiting for many months for an invasion attempt that "never may be made," and suggested that "as few as 100,000 men could have been spared to help drive the Germans out of Libya."

"I wonder how long," he asked, "we will continue sending our war materials to England and feed her properly while she experiences such inactivity as her large standing army now evidences."

R. A. F. Returns To Pulverize Port of Emden

By William W. White

Copyright by New York Tribune, Inc.

London, June 23.—Several hundred heavy British bombers sped on the 600-mile round trip to Emden, Germany, for the seventy-seventh time last night, dropped several tons of bombs a minute for an hour and scurried home, in a devastating attack that required split-second timing because the shortest night of the year gave the R. A. F. precious little time in which to operate. It was the third raid on the northwest German port in the last four nights and by far the most destructive.

Although encountering some stiff German ground defenses and fighter opposition, the R. A. F. lost only six bombers, but the crew of one of them was later rescued from the North Sea.

The raiders, the first of which arrived over the target at 1:15 am., were heavily engaged by antiaircraft ships and by the port defenses. One Halifax bomber returned to its base with more than fifty holes punched in it by machine gun and cannon fire by Nazi night fighters.

The weather was favorable, with clear skies and a good "bomber's moon" overhead, the Air Ministry said.

Some British air correspondents believe that after last night's raid Emden must rank with Luebeck, Rostock and Cologne among the most heavily damaged towns in Germany. There have been 12 major attacks on the port this year and it is known that large areas, including the submarine construction yards, were gutted by a raid on June 6.

The fighter command kept up its end of the mid-June attacks today with a smashing sortie against the docks at Dunkerque. American-built Douglas Boston bombers, well escorted by Spitfires, hammered the docks and quaysides with good results. All the bombers and all the Spitfires returned safely.

Although there has been some recent and unofficial criticism of the value of these daylight fighter sweeps, air experts today steadfastly claimed they were serving a useful purpose, despite the fact they failed to "flush" many German fighters into skies. The sweeps, experts say, continue to immobilize 500 German fighter planes on the Western Front, and continued reconnassiance over the "invasion coast" has value as a source of military intelligence.

Nazis Shell Ramsgate

London, June 23 (AP).—The Berlin radio said today that Nazi naval guns yesterday shelled Ramsgate, on England's Channel Coast east of the narrow Dover Straits.

Roosevelt Tackles Shipping Problem

dealt with what numerous officials consider one of the more acute phases of the war situation.

American shipyards are working at top speed and turning out vessels in record time. Their production as yet, however, is lagging below the number of ships destroyed by Axis submarines operating off the Eastern Seaboard. To date, enemy subs have sunk nearly 300 vessels.

Patrol boats are being turned out in numbers, and only Monday it was announced that a convey system for coastwise shipping was established a month ago. Convoys have proved highly effective in protecting transatlantic shipping, and it was assumed that sufficient escort vessels for the coast-wise trade were just becoming available.

Ships Among First Necessities

The provision of ships to carry men and supplies is one of the first necessities in creating a second front in Europe, or striking with concentrated power at the enemy in any theater of war.

For the first time during Churchill's visit, the White House announced the names of those who participated in the conference. They included:

Harry L. Hopkins, the President's personal adviser; Rear Admiral Emory S. Land, head of the War Shipping Administration and co-chairman of the Anglo-American Shipping Board; Dr. Arthur Salter, British chairman of the board; Lewis W. Douglas, Deputy of War Shipping Administrator; Rear Admiral Howard L. Vickery, Maritime Commission Ship Construction Authority; Admiral Sir Charles Little, of the Anglo-American Combined Chiefs of Staff; Admiral J. W. Dorling, British Supply Representative; Admiral Ernest J. King, Commander in Chief of the United States Fleet, and Vice Admiral S. M. Robinson, Chief of the Navy's Office of Procurement and Materials.

Escaped 'Em Both

Tobruk Worse Than Dunkerque

By Harry Crockett

Associated Press Staff Writer

British Advance Headquarters, June 22 (Delayed).—A young army truck driver, one of the few soldiers to escape from Tobruk, disclosed today that the British commander there surrendered only when the town itself was overrun by Axis forces which shattered the outer defenses.

"It was worse than Dunkerque," Pvt. William George Downer of London said, adding that he had seen both.

The real assault on the eastern defenses of Tobruk started early Saturday, Downes said. He had driven out of Wadi Auda, northeast of the town, onto the Bardia Road but turned back about midday because the shelling became terrific and because he sighted German tanks. By that time, he said, shells were dropping everywhere; Stukas were dive-bombing and machine guns and rifles were crackling.

Boards Fleeing Ship

"I made for the docks and got there just as a shell blew up a building behind me," said Downes. "Some ships were leaving the harbor, and I got aboard a tug.

"We got two or three direct shell hits amidships and the oil tanks were ablaze. Then a shell hit the stern. I saw sailors jump overboard, so I followed them."

Downes told of the horror of that swim through the harbor, ablaze with oil. Wounded men were about him in the water—some presumably drowning.

He said his cries attracted attention aboard a mine sweeper which he believed to be South African, and he was picked up.

The mine sweeper was hit by one shell but got out to sea, with the fires of Tobruk still visible in the distance.

Sharp Tax Rise in Store For Canadians

By the Associated Press

Ottawa, June 23.—Finance Minister J. L. Ilsley tonight announced sharp general increases in Canada's income, service and commodity taxes to help meet new war budget estimates of $3,900,000,000 for the fiscal year beginning April 1—an increase of almost one billion dollars, or one-third, over last year's expenditures.

The new taxes will add about $377,850,000 to Canada's revenue during the year, Ilsley said, but this would still leave the income $1,850,000,000 short of the expenditures.

The increased income tax will be collected at the source and will raise an estimated 115 million dollars, or nearly one-third of the new revenue. Under the new law a married man with an income of $2000 a year and without children will be liable to a tax of $431 a year instead of $175, the present tax.

Of that amount, $231 will be the tax proper and $200 will be considered as compulsory minimum savings, to be refunded after the war at 2 per cent interest.

Excess profit taxes will be increased from 75 to 100 per cent, and additional taxes are added to present levies on tobacco, liquor, soft drinks, furs, transportation, telephones, chewing gum, jewelry, photographic supplies and other goods and services.

The Finance Minister's total estimates for war and normal expenditures this year were $3,570,000,000, including a billion-dollar gift to Great Britain, but he said these estimates were likely to be exceeded and asked that plans be made for expenditures of $3,900,000,000.

Last year expenditures were $1,894,966,000 plus $1,050,000,000 advanced to Britain for purchases of supplies in Canada.

During the last year Canada raised by taxation 50 per cent of her expenditures, or 78 per cent if the financing of British purchases in Canada are not included. Ilsley said income for the year was $1,481,285,000, leaving an all-over deficit of $413,681,000.

Sidelights of the War

U. S. Rushes Persian Gulf Port To Speed Supplies to Russia

Basra, Iraq, June 23 (AP).—Construction of a new Persian Gulf port to speed supplies to Russia is being pushed vigorously by American noncombatants on a site that previously was nothing but sand and swamp.

Hundreds of bombers, thousands of trucks and much other material have passed through the Persian Gulf to Soviet armies by means of the elaborate organization built up to insure their rapid transport.

The time required to turn about the ships which bring supplies has been reduced by half, according to well-informed sources.

American engineers are engaged in other important developments in the Persian Gulf area, and the British are completing various rail projects, including a link to connect Teheran, the Iran capital, with Tabriz in the north. This will complete an all-rail route from the Gulf to Batum, Caucasian oil center, Tiflis and Moscow.

At one base, American bombers which are ferried over the South Atlantic, then across Africa and Asia Minor in surprisingly few hops, are speedily put into shape for the Russians. Russian airmen then take them up on their last lap to the battle lines.

Bergdoll Wants to Serve

Copyright by New York Tribune Inc.

New York, June 23.—A Presidential pardon for Grover Cleveland Bergdoll, so that the World War draft dodger may serve in the air corps and "redeem himself," has been asked by Joseph C. Thomson, former state commander of the veterans of foreign wars, Thomson said today.

Thomson, who has forwarded Bergdoll's request to Attorney General Francis Biddle, said that his request for freedom from his 7½-year sentence for draft evasion was "not a trick to get his release. He means business with the Axis," said Thomson, "even though it causes his death."

Bergdoll was convicted in October, 1939, and began serving the sentence that month at the disciplinary barracks at Fort Leavenworth, Kans. Bergdoll is 48, the father of six children, all but two of them born in Germany.

Tricolors to Fight Allies

Vichy, Unoccupied France, June 23 (AP).—Blaring headlines in the collaborationist French press trumpeted today the formation of a Laval government-sponsored "Tricolor Legion" which "will fight Russian barbarism and also against American imperialism or Anglo-Saxon greed."

This new organization was described as an "enlarged, officialized legion of French volunteers" which will replace the original French unit recruited by Laval for service with the Germans on the eastern front.

Ottawa, Ont., June 23 (AP).—"A hard and difficult struggle" faces the United Nations, Queen Wilhelmina of the Netherlands said in a farewell message to Canada today as she prepared to leave for Lee, Mass., where her daughter, Princess Juliana, and her granddaughters, the Princesses Beatrix and Irene, will spend most of the summer.

40,000 French Die

London, June 23 (AP).—Free French authorities said today that 40,000 children died on the roads of France in June, 1940, in the headlong flight of refugees before the invading German army.

These figures, the Free French said, were given by the French Red Cross Society to an assembly held at Nice in unoccupied France.

Mrs. Roosevelt To Miss Seeing Yugoslav King

Both cabbages and kings came up for discussion yesterday at Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt's press conference, where the First Lady declared the White House always provided more room for a King than for any other type of visitor—and that the cost of fresh vegetables in Washington is always exceedingly high.

"Washington is one of the worst markets in the United States and I never have been able to find out why, although I have tried," Mrs. Roosevelt said shortly after she announced she would not be on hand this afternoon to greet King Peter of Yugoslavia when he arrives for an overnight visit at the Executive Mansion.

No Thrill to a King

She will be in New York delivering a lecture, but she does not think the boy monarch will mind. "He's so young I can't believe he would get any thrill out of meeting an old lady like me," she smiled.

A queen, a new cook at the White House, and stabilization of wages also were talked about at the conference, where subjects taken up nearly always total a dozen.

Mrs. Roosevelt said she had nothing she could announce about the proposed visit of Queen Wilhelmina of The Netherlands and that she did not know yet whether the queen would go to Hyde Park or come to the White House.

Employs Mother's Cook

The new cook is Mary Campbell, who cooked for the President's mother for several years and now is a member of the White House staff. She often cooks special dishes for President Roosevelt and prepares meals for his small parties, Mrs. Roosevelt said.

Although the First Lady declared she is in favor of wage stabilization, she said she definitely believed stabilization of the cost of living had to be made at the same time. In considering either, she said, she always considers stabilization of farm prices, too.

"Unless they all are frozen together, the stabilization of neither is fair," she declared.

Agencies Aid Russian Relief

In order that the Watergate Festival on Tuesday, June 30, for the benefit of Russian War Relief may be assured of successful many Government departments, through their executive heads, have offered cooperation and help in the disposal of tickets, the committee reported yesterday. The current Russian war relief drive has set a Washington quota of $100,000, Mrs. Cornelia Bryce Pinchot, chairman of the program committee, announced.

Among many letters offering encouragement and aid received at Russian War Relief headquarters, 1218 Connecticut Avenue, are those from Secretary of the Navy Frank Knox and Secretary of the Treasury Henry Morgenthau, jr. Secretary Knox stated that the Navy Department "will strive to the utmost to help in this most humane undertaking. All personnel of the Navy Department, headquarters, Marine Corps and the Coast Guard will be notified of the coming anniversary rally for Russian War Relief at the Watergate on June 30 at 8 p. m.," Colonel Knox wrote in a letter to Mrs. J. Borden Harriman, chairman of the Washington Chapter of Russian War Relief.

Secretary Morgenthau was reported to have requested 20,000 announcements and 400 Watergate posters for the Treasury Department. The War Department was reported to have planted distribution of 6000 announcements. The Department of Agriculture designated a representative to receive contributions. The National Housing Agency asked for 600 announcements and constitutent agencies have been delegated to receive donations and attend to the sale of tickets to the Watergate Festival.

The program for the festival will feature a Russian balalaika orchestra of 50 pieces, Russian dancers in native costume, talks by William J. Batt, Maj. George Fielding Eliot and a mass chant with music written by Harold J. Rome. Melvyn Douglas will act as master of ceremonies and narrator for the mass chant.

Military Committee Assails Reckless Spending, Bureaucracy

the war effort. Representative Paul J. Kilday (Democrat) of Texas pointed out, however, that the chairmen of two of the subcommittees, Mr. Thomason and Representative Dow Harter (Democrat) of Ohio, had dissented from the full committee report.

The report criticized virtually every branch of the War Department, including the Air Corps, and likewise voiced displeasure with the Maritime Commission. Secretary of Commerce Jones, however, was commended for "pushing the synthetic rubber program."

Air Corps Assailed

The committee urged that an immediate curb be placed on contracts awarded on a cost-plus-a-fixed-fee basis, asserting:

"This type of contract . . . permitted excessive personnel, exorbitant salaries and led to the refusal on the part of contractors to sublet specialty contracts . . . when they were totally unprepared either to plan or execute them . . . Evidence of reckless expenditures . . . under fixed-fee contracts, particularly in the Air Corps branch, continues to increase in committee files."

While it is true that "the paramount consideration of every American is the winning of the war," the committee continued, "and while it is true that victory must be achieved regardless of the cost, this does not mean that there is a 'go ahead' signal for the spending of American dollars with abandon."

The committee asserted that "reckless abandon in the expenditure of taxpayers' money upon the ground of expediency must yield to judgment and reason" and "must cease to be a habit."

Outmoded Methods Used

Criticizing what it said was a tendency on the part of the administration to create new boards, bureaus and commissions, the committee commended that "whenever a new or varied problem is presented, a new commission, board, committee or agency is usually created."

Blaming the administration, the Congress and the public generally for the shortage of some materials now needed, the committee said "too much emphasis" had been placed "on social reforms rather than national security and our experts in industries and government have been far too complacent in allowing us in the past to have no fear of a shortage if war should come."

It added:

"We have persisted in using outmoded methods of purchasing while the Axis powers were adopting a realistic approach."

"Citizens of this country," the report warned, "cannot be expected to be faced interminably with indifference in spending on the part of the officials of their Government after the period of initial necessity has passed, and continue buying bonds with enthusiasm, overlooking the extension of bureaucratic domination and suffering deprivations with a complacent attitude."

Turning to the individual departments, the committee said of the Air Corps:

"The Air Corps overlooked many opportunities to have much more efficient and modern planes prior to the outbreak of war" in Europe in 1939. "We developed the dive-bomber . . . yet we had none. We are just getting them now. We pioneered in self-sealing gas tanks, but abandoned them and the Germans demonstrated how necessary they are."

The Maritime Commission, the report declared, "has failed to provide adequately for the movement of strategic raw materials by use of the tonnage actually or potentially under its control."

Overall, the committee said that it had uncovered evidence disclosing "a sordid picture of excessive commissions by brokers, profits by vendors, exorbitant salaries, bonuses and huge fees for management and related services in many War Department contracts."

The Government has a responsibility, committeemen said, to "eliminate exorbitant profits not after the war is over but during the period the war is being prosecuted."

A note of cheer was sounded in a section dealing with aviation. After relating how American-made planes had proved their ability in actual combat, the committee said production of planes was "progressing satisfactorily" and the production schedules, "rigorous as they are for this year and next, will be met and fulfilled by American ingenuity and industry."

Ship Operators Assailed

The Maritime Commission and British and American ship operators were assailed for having demonstrated "a lack of appreciation . . . of the urgent need for the accumulation of stockpiles of strategic raw materials."

"More effective methods of control of shipping by the Maritime Commission or other Government agencies were not considered necessary until far too late a date," the committee said. "The Maritime Commission has failed to provide adequately for the movement of strategic raw materials by use of the tonnage actually or potentially under its control.

"The attitude of the Straits-New York shipping conference, as well as that of the British lines engaged in this trade, in preventing or delaying the use of nonconference tonnage available to move rubber" from the Far East in February of this year "cannot be too strongly condemned."

The committee said efforts of these ship-owners to retain control of the rubber traffic "unquestionably added to the shipping difficulties and reduced the amount of rubber actually delivered to this country."

The report said "an outstanding need" of the War Department was "an adequate, currently maintained cost accounting and audit system, the Government having a responsibility to "eliminate exorbitant profits not after the war is over but during the period the war is being prosecuted."

Skipper of Ship Sunk Off New York

Associated Press WIREPHOTO

LUIS P. SCALESE,

captain of the Argentine freighter Rio Tercero, sunk 120 miles out of New York, is shown there yesterday after being rescued along with 35 of his crew. His ship was a neutral vessel

Innsbruck.

As Gache spoke, strong police reinforcements were thrown about the German Embassy and patrolmen were assigned to guard German business houses in Buenos Aires.

All of these developments posed a grave problem for acting President Ramon Castillo's policy of "prudent neutrality." There was an immediate demand in Congress for a revision of the neutrality policy.

The Marine Ministry's announcement of the tragedy came at a time when the resignation of ailing President Roberta Ortiz was expected momentarily—a move that would stregthen greatly the political position of Castillo, chief architect of the policy that has kept Argentina one of two American nations maintaining relations with the Axis. Cili is the other.

Informed sources said tonight Ortiz was planning to address a message to the nation warning that "the destiny of Argentina is indissolubly bound to that of the democracies" when he submits his resignation.

Argentina's Third Casualty

Last week Germany expressed "profound regret" over the torpedoing of the Argentine tanker Victoria, explaining it was a mistake. The Rio Tercero was Argentina's third maritime casualty.

On one hand the government cannot accept the U-Boat blockade without waiving its neutrality in favor of the Axis. This would be virtual economic suicide because Argentina's imports of oil and vital materials from the United States are about all that keep the Nation's economic pulse beating.

On the other hand, the government was faced with the choice of accepting convoy protection, which thus far has been resisted as a breach in neutrality.

Navy Reveals 13 More Ships Sunk by Subs

by a German submarine. Thirty-six survivors were taken to New York and five were missing.

It had not been clear at first whether the Argentine ship was the victim of a U-boat attack or had hit a mine. Secretary of State Hull said here today that the attack was made in broad daylight. These factors are expected to raise new problems between neutral Argentine and Germany which only last week apologized for torpedoing another Argentine ship.

42 Sinkings in Caribbean

All told, 42 United Nations merchantmen have been announced as sunk in the Caribbean during the last month, an eight-fold increase over the prior 30-day period, when but five were listed as lost in this area.

The large number of Caribbean attacks marked a shift of enemy U-boats from our East Coast waters. During the past month, the Navy has started running freighters through these coastal lanes in convoys protected by warships. Only two ships have been definitely listed as torpedoed in these waters during this time although others have hit mines sown by submarines.

The ship announced as sunk yesterday in the Atlantic, was torpedoed June 15, 75 miles off the coast and went down within three minutes with a heavy loss of life.

Three United States Soldiers Lost

Eighty-five persons aboard are listed as missing, three American soldiers are known to be dead and 81 persons were rescued in the disaster. It may be one of the heaviest ship casualty lists of the war.

The craft was identified as a medium-sized American merchant ship. Those lost in the Caribbean were announced as being three small and two medium-sized United States vessels, one small and four medium-sized British craft, a small Honduran, a small Norwegian and a small Dutch ship.

Two of them, those previously announced in Bogota and Mexico City, were the medium-sized United States ship Lahore and the small Dutch vessel Crijnssen.

U-Boat Surfaces

All of the 12 craft sunk in the Caribbean were sent to the bottom by torpedoes or shellfire from Axis submarines. Survivors from one of the ships said that the U-boat which accounted for them surfaced while they were abandoning the vessel.

Its red-whiskered commander came on deck wearing bathing trunks and carpet slippers, they said, and said, in good English: "I'm sorry, but this is war. While he was talking, a photographer took pictures of the sinking ship and another crewman kept a machine gun pointed at the lifeboat.

The Associated Press reported that many of the survivors expressed eagerness to go to sea again. Mrs. Edna T. Johansson, 48, of New Orleans, stewardess aboard an American passenger-cargo ship that was torpedoed, was quoted as saying:

"Well, they don't scare me. And with all these boys of ours taking ships out—we've got to stick together. I hope Ill never have to be afraid. If I was a man I'd go after them (the Germans) and I don't mean maybe."

House Votes Biggest Fund To Beat Axis

Corps. This included provision for 23,550 planes, which will complete the Army's quota of the 185,000 airplane objective set by the President for 1942-1943. Of the total, the Army will have command of about 148,000 of the planes. The committee was assured the goal would be met.

Next largest appropriation was $10,739,559,242 for pay, subsistence, clothing, medical care and welfare of Army personnel, revised upward to conform with recent authorizations for pay increases and allowances for dependents of enlisted men.

Lieut. Gen. B. B. Somervell, commanding general of the Army services of supply, told the subcommittee that all estimates of current operation and housing were based on an enlisted strength of "over 4,500,000" by June 30, 1943. He said it was planned to start the fiscal year at an enlisted strength of 2,800,000.

Other items in the big Army appropriation:

Ordnance, $9,948,319,237.

Transportation, including equipment, $3,721,092,958.

Signal corps, $2,617,806,025.

Construction and maintenance of establishments, $2,445,945,000.

Engineer corps, $874,132,192.

Chemical warfare, $820,546,841.

Seacoast defense, $97,249,641.

Training and education, $44,097,840.

Miscellaneous supplies, equipment and services, $158,403,730.

Miscellaneous, including administrative expenses, $229,967,951.

Civil components, $5,684,000.

Lend-Lease Supplies

Out of total appropriations for the Army, $12,709,000,000 would be set aside for lend-lease supplies to the United Nations, raising to $62,944,650,000 the value of lend-lease aid available.

Hearings were carefully censored of information of value to the enemy, and Chairman Snyder told the House that "little may be said concerning the details of the estimates."

Concerning the war production picture generally, Snyder reported "every phase is in mesh, which is most encouraging."

The committee called the rubber situation "disturbing" and urged that the American people be emphatically told "that it is vitally important, if the boys at the front are to carry on, for them to desist immediately from using their automobiles for any other than most essential purposes. Conservation of rubber in that way may have a very important influence on hastening the day of victory."

Maj. Gen. McNarney assured the committee that the Army is being raised and trained "in the most expeditious and efficient manner," but he said there is "one error which we must avoid at all costs, and this is the error of underestimating the task ahead of us."

He testified that at the very outbreak of the war it was realized that American forces would have to be prepared to fight in practically every part of the world.

"Let me emphasize that the Army's every effort is being directed to making our power felt by offensive action in consonance with the accepted basic strategy of the United Nations," he concluded.

War Building Will Cost 14 Millions More

By the Associated Press

Major General Eugene Reybold, Chief of Army Engineers, reported to Congress that original appropriations of $35,000,000 for the new War Department building in Arlington, Va., would be around $14,000,000 or $18,000,000 short of requirements to finish the job.

The building will be completed on schedule November 15, he reported in testimony on the Department Supply Bill for 1943, made public yesterday, though a small amount of landscaping must wait the appropriate planting season.

The increase in cost was attributed to changes in original plans both as to size and speed of completion, as well as the charge in location.

A million square feet of office space is already available, and an additional half million will soon become available, he said. The capacity of the completed building will be about four million square feet, of which 2,600,000 will be office space, 850,000 storage space, and the remainder for "other useful purposes."

Funds already available to the department for expediting construction will be used to complete the building, he explained, so that it will not be necessary to ask Congress for additional funds.

The Russians claimed that the Germans and Rumanians who drove wedges into the north and south defense lines had been stopped, and that the foe never reached the depth of the fortifications despite a vast superiority in men and material.

The Russians described the battlefield as a ghastly spectacle, quaking under shells and bombs falling amid lilacs and popies such as bloomed on Flanders Fields in the last war. By night, fitful flashes of rockets, flares, tracer bullets and searchlights illuminated the skies.

The Black Sea fleet of an old battleship, Russia's lone aircraft carrier, and numerous cruisers and destroyers sailed out into the Sea after striking a blow in support of its base. But the fleet's air force stayed in the fight, although the airdromes on land were under constant artillery and aerial bombardment. The Red fliers faced enormous numerical superiority, but repeatedly engaged German planes and attacked tanks and ground troops.

Nazis Bring Up Fresh Reserves

The Germans admittedly were adding to the violence of their attacks with fresh reserves to replace their losses reported to exceed more than 100,000 in dead alone. Dispatches said most attacks were repulsed.

The Germans claimed deeper gains in Sevastopol's fortifications and said a landing attempt on the north coast of the Sea of Azov was repulsed. "Numerous bunkers have been smashed in bitter hand-to-hand fighting under the most difficult terrain conditions," a communique said.

Some German forces were admitted to have pounded past the front rim of fortifications forcing Russian units to withdraw, but the Russians said a violent two-day battle checked the advance.

The Russian communique stated again that "no significant changes took place at the front" Monday night and detailed more than 1,950 Germans killed in the Orel, western (central) and northwestern fronts.

"The Baltic fleet air arm steadily is gaining mastery in the air," the communique said, referring to the Leningrad area. Ten ships were said to have been destroyed or damaged recently.

tions would be unnecessary when such deliveries are based on actual coupon sales, while others foresee the possibility of a price war unless some allocation system is developed.

Beautiful Snoopers Hired?

Meanwhile, Representative Johnson (Democrat) of Oklahoma charged yesterday that Price Czar Henderson has hired "50 beautiful girl snoopers" to check on compliance with gas-rationing regulations.

The girls, said Johnson, combine their beauty with a hard-luck story in attempting to get station attendants to sell them an extra gallon of gasoline. If the attendant yields, the beauty reports him, the legislator charged.

Reporting that 14 Eastern operators had been arrested and their filling stations closed for 90 days for rationing violations, Johnson, addressing an Oklahoma delegation luncheon, called Henderson "the most dangerous man in public life today."

Henderson was out of the city yesterday, but his friends recalled that Johnson, a member of the House Appropriations Committee, recently threatened to oppose the price chief's request for $163,000,000 for OPA personnel unless oil prices were raised.

Henderson Called "Mistake"

Johnson called Henderson a "mistake." He said the price administrator's only commendable action was his recent offer to resign if his services are found to be no longer useful.

"I have reason to believe his resignation would not be objectionable to the White House," Johnson said.

Army Weighing Building of Rail Line to Alaska

The Army disclosed yesterday that it was considering construction of a railroad linking Alaska with the United States.

Approval by the House Appropriations Committee of the 1943 Army supply bill covered an allotment for the Engineers Corps to survey the project as a method of getting supplies to Alaska swiftly.

In testimony, Brig. Gen. C. L. Sturdevant of the Corps of Engineers, told the committee that the Army expected to have "some sort" of a highway to Alaska "available for use this coming winter."

Lieutenant General Somervell, commander of the Army's service of supplies, said: "We have four methods—we hope to have four methods—of getting into Alaska." "One will be by sea, one will be by air, one will be road, and one may be by railroad.

U. S. Planes Bombed Sub That Sank Argentine Ship

An East Coast port, June 23 (AP).—The Argentine freighter Rio Tercero was sunk Monday with the loss of five lives, but before the attacking U-boat could submerge it was bombed by American planes, a survivor said today.

Dr. Francisco Aranbarri, the only passenger aboard, said the Nazi submarine Innsbruck hit the ship less than 24 hours after it left New York City.

"The torpedo struck without any warning at 6:45 a. m.," he declared. The ship sank rapidly.

"While the submarine was half submerged American planes appeared and one of them dropped three bombs. A second plane dropped four bombs very rapidly. The submarine disappeared but we could not tell whether it had been hit or not. Not long afterward a blimp appeared and food was dropped to us."

Dr. Aranbarri said there could be no question as to the identity of the Rio Tercero as five Argentine flags were painted on each side.

serves unless employed in the business, or for purchase of securities.

A similar plan offered by Representative Cooper (Democrat), of Tennessee, had Treasury support, but that was rejected last week when the committee split sharply on the form of post-war relief.

Meanwhile, Senator George (Democrat) of Georgia, chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, had had served notice that he would submit to his group a plan for induced savings and post-war credits for both individuals and corporations.

Still Short of Goal

The Ways and Means Committee, its bill complete except for a few finishing touches, meanwhile planned final action today. Individual, corporate and excise taxes in the bill were estimated to yield about $6,600,000,000 still more than two billion dollars short of the $8,700,000,000 new revenue sought by the Treasury.

Cleaning up "loose ends" before final action today, the committee yesterday:

Voted to include contract carriers as well as common carriers under the proposed 5 per cent tax on freight and express transportation.

Excluded cash registers used in retail over-the-counter sales from the existing 10 per cent manufacturers' excise on business machines.

Voted to give some corporations having fiscal year periods which differ from the calendar year an opportunity to divide their returns between the income earned in 1941 and 1942.

Postponed action on a proposal to permit taxpayers to deduct life insurance premiums in computing net income subject to individual taxes and rejected a relief provision for debtor corporations.

President Signs District Income Tax Amendment

President Roosevelt yesterday signed into law an amendment to the District income tax law which exempts out-of-town businesses from paying an income tax here if their deals are consumated outside the city.

The amendment is expected to decrease local revenues by about $185,000 according to District officials.

The bill provides that firms need pay the the levy only if they maintain a headquarters here or actually complete their business transactions within the city. Heretofore any concern doing business here was liable to the tax.

General Liu Yueh-ting, a divisional commander, despite wounds, led the charge, was wounded a second time and finally captured. The Chinese said they killed between 400 and 500 Japanese.

The communique said the Chinese, who previously were reported defending a mountain pass with rocks, grenades and machine guns against a foe armed with artillery and planes, were continuing the battle.

Fear Threats by Sea

The spokesman said Japan's "master plan" was to try to link Shanghai and Singapore by rail line through China, Indo-China, Thailand and Malaya.

In view of their recent naval losses, he said, the Japanese know that sea-borne communication with their newly won south Asia possessions may soon be threatened.

On the Yunnan front above the Burma Road, the high command accused the Japanese of committing large-scale brutalities, including the killing of 1000 able-bodied Chisese youths and plundering and raping.

General Cox Heads Salvation Army Board

Brig. Gen. Albert E. Cox has been elected chairman of the citizens advisory board of the Salvation Army, it was announced by Maj. James A. Longino, National Capital divisional commander. General Cox, formerly vice chairman of the board, succeeds Victor B. Deyber. Formal installation of Cox and his new slate will be held in July.

Other new members elected were: Bruce R. Allen, William B. Rumple, Clarke Diamond and Spencer Gordon. Charles Smoot, jr., will take active duty on the board as soon as his present position as secretary of the Junior Board of Commerce expires.

Rubber Situation 'Dangerous,' Governors Parley Told

High Officials Of Government Are Speakers

By A. F. Littlejohn
Associated Press Staff Writer

Asheville, N. C., June 23.—High Government officials described the Nation's rubber situation as dangerous in question-and-answer talks before the National Governors Conference here today.

Robert P. Patterson, Assistant Secretary of War, outlining the needs of the country's armed forces and of its allies, told how much rubber they required.

"How we're going to get that rubber for the Army, I don't know," he admitted to the assemmled chief executives of 35 States. He told them that the Army had substituted metal treads on its tanks for rubber, reducing the speed and making the machines more uncomfortable for their occupants, in its effort to aid in the conservation program. Also, he said orders for trucks have been reduced.

Donald Nelson, head of the War Production Board, and Leon Henderson, price administrator, discussed the rubber situation in detail, including the present campaign to salvage scrap rubber, but their remarks were off the record.

Other Phases of War Discussed

Other phases of the war were discussed by Ralph A. Bard, Undersecretary of the Navy; Paul McNutt, chairman of the War Manpower Commission; James M. Landis director of Civilian Defense; Joseph B. Eastman, director of Defense Transportation, and Wayne Taylor, Undersecretary of the Department of Commerce, who represented Jesse F. Jones.

Bard told the Governors that the Navy had convoyed thousands of American soldiers to Australia and Ireland without the loss of a man.

Because of its widespread convoy activities, he said, it had been impossible to concentrate as adequately as desired on the submarine problem, but he revealed that many new antisubmarine craft had been delivered recently and would be put into service as rapidly as crews could be trained. He told the Governors also that convoy operations would be extended to combat the undersea menace.

Eastman, referring to the recent request of his office that fairs and nonessential conventions and meetings be eliminated because of the transport problem, told the convention it might be necessary to take further steps if voluntary response to the appeal was insufficient.

He and Taylor both urged the Governor to use their influence to eliminate as far as possible the barriers to interstate motor transport caused by conflicting State requirements applying to motor trucks.

Trucks Still Being Stopped

Taylor said a recent agreement made by the executive committee of the Governors' conference for the elimination of such barriers had not worked out as well as hoped.

"Trucks are still being stopped. Reciprocity has failed to materialize," he said.

Landis commented that the States were slow in adopting legislation giving their Governors adequate powers to meet the wartime problems.

McNutt said serious consideration was being given to the prospective shortage of farm labor for the coming harvest. However, he added, his commission believes it will be able to handle the situation if given the necessary funds by Congress.

He described the general registration of women for war work as undesirable at this time because, he said, if all were required to register and then many were not called, their morale would be adversely affected.

Patterson told the Governors that arrangements were being made to enable service men to vote in the coming elections. They will write directly to the Secretary of State of their respective home States for information as to procedure, he said.

Housewives To Take Field In OPA Drive

Opening guns in a more aggressive local price control campaign will be fired on July 8, when 700 housewives will deliver OPA pamphlets and instructions on ceiling prices to some 7000 District merchants.

This is a part of a program planned for the entire Eastern strategic seaboard, where storekeepers in 232 cities of New York, Pennsylvania, New Jersey, Maryland and the District will receive such visits.

The object of the visit is to acquaint the dealers, as well as the housewives, with the approved methods of announcing and keeping before the public the ceiling prices.

The Defense Council, a civilian mobilization unit, is managing the local campaign through its Consumers' Interest branch. The volunteers will be furnished by Mrs. Harry S. Rernton's volunteer bureau, which reported yesterday that it had from 900 to 1000 names from which the 700 will be selected.

An instructional course will be given by Miss Ethel Glacel, of the OPA second region headquarters in New York. At this meeting, to be held Monday, July 6, from 10 to 12 a. m., in the Departmental Auditorium, Constitution Avenue, between Thirteenth and Fourteenth Streets, the OPA kits to be handed the merchants will be distributed to the volunteers.

Each housewife will visit 10 merchants, spending about 15 or 20 minutes with each one, explaining the OPA program. Besides the illustrated pamphlets and set of rules, the merchants will be given the name of the local OPA administrator, who for Washington is Whitney Leary, with offices at 3801 Connecticut Avenue Northwest.

furniture and household goods, floor waxing and sanding, piano tuning and every conceivable repair item, including clocks, watches, corsets, cameras, hosiery, farm machinery.

Two Classes Excluded

Two classes of services are excluded from the price regulation. They are:

1. Services to industrial or commercial users, such as factory boiler repairs, storage of commercial goods, laundry services to hospitals, hotels and restaurants and repair of commercial vehicles. These services are covered under the general maximum price regulation issued by OPA April 28, one day after President Roosevelt laid his seven-point inflation-control program before Congress.

2. Services exempted from regulation by the Price Control Act. These exemptions cover wages, common carrier and public utility rates, commissions on insurance sales, newspaper, periodical and radio advertising rates, theater admissions, outdoor advertising rates and charges made for medical or other professional services.

Ambulances Excluded

Under general classification of excluded services, OPA has listed many services specifically. The list includes services of persons engaged in publishing, printing, typesetting, platemaking and binding. Services which clearly are not rendered in connection with a commodity, such as ambulance, barber and beauty shop services, also are excluded.

For Washingtonians, the new regulations will mean, among other things, lower charges for laundry and dry cleaning, in at least a few establishments. Generally speaking, particularly among laundries, many of these businesses have not increased their charges since March.

Spokesmen for the automotive trade and cleaners and dyers associations complained that the new ceilings might limit the ability of the industries "to meet rising wage levels in other industries."

"Unless OPA ceilings are revised from time to time, to compensate for increases in skilled labor rates, the service industries may be driven to the wall," one spokesman said.

Henderson's order transferred all consumer services connected with commodities from the general maximum price regulation and placed them under a separate ceiling with special provisions to meet special price-control problems involved. The separation completes Henderson's over-all price-ceiling program.

While the regulation affects some wholesale services—for example, dry-cleaning services performed for a tailor shop—its principal direct application is to services sold at retail. For this reason, emphasized Henderson, the order "is of direct and vital interest to every family and the budget of every family."

Henderson Asks Cooperation

"Those who render these consumer services have an important wartime duty," the price chief declared. "They are asked as a matter of duty to abide by rules laid down by their Government for the common good."

As in the general regulation, the service industry order places every unit of the industry under automatic license. It also would permit sellers of seasonal services—rental of beach equipment, for instance—to determine maximum prices by (a) taking the highest price charged in the 1941 season, and (b) adding an amount arrived at by multiplying that price by the percentage increase in the cost of living between last season and March.

Members of the industry who can demonstrate "substantial" hardship because their top prices for March do not reflect cost increases of which higher wage rates might be a factor, between February 1 and April 27, are promised "prompt adjustment upward."

It would be possible, OPA pointed out, for each seller in a branch of the industry to have a different price for an identical service after July 1 simply because the March prices were not identical.

Under the order, each service establishment is considered an "individual seller" although the establishment may be one of a group under common (chain) ownership. For this reason, it would be possible for ceiling prices to vary in stores of the same chain.

Violators of the regulation not only face license revocation, but penalties up to $5000 fine and a year in jail.

Million-Dollar War Bond Breakfast Planned

Birmingham, Ala., June 23 (AP).—Birmingham, steel center of the South, will have its most expensive breakfast in history July 1—a one million dollar affair in which every person attending is pledged to buy at least $1000 worth of defense bonds.

Lewis F. Jeffers, breakfast committee chairman, said today that more than 200 persons already have accepted invitations, eight of whom promised to purchase at least $50,000 worth of bonds each. He said the total now pledged exceeded $600,000.

Here's How Service Industry Price Freeze Affects You

The Office of Price Administration yesterday anticipated some of the questions certain to arise under its new price ceiling regulations to go into effect July 1 on all consumer services. Some of the questions, together with answers, follow:

Q. What are examples of consumer services?

A. Laundry, dry-cleaning and shoe repairs are some of the most common services performed for consumers. Others are the lubrication or repair of a private passenger car, the developing and printing of amateur films, the repair and servicing of home radio sets and electrical appliances, and the sharpening of household knives and scissors.

Q. Is the charge made by a parking lot covered by the regulations?

A. Yes, an automobile is a commodity and the storage of a commodity is therefore under the price ceiling.

Q. What are the maximum prices on consumer services?

A. The highest prices which the supplier of the service charged in March, 1942.

Q. Are prices on services standardized by this regulation?

A. No, the regulation simply places a ceiling for each establishment at the highest price it charged for a service in March, 1942. But ceiling prices will vary from shop to shop just as uncontrolled prices varied in March.

Q. If a dry cleaner charged 59 cents to clean and press a man's suit all through March, is that the highest price he may charge under regulation?

A. Yes, 59 cents is the highest price which this dry cleaner may charge. But another dry cleaner who charged 75 cents for the same type of cleaning in March will have a ceiling price of 75 cents.

Q. Some members of chain store shoe-repair shops during March made a special rate of 75 cents for half-soling men's shoes. Other members of the chain held to the customary price of $1. What is the ceiling price in these establishments?

A. The ceiling price has nothing to do with the ownership of the store or service business. The ceiling price is determined for each separate establishment on the basis of the highest price which it charged for a service supplied during March. For any store which cut the price to 75 cents during the entire month, the celing price is 75 cents. For those which sold as high as $1, the ceiling is $1.

Q. Does the consumer service price regulation put a ceiling on charges for such personal services as haircuts and manicures?

A. No, the definition of "service" in the consumer service price regulation is limited to those rendered in connection with a commodity.

Q. What control is there over the price if the service establishment did not charge a flat price for a consumer service? If a garage (for example) charged $2 an hour in March for work by a mechanic and this charge included profit, overhead and the use of tools, as well as labor, the garage may not charge above $2 an hour after July 1?

A. That is right.

Q. Under what circumstances may the seller of a consumer service apply for relief?

A. If a substantial hardship results from either of two circumstances (1) if the seller's price was abnormally low in relation to the prices of his competitors and other sellers in the vicinity; or (2) if the seller's costs increased between February 1 and April 27, 1942—the 90-day period before the announcement of the universal price ceiling.

Q. What are the provisions about licenses?

A. Every person selling a consumer service is automatically licensed under this regulation, and every new seller automatically is licensed. There is no certificate or other actual license, but the seller is licensed nevertheless.

Q. Must a service establishment post any ceiling prices in a manner similar to the "cost-of-living" posting rules of the General Maximum Price Regulation?

A. No, the regulation does not require any service establishment to display a list of the ceiling prices.

Q. But does not the consumer service establishment have to make some list or report of its ceiling prices?

A. Yes, every person supplying a consumer service over which this regulation sets a price ceiling must prepare by September 1 a complete list of the highest prices he charged for all services he supplied during March for which prices were regularly quoted in that month. This report must also show any pricing method regularly used in March, and all customary allowances and discounts.

Q. Is this list open to inspection?

A. Yes, on and after September 1, 1942, it must be available to anyone during business hours. A copy must be filed with the local War Price and Rationing Board by September 10.

Truman Threatens Sponge Iron Probe

Senator Plans to Quiz WPB on Process; Monopoly Blocks It, O'Mahoney Asserts

By Edward Ryan
Post Staff Writer

Commercial production of sponge iron to help meet the nation's war demand for steel was urged by Senator O'Mahoney (Democrat), Wyoming, yesterday, while Senator Truman (Democrat), Missouri, announced that he intends to investigate why the process has been held up by the War Production Board.

Senator O'Mahoney advanced his proposals for commercial sponge iron production to a Senate Agriculture subcommittee which is investigating possible synthetic rubber production. The committee invited his testimony, it was said, after being told that steel shortages would hinder development of synthetic rubber plants.

Scrap Substitute

Sponge iron, Senator O'Mahoney explained, provides a substitute for scrap steel in the production of high grade steel. He cited a letter from R. R. Sayers, director of the United States Bureau of Mines, as evidence that the sponge iron process is commercially practical.

Senator Truman told the subcommittee that he had received "plenty of evidence" that the sponge-iron process is being suppressed in the War Production Board, and he said that his committee, investigating national defense, will hold public hearings on this question within two or three weeks.

Mr. Truman said there is danger of the same failure to make adequate provision for steel as was the case with aluminum and copper and charged that dollar-a-year men representing the big steel companies in the WPB have blocked the sponge-iron process in order to protect monopolies.

A spokesman for the War Production Board materials section said last night that while no formal statement was available, one could be expected in the near future when their sponge-iron expert returns from an out-of-town trip.

He said, however, that with WPB approval a "pilot plant" for producing sponge iron had been started, where a local combination of special type ore and plentiful supplies of natural gas for fuel made the process appear workable. Declaring that the process is "nothing new," he said that some of the large steel companies had spent sizable amounts to try making the sponge iron process work commercially.

It worked fine in the laboratory, said the WPB official, but it had not worked out in commercial production.

This was in line with the statement of William L. Batt, WPB materials director, which Senator O'Mahoney placed in the committee's record, saying that "all the sponge iron processes were reviewed by our people recently, but all save one were discarded as impossibilities."

In the one case, said Batt, "no great hopes are entertained . . . and it is being tried to make sure we are exhausting all possibilities."

Show "Promise"

Director Sayers, of the Bureau of Mines, said, however, that several processes "show promise of commercial success."

He said the technical feasibility of the process had been proved by bureau tests, and said commercial sponge iron plants should be installed with a minimum of delay to make up for an approaching shortage of scrap.

Senator O'Mahoney said that the iron obtained from the sponge iron process is suitable for making the highest grade steel, and that the process would permit tapping every undeveloped iron deposit in the country.

State Tax on War Material 'Raid' on U. S.

Lieutenant General B. B. Somervell, in charge of the Army Services of supplies, described State taxation on Federal war material purchased as "just a raid on the Federal Treasury by the States, which is absolutely unconstitutional."

In testimony made public yesterday by the committee, he maintained that if Congress feels that the States should be subsidized, let them be subsidized by putting it on the basis of legislation, rather than leaving it to the States themselves."

Pending before the House Ways and Means Committee is a bill which would exempt such purchases from State and local taxes. Its sponsors maintain that it would save the Federal Government close to two million years.

"Of course we do not want any subsidy from the Federal Government," said Representative Starnes (Democrat) of Alabama, "at the same time, we do not want the Federal Government to step in and tell us that we cannot exercise our constitutional and God-given rights."

Army plans to use giant transports for mass air evacuation of soldiers critically wounded on the battlefield were disclosed by Col. David N. W. Grant, Army flight surgeon.

The "flying hospitals would be used in evacuating those wounded whose lives might be saved if they could be transported to a hospital for definite treatment within 24 to 48 hours," he said in testimony made public by the committee.

Grant reported that the Germans, in utilizing the system, have already evacuated over 200,000 of their wounded by air.

Expanding use of the Nation's civilian pilots—the aviators who flew for fun in days of peace—in border and coastal patrols was described as a possibility by Lieut. Gen. H. H. Arnold, commander of the Army Air Forces.

He told the committee that the civilian units, using small planes, already had proved effective in "certain types" of submarine patrol work.

In addition to that," he said, "there are certain other duties we may use them for. For instance, we can see that they may possibly be used in the actual courier service.

"They may be used for patrol service, where military aircraft is now used, also they may be used for the antisabotage patrol of power lines, pipe lines, aqueducts, and for border patrols. At any place where we normally may need an airplane but do not want to use a combat plane because of taking it from more strenuous military operations, we will use these civilian patrol planes."

Ford Fights 'Model' Housing Project at Bomber Factory

By Sam Norris
Washington Bureau of Chicago Sun

Formal demand for an immediate senatorial investigation of the Government's proposed 35 million dollar "bomber city" housing project near the Ford Motor Company's Willow Run plant was made yesterday.

Charging that they suspected that the project is one of the Federal Government's "wild dreams of a model workers' community," representatives of the Ford company, Detroit Board of Commerce and the Washtenaw (Michigan) Board of Supervisors asked that the Truman defense investigating committee probe all phases of the project.

Evidence Presented.

A. I. Cuplin, Mr. Ford's attorney; George Meader, prosecuting attorney of Washtenaw County, and Willis H. Hall, representing the Detroit Board of Commerce, presented maps, charts, documentary evidence and two resolutions to Hugh Fulton, counsel for the Truman committee.

Among the charges they made were:

That the Government's plans to construct a permanent community to house about 30,000 aircraft workers indicated that it was a "broad social experiment."

That the project, the biggest housing program yet formulated by Washington, would in all probability cause "unnecessary diversion of materials and manpower from essential war industries."

That construction of the community almost wholly of permanent structures would in all likelihood leave a "ghost city" after the war.

That no attempt has been made to use all available housing facilities within the Detroit area.

That the Government, without asking permission first from Mr. Ford, sent a crew of engineers to survey the 42 square miles of land, 12,000 acres of which belong to Mr. Ford.

About 10 days ago Ford ejected United States engineers from his property for trespassing, and 700 stakes they had driven were pulled up.

Ford's opposition to the "Bomber City" project was expressed in a letter to Col. P. Charles Starr, Detroit representative of the Federal Public Housing Authority. It was written by Harry H. Bennett, personnel director of the Ford company.

Bennett told Colonel Starr that the housing authority is exceeding the authority vested in it by Congress in promoting a project of this kind.

It was announced that the Ford company will resist "by every legal method" the Government's acquisition of the auto manufacturer's property for the project.

To Employ 50,000

The Ford bomber plant is at present employing about 15,000 persons and it is believed that when peak production is reached it will have between 50,000 and 60,000 on its payrol. The project was conceived to take care of these people within convenient distance of the plant.

Officials of the Federal Housing Authority said they would demand a chance to answer the Ford allegations before the Truman Committee. One spokesman denied that most of the construction would be of a "permanent" character.

"Admittedly we have been having difficulty in acquiring land for the project, which will consist of both — I don't know how many — permanent family dwelling units, many demountable houses and "war dormitories" for single men and married couples," the spokesman said. "Out of about 11,000 acres desired, we have obtained only 418 acres. This is definitely slowing down the project, which has an immediate need."

Rubber Drive Lags As Officials Bicker

Order to Mutilate Old Tires, Later Rescinded, Stirs Strife in Three Agencies

The national scrap rubber drive entered what seemed to be a literal last stretch yesterday with pessimism and confusion in the minds of public officials.

While the War Production Board, the Office of Price Administration and the Petroleum Industry War Council wrangled over a June 15 order to mutilate old tires received in filling stations, Leon Henderson revealed a plan which would allow individuals to turn in their old auto tires for retreads. It was reported in some quarters that this plan would retard the contribution of tires to the national stockpile.

The District's contribution was revealed last night to be lagging nearly 70,000 pounds behind the quota set for the first half of the campaign. Instead of the expected 420,000 pounds of scrap, only 352,000 pounds have been turned in to date.

No official figures for the halfway total in States or regions have yet been released, though the highest per capita collection in the country was reported from Corcoran, Calif., where 290 pounds a person was claimed. More indicative of the success of the drive is the announcement that of Eastern cities Hartford, Conn., showed the highest per capita rating of 2.9 pounds.

District Amount Tiny

The District had anticipated a minimum of 10 and had hoped for a maximum of 15 pounds per person. Based on a rough population estimate of 800,000, the District has not even given that many ounces of rubber per person.

Henderson's plan for citizens' turning in old tires for retreads, which he said the OPA is now considering, was revealed in his testimony before the House Appropriations Committee on the military establishment appropriation bill. No details were given as to how the plan would be worked out.

Representative Case (Republican) of South Dakota suggested that persons who did not buy tires last fall, and who cannot claim devoting all of their time to war production should be able to exchange spare tires for retreads.

The order to mutilate the tires received at filling stations was sent out by telegram to all the regional directors of the drive by William R. Boyd, jr., chairman of the Petroleum Industry War Council. Boyd said he was acting upon what appeared to be good advice, but as soon as he was convinced otherwise he followed the order the next day with a rescinding telegram. He said he thought the practice had not spread very far in that one day.

The reason given for issuing the mutilating order was that it would insure all of the tires getting into reclaiming plants and none being resold to the public.

Boyd's second telegram was sent because he later was convinced the mutilation might mean that many tires that could be rehabilitated were thus being lost.

In order to spur the District's disappointing campaign, Commissioner John Russell Young officially appealed to all citizens to ferret in their homes for any possible source of scrap rubber for the war drive. Rubber shoes have been received in surprisingly low quantities.

Gasoline stations all over town will open Sunday from 9 a. m. to 2 p. m. to receive rubber contributions. The attendants are giving their time to accommodate those who cannot make their rubber contributions on any other day—and no gas will be sold at these especially opened stations.

Plans for having a "gasolineless day" were dropped yesterday upon consideration that the average motorist has enough trouble finding gas stations open as it is, without having them unnecessarily closed. Another thought was that it would be impossible for the attendants, who were to spend that day collecting rubber, to cover the town, and many housewives would spend the day waiting in vain to have the rubber collected.

Those Floor Mats Again

As a final compromise in the District dissension over the rubber floormats from cars as rubber contribution, the salvage committee decided yesterday to ask for only the rubber mats from luggage compartments and rumble seats. In this way the committee thinks it can stay clear of regulations or rulings by the Traffic Department. The campaign for rubber floor mats requested by the President was complicated by successive statements from the Traffic Department, which finally ruled that these mats could be given only if others of substitute material were installed.

Scattered reports from the national drive indicate that the Western rural regions are leading the rest of the country. Even unproductive Death Valley yielded 2½ tons of scrap, and from the bottom of the deepest gold mine in the world, at Grass Valley, Calif., 115 tons of scrap rubber were hauled out as the miners' gift to the President.

Senate Group Ponders Name for Navy Girls

What to call volunteers for the Women's Reserve of the Naval Reserve had members of the Senate Military Affairs Committee knitting their brows yesterday when the measure to create such a unit came up for a final vote of approval, which was given.

"I suppose we'll be safe just so we don't call them HENS," Senator Davis (Republican) of Pennsylvania chuckled when Rear Admiral Randall Jacobs, director of Navy personnel, remarked that in England the navy girls were known as WRENS.

Smart Uniform Promised

Admiral Jacobs said WAVES had been considered but that no sort of decision had been reached. In approving the bill yesterday, the committee dropped the word "auxiliary" from the unit's name and left it bearing the unwordlike initials WRNR. Probably the Navy will work out something euphonious from this, however, as a catchy name is considered almost as important as a snappy uniform to the success of the new branch of service.

And take it from Admiral Jacobs, the WRNR uniform is going to be okay. "It will look something like the new uniform for Navy nurses and be very smart," he declared.

The bill as approved was similar to that already passed by the House except for amendments placing pension and hospital benefits on the same basis with those provided for civilian employes of the Federal Government and a new amendment inserted yesterday to limit services of the volunteers to continental United States.

Members of the reserve definitely would be "in" the Navy and not serving with it as members of the Women's Army Auxiliary Corps will be serving "with" the Army. Breaking down opposition to this feature of the bill was considered quite a victory for the Navy, which has insisted it must have complete control over the reserves and did not want to set up a whole new procedure for the girls.

Will Replace Men

"We will be using the girls to replace men called to active duty and not creating jobs for them, as the Army is doing. The whole idea is different," Admiral Jacobs insisted yesterday when questioned by the Senators. "We have the jobs already and are needing the men who fill them. We want the girls for communications jobs, coding, secretarial work, statistics, and maybe later for cooks."

Size of the reserve is not set in the bill, but Admiral Jacobs said approximately 1000 would be wanted as officers at first. They will be trained in a woman's college and the lieutenant commander heading them will be an "educator." She is yet to be named, but is expected to be Dr. Mildred McAfee, president of Wellesley College. Pay for the women reserves will be the same as for men reserves, with the top getting $361 a month and the enlisted sailorette getting $50.

Although the uniforms for officers will be designed by the Navy, it will not be issued, but the girls will be given a cash allowance of $200 with which to purchase it. Ages for the reserves will be from 20 to 50 years, with the bulk of enlisted personnel between 20 and 30. A college degree will be required for officers and the Navy is considering requiring a high school diploma for the enlisted personnel.

Orphans to Miss Glen Echo Outing Because of War

For the first time in a quarter of a century, Washington orphans will miss their annual picnic at Glen Echo Park, sponsored by the Elks.

Instead, because of war transportation difficulties, the twenty-fifth annual picnic will come to them today at six children's homes, according to J. T. Edwards, chairman of the Elks' orphan outing committee.

Seven Elk committees will call at the orphanages with oranges, apples, ice cream, cake, animal crackers, soft drinks and American flags, and the 383 children will picnic on the grounds of the respective institutions.

The picnic supplies will be taken to Hillcrest Children's Village, Eastern Star Home for Children, St. Joseph's Home, German Orphan Home, Baptist Home for Children and the Swartzel Home.

Vacationers Urged to Plan Trips on Basis of July 4 Peak

By the Associated Press

Chicago, June 23.—If you contemplate a vacation trip this wartime summer, watch what happens over the July 4 holiday weekend, and adjust your plans accordingly.

This suggestion was offered today by Chicago travel authorities who said the Independence Day peak would demonstrate the real effect on pleasure travel of record-breaking rail movement of troops and war materials, tire and automobile shortages and gasoline rationing.

The National Safety Council figures there will be thousands of "last-fling" motorists on the holiday highways—making that trip to see Son Johnny in camp, or Aunt Minnie on the farm, or Cousin Johnnie's new baby—before possible national gas rationing, or before worn tires give way.

There also will be an army of war-plant workers staying on the job over the weekend and driving to work. The council believes the combination will result in a holiday motor traffic volume only slightly below normal peacetime July 4 holidays.

Allow Day or Two Leeway

George A. Kelly, vice president of the Pullman company, said vacationers-by-rail should be prepared to make last-minute changes in their plans to avoid disappointments, also to allow one or two days leeway in their schedule fixing and be willing to wait for the next train, or even the next day, if necessary.

A barometer of the tremendous rail movement of military forces and material was Kelly's statement that 2,500,000 troops have been transported in sleeping cars since January 1, of which 525,000 were in May, a new monthly record, and that civilian travel is running 30 per cent ahead of last year.

Government officials suggested vacations be staggered, thereby starting the civilian vacation season earlier than usual. Another factor contributing to zooming rail travel is curtailment of all manner of motor trips, business and pleasure.

Consult Travel Agents

The private motoring situation has produced an increase in Great Lakes boat trip business, despite some curtailment in available vessels. Some craft have been taken over by the Navy for training and transport and one large Lake boat is being converted into an aircraft carrier for training of Navy student fliers.

Bus lines, too, are experiencing boosted business, despite Government orders eliminating nonessential chartered bus trips, unprofitable routes and curtailing express runs.

Whatever your mode of contemplated vacation travel, unless it's by horse, the experts advise consultation with travel agents on routes, desinations and facilities.

Another reminder: Take along your sugar ration book. If you eat 12 or more meals in a summer resort or hotel, the manager will ask you to surrender a sugar stamp.

The Safety Council, urging the forgoing of all unnecessary driving, said those who must use their cars over the holiday should travel slower and more cautiously and remember to "put victory first on the Fourth" because "accidents help the Axis."

WAAC to Cost 28 Million for First Year

The newly created Women's Army Auxiliary Corps, during its first fiscal year, will cost $28,334,464, according to estimates in the military establishment appropriations bill reported yesterday.

This allows, among other things, for an initial WAAC clothing allowance valued at $184.91, plus $70.77 for maintenance, and nine million dollars for housing. (To clothe the average enlisted man costs $90.35, plus $63.56 for a year's maintenance.)

Subsistence for the WAAC is set at 62 cents a day, or $1,762,504 for the corps during its first year. Clothing for the corps for the year will total $4,289,126, plus $1,221,921, for equipage and $127,023 for laundry.

Hearings released on the bill yesterday revealed that Director Oveta Culp Hobby had appeared before the subcommittee and made a "very favorable impression" on the members.

Base pay for the WAAC will run to $3,428,216, with $240,000 added for specialist ratings. Under provisions of the WAAC bill, the enlisted pay of the girls was set at $21 a month and was not raised when Congress recently gave raises to regular soldiers.

Charts released in the hearings show that the corps will have 12 assistant directors drawing $2400 a year each; 92 first officers, drawing $2000 each; 92 second officers, drawing $1575 each; 276 third officers, drawing $1500 each; 76 first leaders, drawing $864 each; 760 leaders, drawing $720 each; 1800 junior leaders, drawing $648 each, and 17,188 auxiliaries, drawing $324 each. In addition there will be 375 officer candidates during the year, drawing $600 each.

Mrs. Hobby told the members that as soon as the papers of all girls thus far selected for the officer candidates school are in, the provost marshal will check prospective candidates for "any subversive activities."

She said that while the WAAC hoped to have its own specialist schools it was believed that in addition commercial schools now in operation would be for training purposes.

She expressed fear that "a serious problem concerning housing" would be run into before the WAAC had been expanded to its full strength. This problem, she said, had prevented a rapid expansion of a similar auxiliary in Canada.

Cunningham Here As Naval Chief

New York, June 23 (AP).—Sir Andrew Cunningham, British admiral who formerly commanded the Mediterranean fleet, arrived today to assume the post of head of the British Admiralty delegation to the United States.

With his wife, Lady Nona, Sir Andrew was among 17 passengers aboard a Flying Ace four-motored flying boat, which was making its first trip with passengers from Europe. The Cunninghams left on a United States Navy transport plane for Washington.

The Flying Ace was commanded by Capt. Charles F. Blair, chief pilot of the American Export Air Line.

Gen. Hale Named To Succeed Tinker

Hickam Field, Hawaii, June 23 (AP).—Appointment of Maj. Gen. Willis H. Hale as commanding general of the Seventh Air Force, covering all Army air units in the Hawaiian area, was announced today.

General Hale replaced Maj. Gen. Clarence L. Tinker, reported missing in the Battle of Midway Island earlier this month. He had served under Tinker since his arrival in the islands shortly after December 7.

During the Midway battle General Hale commanded Army units which cooperated with the Navy and Marines in crushing the Japanese invasion fleet.

SENTENCED TO DEATH (Valley)

JUDGE: Will the witness please take the stand? You swear to tell the truth?

WITNESS: I do, Your Honor.

JUDGE: Where were you about a year ago?

WITNESS: In Death Valley.

JUDGE: What were you doing in Death Valley?

WITNESS: I was observing a test of six high grade motor oils, including Conoco Nth oil.

JUDGE: How was the test conducted?

WITNESS: A five-quart fill of some one brand was sealed in the crankcase of each identical car and no more oil was added.

JUDGE: Then what?

WITNESS: The cars were driven until the engines were wrecked.

JUDGE: What happened?

WITNESS: Conoco Nth oil carried its motor for 13,398 miles.

JUDGE: How far did the other oils go?

WITNESS: They didn't average half the mileage of Conoco Nth.

JUDGE: Why would Conoco Nth oil perform in this fashion?

WITNESS: Because of two synthetics. One gives it the OIL-PLATING effect. The other helps keep oil and motor clean.

JUDGE: Would you recommend my driving this far on a crankcase of oil?

WITNESS: No, Your Honor! That mileage was for test purposes. You want to preserve your car and should drain at recommended periods and OIL-PLATE with Conoco Nth.

JUDGE: Thank you. Witness dismissed!

See Your Conoco Mileage Merchant today. Get Conoco Nth motor oil and you, too, will bear witness to the truth of this testimony. Continental Oil Company

Big July 4 Celebration to Open Summer Season at Cape May

Cape May, N. J.

Cape May is planning the largest Fourth of July celebration in its long history as an attraction for the thousands of holiday vacationists expected to visit this famous seashore resort during that weekend.

Plans are under way for a large parade to highlight the celebration. According to present tentative plans, the parade will consist of several bands, units of the Army, Navy and Marine Corps, delegations of volunteers serving with the local Civilian Defense Council, and other patriotic and civic organizations of this resort.

A field day, in which service men stationed in this area, visitors and residents of Cape May will participate, is being planned by the Cape May Recreation Commission. All types of athletic competitions are included on the program, and the event is expected to draw throngs of holiday vacationists to this community.

With large numbers of vacationists enjoying Cape May bathing, beach activities and other forms of seashore recreation during recent weekends, officials and residents of Cape May anticipate a record-breaking crowd here for the holiday period, despite gasoline and tire rationing.

Excellent train and bus service connecting Cape May and Philadelphia has largely offset the decline in automobile traffic to this resort, and the number of visitors enjoying Cape May's vacation pleasures to date this season compares favorably with that of last summer, which is conceded to have been a banner year for all resorts.

A number of Cape May hotels are open for the season, and their managers report good crowds of vacationists. All local hotels will be open by the last weekend of June, which marks the official opening of this resort's summer season, and a survey this week showed hotel reservations to be above those of last season, with most prospective guests planning to remain here for longer periods.

High in the Pocono Mountains lies the 3000-acre estate of the Skytop Club, a secluded region of wooded hills, lakes, waterfalls and streams, crowned by Skytop Lodge and its landscaped grounds. Conveniently spaced Lackawanna trains for Skytop stop at Cresco station where they are met by the Club's motor coaches.

The summer season here begins with laurel time, now nearing its height and extends through October when the Poconos flame with color. Skytop's program for these months has all pleasant and varied features of other seasons.

First tee and last green of the eighteen hole golf course are a stone's throw from the Lodge. Velvety bowling green, tennis courts and putting greens are equally close. Frequent tournaments will add interest to all these sports.

Miles of bridle path and trail invite riding enthusiasts. Group rides, early morning picnic breakfast jaunts, and a junior horse show in midsummer are part of the riding program.

Beach Haven Is Family Resort

Beach Haven, N. J.

Everything for a perfect vacation for every member of the family is offered by Beach Haven, known to thousands as the "May to November Resort."

It represents a sane and happy balance of the cultural and recreational. It is more than a resort; it is a seaside colony of friendly and congenial people, a town with an atmosphere of quiet dignity and wholesome fun.

The social activity in the resort centers at the Little Egg Harbor Yacht Club, one of the most active groups of its kind along the Jersey Coast. Weekly sailboat races are held over the triangular course for the juniors as well as the older skippers and skipperettes. Every child is taught swimming and sailing.

20,000 Local Youths in 5th Registration

Approximately 20,000 local boys 18, 19 and 20 years old are expected to register in the fifth national registration June 30, and will receive serials and order numbers on the basis of birth dates instead of through a national lottery, the National Selective Service Headquarters announced yesterday.

With this exception the registration, which will catalogue three million youths in the country for future military service, will be conducted the same as preceding registrations, it was said.

Accordingly, a person listing his birth date as January 1, 1922, will have his card placed on top, the person listing his birth as January 2, 1922 will be placed second, and so on to the last of the pile, where the cards of those born on June 30, 1924 will be placed. When the local board has cards for two or more registrants born on the same date, such cards shall be placed in alphabetic order.

Numbers According to Age

Following this serial numbers will be given the registrants, with the registrant whose card leads the list being given Serial No. N-1, the registrant immediately following him will get Serial No. N-2, likewise through the list. Pursuantly these new registrants will be given the available numbers in the local board, to wit, if the last assigned number in a particular board be 10443, the person with Serial No. N-1 will be given order No. 10444, and so on.

Classification for drafting will not be given those 20-year-olds until classification for the fourth registration group is completed, and the 18 and 19 year olds will, according to law, not be classified until they reach 20, at which age they will be liable for military duty. A conjecture as to when the 20-year-olds will be classified for military service, on the classification assimilation of previously registered groups, was not available from the National or District Selective Service Boards.

Registration will be conducted throughout the country between 7 a. m. and 9 p. m. June 30, excepting in States where the Governors, with proper sanction, have arranged for men to go to the places of registration earlier than June 30.

The registration cards will have only nine questions including the registrant's name, place of residence, mailing address (if other than place of residence), telephone, age in years and date of birth, place of birth, name and address of person who will always know the registrant's whereabouts, his employer's name and address, and the place of his employment or business.

It was said that almost 50 schools would be used here for the registration.

Simultaneously came the reports from the National Selective Service Headquarters that distribution of occupational questionnaires to registrants of the fourth registration—45 to 65—would begin this month, and that issuance of such forms to all men between 18 and 65 would be complete at the end of August of this year.

Draft headquarters said that the mailing of these questionnaires to the third registration group was completed and that registration groups 1 and 2 had just about been finished.

Candidate Lee Guest at First Of Supper Series

Lieut. Col. E. Brooke Lee, candidate for the Democratic nomination for Representative from the Sixth Maryland District, was guest of honor at the first of a series of ice cream and cake suppers which will be features of his campaign. The party was given by Park Commissioner Lacy Shaw, himself a candidate for county commissioner, at his home, Meadowood, near Colesville, Md. Nearly 1000 persons attended.

"Recent events on the fighting fronts are establishing even more clearly that a complete, well coordinated and prolonged American effort will be required to win this war for freedom," Colonel Lee declared. He said this effort must include all classes of Americans.

"The Congress of the United States will coordinate, measure, determine and define American activities through which the war must be won, the peace secured, and the return to the American way of life accomplished. It is my hope to be elected a member of the House of Representatives from this district and my determination is to serve on that front with the same complete regard for the national weal that young Americans are rendering on the fighting fronts," Colonel Lee said.

NOW SHE SHOPS "CASH AND CARRY"
Without Painful Backache
Many sufferers relieve nagging backache quickly once they discover that the real cause of their trouble may be weak kidneys. The kidneys are Nature's chief way of flushing the excess acids and waste out of the blood. They help most people pass about 3 pints a day.
When disorder of kidney function permits poisonous matter to remain in your blood, it may cause nagging backache, rheumatic pains, leg pains, loss of pep and energy, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, headaches and dizziness. Frequent or scanty passages with smarting and burning sometimes shows there is something wrong with your kidneys or bladder.
Don't wait! Ask your druggist for Doan's Pills, used successfully by millions for over 40 years. They give happy relief and will help the 15 miles of kidney tubes flush out poisonous waste from your blood. Get Doan's Pills.

Action on 800 Hospital Beds for District Expected to Get Under Way Next Week

Action on plans to increase the District's hospital capacity by 800 beds is expected to get under way next week, following the report on FWA surveys of Garfield, Sibley and Columbia Hospitals which is expected to be filed before the weekend, Commissioner Guy Mason said last night.

Asked if he thought there would be immediate results of Monday's conference, at which it was decided to build nurses' dormitories so their recent quarters in the hospitals could be used for wards, Mason said that it was at least a "toehold."

There should be no legislative involvements to slow up the progress, Mason said, explaining that except for the Lanham appropriation, now pending in Congress, the hospital project is independent of Congress and the Budget Bureau.

"It's a question now only of getting the money, and working out the engineering details," Mason said.

The only specification in the Lanham Act which might interfere with the plan is that none of the money is to be used in the construction of a tuberculosis hospital. Although there is to be no construction of such a hospital, the plans call for the reversion of the old Tuberculosis Hospital at Thirteenth and Upshur Streets, now occupied by the District WPA, to its original use. In this way, present tubercular patients at Gallinger Hospital can be moved to Glenn Dale in place of some 180 convelescants to be taken to the Upshur Street buildings, and the tubercular ward at Gallinger used as a venereal clinic.

In addition to the one-story frame nurses' dormitories at Garfield, Sibley and Columbia and the use of the old Thiekeld School at Thirty-sixth and Prospect Streets Northwest, by Georgetown Hospital nurses, the plans call for the erection of temporary frame hospitals in Arlington and Prince Georges Counties and in Bethesda, and additions to Gallinger Hospital and to the one in Sandy Spring, Montgomery County.

The suburban hospitals are sought by the District in order to take care of county patients who now occupy 35 per cent of the District hospital space.

Ohioan Gets OPA Personnel Post

The Office of Price Administration announced yesterday that Ben W. Lewis, formerly on the Staff of Oberlin College, Oberlin, Ohio, would have charge of the selection of the OPA field price personnel.

Lewis has been price executive of the OPA rubber branch and was former chief economist of the Consumers Council Division of the Interior Department.

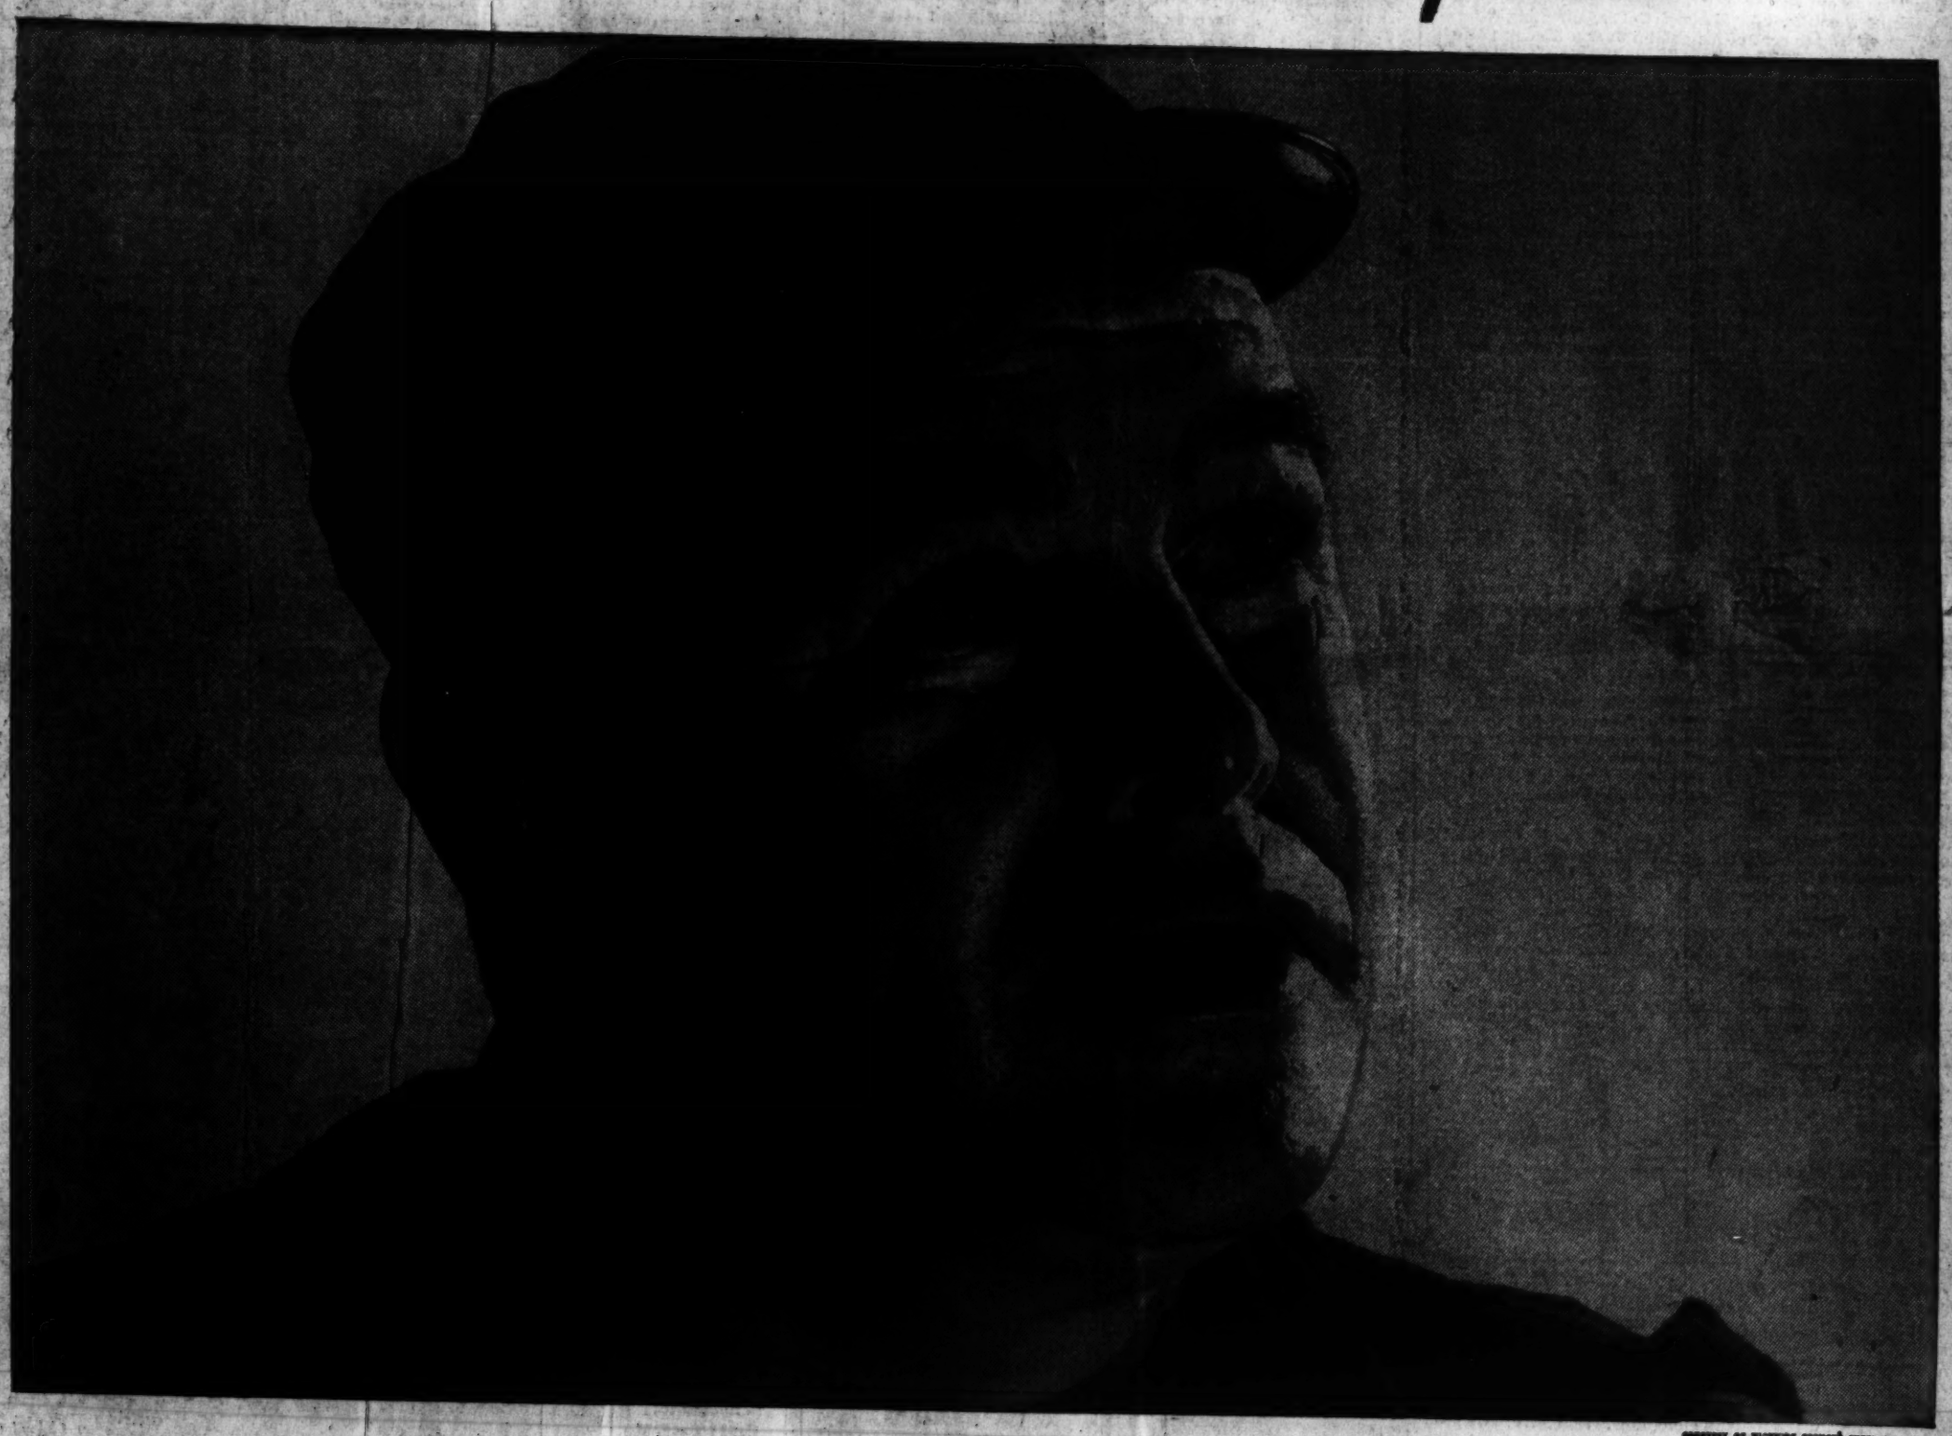
It's a woman's war, too



COURTESY OF MICHIGAN STEEL CORPORATION

BACK of every man who builds our ships and tanks and planes is a woman. A woman whose job it is to see that he keeps strong and well, to see that he gets good, nourishing food, to see that he has plenty to give to a task that demands his utmost effort.

Nutrition is the science that women are bringing to the winning of the war. And now the government is bringing to all women a simple, practical guide to nutrition that every home in the land can follow.

You see it reproduced here. It is the official chart of the strength-building foods issued by the Office of Defense Health and Welfare Services.

The government has urged every food dealer to display this chart, every local nutritional committee to distribute it, every homemaker to pin it to her kitchen wall. And even more, it urges that you serve your family these nutritional foods—some from every group in the chart, every day.

This is the American woman's first war work. For America needs Americans strong.

EAT NUTRITIONAL FOOD

Every day, eat this way

MILK and MILK PRODUCTS ... at least a pint for everyone—more for children—as cheese or evaporated or dried milk.

BREAD and CEREAL ... whole grain products or enriched white bread and flour.

ORANGES, TOMATOES, GRAPEFRUIT ... or raw cabbage or salad greens—at least one of these.

MEAT, POULTRY or FISH ... dried beans, peas or nuts occasionally.

GREEN or YELLOW VEGETABLES ... one big helping of more—some raw, some cooked.

EGGS ... at least 3 or 4 a week, cooked any way you choose. Also "milk."

OTHER VEGETABLES, FRUIT ... potatoes, other vegetables or fruits in season.

BUTTER and OTHER SPREADS ... vitamin-rich fats, peanut butter, and similar spreads.

Then eat other foods you like

Voluntary Economies Work Great Savings; New Star Makes His Bow as a Killer; Items of News and Gossip of the Theater

WHEN THE GOVERNMENT COMPLETES its conferences with the high executives of the motion picture industry, currently being held or in the making—looking to the conservation of materials essential to the war effort, it will find that Hollywood already has voluntarily put into effect a policy of rigid economy.

ALAN LADD

Directors, writers and technicians, we are informed from an unimpeachable source, meet each week to sift scores of suggestions and recommend the practicable ones to the producers. The first block of 13 has just been made official. And the surprising part of it all is that they caused no hardship to anyone concerned. As a matter of fact, they probably should have been adopted years ago by the industry in its own best interests. This is tacitly admitted in the announcement of the industry's discovery that its conservation programs have not only reduced the amount of film used in the given picture by approximately 40 per cent, but has proportionately improved the finished product.

This has been accomplished through skill, ingenuity and teamwork, involving not only all aspects of technical efficiency but more careful preparation of scripts, letter-perfect mastery of roles by the actors and longer and more painstaking rehearsals before the cameras begin to grind.

A few examples illustrate the scope of this highly personalized patriotic effort.

George Marshall, for instance, in directing "Star Spangled Rhythm," came out 35 per cent under his film budget in the first week of shooting, and Michael Curtiz, directing "Casablanca," saved 37 per cent of his gelatin over a 30-day period. Leo McCarey, producer-director of "Once Upon a Honeymoon," is reported to have saved an equally high percentage of film by advance preparation, cooperative effort on the part of every member of the cast and watchful supervision, and Mitchell Leisen, busy on "No Time for Love," has estimated his film saving for two weeks at 40 per cent.

The same thing is reputedly happening on every motion picture set in Hollywood—voluntary, careful, sensible conservation.

Hollywood's contribution to the war effort, however, does not end there. More pictures will be made on location during the next year than at any time during the past decade. And this despite the fact that experience has proved location pictures to be more expensive than those made on studio sound stages. Uncertain weather conditions alone can add anywhere from one to three weeks or more to the shooting schedule of a picture being made on location. Hence locations are costly in dollars. But they save vital materials. In the Nation's all-out war effort materials have become more precious than money. Prior to the conservation drive, it was not unusual for players to live as far as 40 or 50 miles from location. This meant motor car transportation of from 80 to 100 miles a day, to and from the cameras. Today locations are picked primarily for their proximity to a railroad siding. And the entire troupe lives on the train that took them to location. If they can't walk to where the cameras are set up, they ride bicycles! All this should be welcome news to the Man with the Whiskers.

On Again, Off Again, Gone Again

There will be a double thrill awaiting Capital screen-gazers when "This Gun for Hire" opens Thursday at Loew's Capitol Theater. One source of tingles up and down the spinal column will be found to be inherent in the strangely sympathetic story of a killer. The other will be the discovery of Alan Ladd as a "tough guy" who might easily have thrown a bit of a scare into Humphrey Bogart, Lloyd Nolan and the others of the top-flight homicidal stars. On the strength of his performance in this picture, Mr. Ladd, with ample justification, was hailed as the "find" of the year. He was covetously sought for more pictures than he could make. Then the Army got him. So you'd better be seeing him while you can.

Tonight, beginning at about 11:15 o'clock, Bolling Field will play host to Ina Ray Hutton and Her Orchestra and all the stars of the stage bill current at the Earle Theater—or vice versa. With the galvanic Miss Hutton and her band boys as the piece de resistance, the complete entertainment that will transplant itself from the Earle to the Bolling Field Auditorium will include Stuart Foster, the band's male vocalist; the Albins, comedy dancers in the manner of the Hartmans; Val Setz, ne plus ultra juggler, and Dick and Dot Remy. How the rotund Miss Remy can hope to survive an extra round of her jellyfish gymnastics is one of the minor mysteries. But that's her business. The service men, from top rank to lowest, at least, will have a whale of a time.

MARIA MONTEZ,
a bit of a sensation on the Universal lot, disports herself gayly with the lion cubs presented her by Sabu, once given the apparent misnomer of "Elephant Boy." He is said to have promised to teach her how to manage them when they grow up—by turning them over to the zoo, no doubt. Meantime, so they say, the cubs are favored household pets at the Montez manse. If this is it, Miss Montez must lead a very quaint life!

Disney Takes to Air

Hollywood, June 23 (INS).—Exceedingly interesting is the word Walt Disney will film Maj. Alexander P. De Seversky's "Victory Through Air Power," one of the most-talked-of books of the day. When I talked with Walt he said that after weeks of negotiating he had closed a deal for the major's book. Because of the extreme timeliness of the theme, Disney hopes to have "Victory Through Air Power" ready for fall release.

WALT DISNEY

De Seversky's theory has been the subject of much comment. He believes that when the United Nations turn their full air strength on Berlin, Tokio and other Axis cities, complete victory will be realized. With this idea in mind, Disney will make a spectacular animated feature.

Head Man Louis B. Mayer of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer has put his story department to work on a search for the right yarn to star John Pierre Aumont, the new French leading man, who toured with Katharine Cornell last season.

How about the gentleman's own life story for a starter? He fought with the French and was decorated with the Croix de Guerre for outstanding bravery—all, of course, before France's tragic fall. When the Germans moved in, Aumont escaped, and his adventures in getting to America, with only the money he had in his pocket, is a story in itself.

"Pride of the Yankees" will open simultaneously in 41 metropolitan theaters in New York, July 14, to an audience of 75,000. Sam Goldwyn had planned to have the premier at Yankee Stadium, and that would have seated 80,000. But the New York theaters will beat that by 15,000.

Snapshots of Hollywood collected at random: Mary Ann Hyde, Errol Flynn's favorite girl friend, at the moment, his dinner guest on his birthday Saturday night; Alice Faye turned over 300 pounds of scrap rubber to her local gas station—salvage from old tires to be used to smudge her orange grove.

Mrs. Buster Collier, who was operated on last week for abdominal ailment, is reported better; Dr. Peter Lindstrom, Ingrid Bergman's husband, arrives here next week to vacation with her. He is a physician in Rochester; Eleanor Powell, who was rumored with a different suitor every week, stepping out with Philip Reed at the Mocambo.

Cook or Starve

Gig Young, who got his odd name from the character he plays in Warner's "The Gay Sisters," can cook. It's the result of the long weeks he waited for his first opportunity in Hollywood when it was a matter of cook for himself or go hungry.

HEDDA HOPPER

The Shoes Should Fit!

Hollywood, Calif., June 23. When I saw James Craig on the "Ox Train" set, I felt there was something in the wind over there, told him so, and was I right! He goes into "Gambler's Choice," which was all set up for Clark Gable (and will kill Craig's trip to Houston, Tex., for the opening of his latest picture). I don't know what RKO's going to do. They have him under contract, and they've announced him for two—"Grand Canyon" with Ginny Simms, and "Submarine Wolf Pack" with Jane Wyatt.

CLAUDETTE COLBERT

Funny thing about Jimmy—he's tall, virile, handsome and guess how he learned to act. He played Rhett Butler for six months under direction of George Cukor, 'cause he made the tests with all females who were tried out for Scarlett.

So he should feel right at home in Clark Gable's shoes, 'cause he wore them first!

Claudette Colbert isn't exactly temperamental, but she's firm when she tells Director Mitch Leisen to make it good—no retakes!—in "No Time for Love," because she wants to have plenty of time for real love East with her doctor—and the sooner the better.

Could it be that the John Suttons' happy marriage is about to go smash? Could be, 'cause three nights a week he's living at a country club here.

Fifi D'Orsay's real love is Pat Maloney, touring in "Johnny 2 x 4." Vic Mature looks like Pat, so she fills in a few lonely hours stepping out with him.

And those calls Vic's getting from a Miss Fitzpatrick really come from Rita Hayworth.

Glenn Ford has been supposedly phoning Hedy Lamarr—also Eleanor Powell. But I happen to know he's doing all right, thank you, and nice work, too, with Dinah Shore

Carrie Randall (formerly Carole Gallagher), who was under contract to Howard Hughes, is now under contract to Metro, and Louis B. Mayer's giving her a big build-up.

It's funny, publicity agents in our town burn the midnight oil dreaming up stories to crown their stars' brows with all the virtues. Yet along in my mail comes one that would make them blue with envy. It's a chatty, cheerful letter from a sprightly lady 74 years old, crippled for seven years with arthritis.

She's Miriam Hopkins' aunt and says, "since my first illness, Miriam has paid hospital bills and all expenses, and in no way in heaven is this a duty of hers. I've begged to relieve her by going into a home. She won't hear of it. So it's small wonder I think her the grandest person in the world. She's made mistakes, sure. But I maintain that a person who never makes a mistake never makes much of anything else."

Which reminds me of an uncle back in Hollidaysburg, Pa., who used to say "Lord, deliver us from the man who's never made a fool of himself."

Stanton Griffis, head of Paramount Pictures, who's done such a magnificent job with Navy relief and half a dozen other projects, is begging to be put into active service. He'd like to go to Iceland, Australia or anywhere our forces are fighting, and battle himself.

Broadway Potpourri

New York, June 23.

Tom Beck of Collier's recently completed a tour of the armaments plants throughout the country. One of those which interested him most was the new Ford bomber factory, where Henry Ford escorted him through the place . . . Ford described the large number of trees which had to be chopped down to make room for that plant. "The way we're moving along now," said Ford, "we soon hope to be able to deliver one bomber in the time it took us to chop down one tree" . . . Ford also revealed that he had been troubled by the thought that the squirrels who lived in those trees would be made homeless. He therefore hired a group of boys and paid them $5 for each squirrel they trapped and moved to the Ford estate.

"MY FAVORITE BLONDE," a rollicking yarn of a ham vaudevillian who gets mixed up with Nazi spies, is offered by the Earle Theater as its principal attraction. Bob Hope and Madeleine Carroll are starred with assistance from an able supporting cast. The stage portion of the program will feature the Earle Rockettes, Buster West, Lucille Page, the Four Marks and others. Opens Friday.

Capitol

"THIS GUN FOR HIRE" stars two of the most talked about newcomers, Veronica Lake and Alan Ladd, in an unusual melodrama with the "two requisites of a good movie, action and original characters." On the stage, Jay Filippen, Eleanor Whitney, Horace MacMahon and Jane Pickens will be featured in "Blackouts of 1942." Opens Thursday.

RKO-Keith's

"MY FAVORITE SPY" brings Kay Kyser to the screen in a tuneful thriller. Produced by Harold Lloyd, the picture embodies much of the thrill technique used by him in his own silent pictures. In additional to the members of Kyser's band, Ellen Drew, Jane Wyman, Robert Armstrong and Helen Westley are best in the principle roles. Opens Wednesday.

Palace

"TORTILLA FLAT," John Steinbeck's best seller, continues on its merry way for a third week. John Garfield, Hedy Lamarr and Spencer Tracy are starred in this simple tale of peons who live in Southern California. Held over.

Metropolitan

"IN THIS OUR LIFE," based on Ellen Glasgow's Pulitzer prize-winning novel, casts Bette Davis, Olivia de Haviland, George Brent and Dennis Morgan. It concerns a once-proud family which has lost most of its prestige due to the avariciousness of one member of the family. Opens Friday.

Columbia

"MY GAL SAL," based on the life of Paul Dresser, who wrote most of the popular song hits at the turn of the century. The screen play was written by his brother, Theodore Dreiser, the well-known novelist. Victor Mature and Rita Hayworth play the leads in this tuneful, nostalgic reminder of days long past. Opens Thursday.

Pix

"THE BASHFUL BATCHELOR" brings to the screen that well-known pair of radio comedians, Lum 'n' Abner, in a comedy dealing with small-town intrigue. On the same bill is "Tillie's Punctured Romance," famous comedy of the silent era, starring Charlie Chaplin and the late Marie Dressler. A sound truck has been added to accompany the antics of the leading players. Opens Wednesday.

Little

Cross Roads

"SEPARATE ROOMS," the smash New York hit which ran for two seasons on Broadway, will be the second production on the summer schedule. Ilsetta Jewel, jr., and Reginald Allen have the leads in this piece. Paul Mesmik is directing and the set, a modernistic penthouse apartment high above Manhattan, is being done by Nell Linger. Opens Monday.

Willard Roof

"EAT LYNNE." The New York cast of the Willard Roof Stock Company will give the audience plenty of chance to shed bitter tears as they unfold the sad, sad plot of that melodramas to end all melodramas. A "gay nineties" atmosphere will prevail, with the audience seated at tables, music hall fashion, and service of beer to cry in at the sad plight of the misguided heroine. Curtain time is 8:45 p. m., and the show plays each evening from Tuesday through Saturday. Opens Thursday.

S. S. MOUNT VERNON makes two trips daily from the pier at the Seventh Street Wharves at 10 a. m. and 2 p. m. This boat trip down the Potomac affords a grandiose view of the soft rolling lawn and wood covered hills rising from the river's Virginia and Maryland banks, and furnishes the relief of a lively breeze in these hot summer days.

Open Air

"RIGHT TO THE HEART" and "Appointment for Love" are offered by this novel movie theater where you can watch the screen without leaving the comfort of your auto. Opens Thursday.

Greenstreet Role One to His Liking

Sydney Greenstreet, the rotund Warner Bros. player in "Across the Pacific," says that actors should be like musicians.

"A good musician," he says, "can play Bach or Beethoven or Ravel. A good actor, then, should be able to play Shakespeare or Noel Coward or Frank Capra.

"As for me," he added, "I don't worry about the role to look as if it's a positive one—still not negative."

$100 MONTHLY FOR SICKNESS AND ACCIDENTS

Plus Hospital Benefits—Pays Up To $1,000 If Killed!

We have just issued a NEW sickness—accident—hospital policy that costs as little as 3c a day!

It pays up to $100 a month for disability from sickness or accident—and hospital benefits in addition!

It pays your beneficiary $1,000 if you are killed.

And most important—It covers ALL accidents from the very first day . . . ALL sickness from the very first day. No waiting period of 7 or 14 days, as so many policies require.

It has other benefits—you will see them all for yourself when you send for a regular policy on FREE inspection, without obligation. You can judge this important value for yourself.

Postal now is offering this protection, if desired, on a monthly payment plan of only $1 a month—or on quarterly, semiannual or annual payments.

BUT SEND NO MONEY. Write for policy on free inspection. No agents will call—no medical examination.

Don't delay—write today! Address postcard or letter to Postal Life & Casualty Insurance Co., 309 Postal Life Building, Kansas City, Mo.

House 'Famine' Comes to End; Striking Waiters' Pay Raised

The House of Representatives settled the week-old strike among its restaurant waiters yesterday by granting a $10 monthly wage increase to the servers.

The waiters, who walked out in the middle of lunch last Tuesday, will now receive $85 a month for part-time men and $93.50 for full-time work. The raise was negotiated by Manager W. E. Brockwell and approved by House leaders.

Brockwell estimated that about 24 men, out of a total prestrike staff of 32, would be back at their posts under the new scale. The others, he said, had found jobs elsewhere in the interim and would have to be replaced.

Most of the men had already returned tentatively to work at the end of last week, agreeing to man the members' dining room until the wage differences were adjusted.

The coffee shop, open to the public, also was reopened yesterday with new help, but Brockwell said that opening of the public dining room would probably be delayed a few days until substitutes had been hired for all of the eight absentees.

The wage boost puts the part-time men—the majority of the waiters—on a par with part-time men in the Senate. The full-time men, however, are still below their Senate restaurant colleges who get $85 a month.

Little Congress Slates Sales Tax Discussion

A discussion of "Should Congress Enact a Sales Tax Law?" by Representative Hale Boggs (Democrat), of Louisiana, will be followed by a debate on the subject by members of the Little Congress at a meeting at 8 tonight in the New House Office Building.

Hoyt Shadid and O. F. Weber will take the affirmative and Bradford Gavan and Vincent Guerriera the negative.

losses in the last four weeks of fighting, plus the possibility that Rommel would get reinforcements across the Mediterranean soon. It is to prevent the latter that the Allied airmen bombed as far away as Greece and Crete in addition to steadily bombing and strafing Libyan ports, airdromes and troops on the move.

The R. A. F. was joined in these sorties by South Africans operating American-made Douglas Boston bombers.

The South Africans bombed Axis transport vehicles between Tobruk, 80 miles from Egypt, and Fort Capuzzo, on the border, and smashed at Bahetra Airdrome, 26 miles from the border.

In addition, the R. A. F. reported torpedoing an Axis supply ship in the Mediterranean.

With the exception of the British equipment losses and the Axis chances to shorten supply routes and reinforce Libya, the situation was much like that of last summer, when the Germans and Italians also were at the Egyptian frontier, or of September, 1940, when the Italians were camped 70 miles inside Egypt.

Voicing confidence, Sir Miles Lampson, British Ambassador to Egypt, declared, "The situation is satisfactory, we shall beat the enemy decisively."

He insisted that "last year the situation was much worse, and in spite of that we won."

With Malta largely neutralized, however, the extent of Axis reinforcements sent to Libya is believed to depend on what can be spared from Europe rather than the Mediterranean crossing.

Next morning they captured two Germans and set off again with a much soberer Italian, still in the front seat, he continued. Near Trigh Capuzzo the group passed right through a German convoy, but lost the second truck in a mine field and had to turn their German and Italian prisoners loose.

Dies Body Finds Plot Against Congress

By the Associated Press

The Dies Committee charged in a special report yesterday that the Union for Democratic Action, which it identified as a Communist organization, had engineered a campaign "to obliterate the Congress of the United States as a co-equal and independent branch of our Government.

"If this movement ever reaches its fulfillment in the Nazification of the American Government, we shall find ourselves bearing a striking resemblance to the hateful thing against which we are now mobilizing our total resources," the committee said.

The committee, created several years ago by the House of Representatives to investigate un-American activities, is headed by Representative Martin Dies (Democrat), of Texas.

The comparatively brief report, made public by Representative Starnes (Democrat), of Alabama, in Dies' absence, said the issue in America "is not the restoration but the preservation of the political institutions of free men."

"This issue," the committee declared, "compels us to take cognizance of a widespread movement to discredit the legislative branch of our Government," and, "simply stated, is whether the Congress of the United States shall be the reality or the relic of American democracy."

The committee described the Union for Democratic Action as an organization "composed chiefly of individuals who have been a significant part of the interlocking directorate of the Communist movement in the United States."

In New York, Dr. Frank Kingdon, president of the Union for Democratic Action, declared it was an "unadulterated lie" to call the organization a Communist front organization and "equally a lie" to say that the group sought to obliterate Congress.

Declaring that he was chairman of the New York Committee to Defend America by Aiding the Allies and chairman of the New York committee of The Fight for Freedom Committee and that his associates in the U. D. A. had supported the war fully before and during the Hitler-Stalin Pact, Dr. Kingdon said the U. D. A. was "for a Congress that will win the war."

"We are opposed to appeasers, anti-Democrats, anti-Semites and all the paid agents of reaction," he added. "We are opposed to them everywhere, including Congress."

He charged that the Dies report contained "blatant falsehoods" put out by the committee with the people's money "for the public discredit-ing of every American citizen who dares to take a liberal and truly democratic position on any public issue."

First Spotted Fever Case Here

The season's first case of Rocky Mountain spotted fever as the result of a tick bite was reported by the Health Department yesterday. John Christopher, 40, of 1601 Argonne Place, is being treated at home for the fever and was believed to have been bitten by a tick from a wooded section of nearby Maryland.

The report of the first case here brought a warning by Health Officer George C. Ruhland to persons who intend to spend any time in the open during the rest of the summer.

It was pointed out that ticks usually require 8 to 12 hours on the body before they can infect a person with the fever virus. Therefore, persons who are in uncleared land should examine themselves twice daily, and if any ticks are discovered, they should remove them promptly with a piece of gauze or tweezers and apply tincture of iodine.

Ticks should not be removed with the fingers, Ruhland warned, pointing out that they are likely to be crushed in that way and some of the virus squeezed on the hand where a slight abrasion could afford it entrance into the body.

Although only one out of about 300 ticks is able to transmit spotted fever, there is no way to identify an infected tick, so all should be regarded as potentially dangerous. They are mostly to be found on the body at the hair-line of the neck.

IF YOU PLAN A TRIP

"OVER THE 4th"

Please Remember,

War Travel Comes First!

WAR itself takes no holiday.

So our railroad wheels will click over the Fourth of July week-end speeding military and war-business travel just as at any other time.

In addition, we shall carry thousands of our armed forces traveling over the week-end.

Please consider these facts in making your holiday travel plans. Try to "time" your trip so as to avoid the peak rush Friday afternoon and evening. Below we offer a number of helpful suggestions—please read them.

To the best of our ability we shall endeavor to accommodate you, but should you be inconvenienced in any manner, please remember we must keep the war effort rolling—first, last and always, holiday or no holiday!

SUGGESTIONS TO HELP MAKE YOUR TRIP RUN SMOOTHLY

1 If possible, start your trip on Wednesday or Thursday to avoid the peak rush on Friday.

2 Plan to return on Monday or later in the week.

3 Whether you're going Pullman or Coach buy your tickets in advance and avoid standing in line at station ticket windows. Buy round trip tickets. You save time and money.

4 If you're going Pullman, please accept whatever accommodations are available. And if you decide to postpone your trip, please cancel your space at once so that it can be assigned to others.

5 If you're going coach, be sure to get to the station well in advance of your train's departure time.

6 Travel "light"—take as little luggage as possible. Excess luggage takes up space, makes for discomfort.

Careless Minority

It is quite clear that Major Kelly had no alternative but to send out a directive to members of the Police Department warning them to be on the lookout for traffic violations by streetcar and bus operators. In May fewer than 59 persons were injured in streetcar accidents and 19 persons in bus accidents. This represents an increased accident rate of 35 per cent and 12 per cent, respectively, over May, 1941. It would be foolish, of course, to conclude from these statistics that local operators have taken en masse to wholesale traffic violations. Most of the drivers have a sensible regard for public safety. Moreover, it is a fact, as we pointed out last week, that a good many pedestrians invite accidents by their failure to watch out for approaching streetcars and buses. Certainly they, as well as drivers, should be the object of police attention.

But there is nevertheless a minority of drivers who persist in jumping lights, speeding, and in unwarranted weaving through traffic. Communications from correspondents, some of which have been printed in The Post's letter columns, attest to this. In the circumstance, therefore, Major Kelly deserves credit for undertaking to apprehend the careless minority. The pressure put upon drivers to move passenger traffic as speedily as possible must not be allowed to outweigh considerations of public safety.

Dovetailing Publicity

Dovetailing of the war effort of the United Nations is now complete with the executive order setting up the Office of War Information under Elmer Davis. For, included in Mr. Davis' mandate, is an instruction to maintain a liaison with the information agencies of the United Nations.

Chief of these agencies, of course, is the ambitious organization in America maintained by the British. It so happens that the British have lately been as free with their criticism of British information as we have with our own information. The branch in America, in particular, has been under fire. Whether or not as a result of that criticism, Sir Gerald Campbell has stepped down as director general, together with his deputy, R. J. Cruickshank, and now in Washington is Sir Gerald's successor, Harold Butler, formerly director general of the International Labor Organization at Geneva.

To be sure, there was a time when the British service, which keeps the newspapers informed about Britain's war effort, was not worth the valuable paper it was written on, let alone the millions of precious dollars that it cost the British. It appeared that the organization was having a difficult birth. There were the usual problems associated with getting staffs together and persuading them to work together. Then there were the problems confronting a fledgling ministry of adjusting its relations in America with the existing British establishment headed up by the British Embassy. The difficulty was enhanced by the fact that the appointees seemed to have had little association with printer's ink.

At last, however, the organization started to function well. That was due in considerable part to the appointments of Sir Gerald Campbell and Mr. Cruickshank. The two appointees made a happy team. Sir Gerald held the rank of Minister, and, as such, reinforced the liaison between the press service and the embassy. In addition, his executive gifts made for the development of organizational morale. Mr. Cruickshank on his part supplied the expertise. He earned his spurs in America as a British newspaper correspondent, and before the war was editor of the London Star.

It is unfortunate that this team is being broken up just at the time that a liaison has been authorized between the British services and Mr. Davis' office. The need for knowledge of how Britain did it is singularly important to our war effort, if we are to avoid mistakes and profit by the lessons the British have learned from costly experience. No doubt Mr. Butler, who has ministerial rank, will waste no time in seeking to facilitate the new coordination. He is not a newspaperman, as is Mr. Davis. But the effective operating head of the British service to succeed Mr. Cruickshank still has to be appointed, and it would be a pity if this appointee is not a newspaperman, and preferably one with both managerial experience and knowledge of Anglo-American affairs. The fitting of man to the job is required in this department no less than in other departments which have already been related among the United Nations.

Laval Speaks Up

"I hope for a German victory," said Pierre Laval in a broadcast in which he professed to speak in the name of Henri Philippe Petain. Is there some mistake? Is the swarthy Auvergnat trying to pull the wool over the eyes of the French people? Didn't Admiral Leahy, on his return from Vichy, let it be known that the aged marshal is really pro-Ally at heart and convinced that Germany's defeat is now certain?

Unfortunately the facts speak louder than the assurances which Admiral Leahy gave on his return from Vichy. It is quite possible that in their conversations Petain told Leahy just what the admiral reported. Yet the fact remains that in his broadcast on the anniversary of the Compiegne armistice Laval was speaking not for himself but for the whole Vichy government, including Petain. If there is any doubt about it, one need only recall Petain's own words of two weeks ago: "Laval and I are advancing hand in hand. Between us there is complete understanding and absolute confidence."

Advancing where? Laval tells us. The Vichy government is advancing toward complete collaboration with Germany, whose victory that government desires. And it desires that victory because without it the men of Vichy would be doomed. Having sold their country's honor for a mess of pottage, they now find a virtue in the necessity of swallowing the unpalatable mess. Thus Laval is now prepared to "exchange" the broken Frenchmen in Nazi prison camps for French workers who are to be sent to German factories. In that way Hitler will be able to benefit twice. He will no longer have to waste food on prisoners who are physically incapable of contributing to Germany's war effort and at the same time he will be able to ease his own mounting labor shortage.

Nor is that all. For since Laval and his colleagues hope for a German victory—their very lives depend on it—we can take it for granted that they will stop at nothing to see that this victory is achieved. The only thing likely to restrain them is the unwillingness of the French people to go along. How do they feel? It is the consensus that the rank and file of the French, unlike the traitorous band that now governs them, do not hope for the victory of the Nazis—of the gangsters who have looted their country, murdered their people, imposed endless indignities upon them. On the contrary, they hope and pray for the victory of the Allies.

It is the French people, not Vichy, who have stood in the way of the cession of the French fleet to Hitler. It is they, and not Vichy, who have prevented collaboration with Germany from going all out. Even Laval had to admit this. "I can do nothing without you," he said. So the French people, disarmed, starving, misgoverned, betrayed, are still a factor to be reckoned with. And some day—let us pray that day is not distant—they will sweep into the rubbish heap the craven creatures who do Hitler's bidding while professing to act in their name.

Borrowing Problems

From present indications the Treasury will have to borrow over 50 billions of dollars during the coming fiscal year to cover the budget deficit and provide loans for war industries. A very large proportion of that total sum will have to be obtained from the commercial banks. That method, however, is not anti-inflationary, but just the reverse. The only noninflationary borrowing device is the tapping of funds from the people's savings, not from the banks' funds. So every effort must be made to lighten the load carried by these banks by broadening non-banking investment outlets for Government bonds.

Yet, under Secretary Morgenthau's voluntary savings program, we shall be lucky if as much as 12 billion dollars of war savings bonds designed primarily for small investors are sold during the coming fiscal year. The remainder must be absorbed by large individual investors, insurance companies, etc., and by commercial banks. Aside from the inflationary aspects of selling bonds on credit to commercial banks, the effect on the banking structure is not good. Heavy demands made upon the banks are already resulting in a rapid shrinkage of their excess reserves. Accordingly the Federal Reserve Board is seeking authority from Congress to change reserve requirements of any one of the three classifications of member banks without changing the requirements applicable to other classes. Specifically the board wants to be able to lower the reserve requirements of the New York and Chicago banks, which have suffered a very heavy drain upon their reserves, without being forced to reduce reserves elsewhere.

It is evident, therefore, that the manner of financing the war debt is tremendously important, not merely because of the danger of bringing on inflation, but because of the effect upon the banking system itself. That system will be progressively weakened by the steady absorption of Government bond issues that cannot be disposed of by any other means.

More Billeting

Billeting of warworkers in Washington homes loomed up in much larger terms yesterday when the Zoning Commission proposed temporary relaxation of rules against boarding houses in restricted residential areas. At the same time a bill permitting householders to evict obnoxious wartime tenants was introduced. The Zoning Commission's closely safeguarded plan should put an end to the proposed legislation opening all residential areas in the city to boarding and rooming houses. Apparently the commission's plan would accomplish the purpose of opening private homes to warworkers without permanently breaking down zoning restrictions. The proposed amendment to the Rent Control Act is necessary to assure citizens who take warworkers into their homes that such tenants may be evicted without a court order if they become obnoxious.

Much greater use of private homes for billeting warworkers has become a necessity because of the inexcusable delay in the housing program. It is not to be supposed, however, that this resort to private homes will entirely take the place of the dormitories that have not been built. Thousands of young girls are flocking to Washington to work for the Government with no assurance of lodging. At present there is no place except the Y. W. C. A. where they can find temporary accommodations, and that institution was long ago overwhelmed by demands that it cannot fill. Temporary quarters for such newcomers are desperately needed.

As a means of mitigating the consequences of delay in the construction of dormitories, why doesn't the Government temporarily convert a hotel or two near Union Station into special receiving quarters for young Government workers who have no idea of how to find a room in this overflowing metropolis? Such a conversion could be effected without disturbing the managements of the hotels. Of course, the Government would have to pay a subsidy to make up the difference between what stenographers can pay and the regular rates. But that would be a small penalty for its unexampled bungling of the housing program.

Up To The Army

Right from the start there has been an unfortunate tendency to dwell on the make-shift character of the Army's new Specialists' Corps. It is true that its members will be civilians, many of them without previous military training. It is also true that one of the reasons for the formation of the corps is to relieve experienced combat officers who are now tied down to desk jobs. But the main emphasis should be put on the fact that the Army is in the process of acquiring expert civilian personnel with special knowledge and experience. The Specialists' Corps indeed is a very important leaf out of the German copybook of warmaking.

Obviously, then, more is involved than the mere enlistments of the best available civilian replacements. The Army now has a chance to exploit the war usefulness of a group of men whose very presence in the Specialists' Corps will be a guarantee of superior ability. It should build up the organization without delay. Of course, it will take some time for the specialists themselves to get used to the Army way of doing things. Nor is there any doubt that they will be confronted by more red tape than they ever had to cope with in their previous civilian capacities. Yet one gauge of their usefulness will surely be their ability to find out where and when to cut through red tape.

It has been said again and again that this is a quartermaster's war, calling above all for magnificent organization behind the lines. The men in the Specialists' Corps may be depended on to seek out every conceivable short cut as a means of increased military efficiency. In the national interest the Army simply cannot afford to have their efforts stymied by traditional ways of doing things or by abortive caution on the part of their official superiors.

RIDERS

As I was riding happily
Between a woodland and a sea
To where kind love awaited me,
A sudden heavy chillness came
As if all praise was done, all blame,
And even memory of my name . . .

"Death may not hurt," my own voice said,
"And after all, when I am dead,
There is an end to hate and dread:
O dear fresh wind that I come through
And sweet green leaves and long-loved blue,
Here is an end to loving you . . ."

And then the mood dropped like a cloak
And, shivering where warm sunlight broke,
I gasped and sprang as if I woke.

I think somewhere some woman, riding
To where her last hard hour was hiding,
And I in this bright lane abiding,
Each found the mood the other lost,
On some strange ether tuned and crossed
Where beating human thoughts are tossed;

So she in her black hour might go
Smiling and happily and slow
To that hard death she had to know,
And I, so safe, so free, this day,
With strong kind love to be my stay
Could bear her load that last short way.

Outmoded Laws

I own a light car. It has four pre-Pearl Harbor tires and a pre-Cretan spare. The rubber mat on the front boards weighs ten pounds.

Last week was my car inspection period. Inspectors told me that no substitute material such as linoleum or asphaltic fibre would be accepted in place of rubber for the front floor covering and that consequently no such mats were being manufactured. The rule was stated that if a small hole was cut in a portion of the front floor mat a complete new rubber mat would be required and that if I turned my mat in on the rubber drive my car would be turned down for failing to pass inspection. Local police regulations were universal on this point all over the country, he said, rubber shortage or not, war or not.

There are 27 million cars, each today required by local police laws to have a 10-pound perfect rubber mat on the front floor boards. Two hundred and seventy million pounds of rubber are required to be tied up doing a job that scores of substitutes could do just as well but won't be permitted to do.

I ask you, do we need centralized administrative "dictatorship" to deal with problems like this or should the dictatorship continue to be exercised by local police executives?

Plea For Understanding

Thanks for publishing the article "Hate Training" in last Friday's paper. It is really refreshing to read from such writers in this war sick world. It recalls a story I once read about some noted American writer, but I cannot recall his name. He was standing at his front gate talking to an old friend when a man chanced to pass in the side walk.

The author remarked, "I have always hated that man."

To which his friend replied, "Do you know him?"

The author answered, "No, I don't, come to think of it, but probably I might like him if I did."

After all I guess it is mostly a question of understanding folks to like them.

People who understand seldom hate others; and if nations could only come to understanding wars would end. Let's all pray for understanding.

Poison Ivy

I am writing this letter on behalf of the many young boys and girls who live in the same section as I do. In the back of our apartment house there is a playground, where the children play, that is infested with poison ivy. Since the children play there daily they are very apt to contract it. I don't think there is any reason why this condition should exist in a city such as Washington.

Odell Waller

With regard to your editorial in today's paper, on the Waller case, may I be permitted to point out one or two misconceptions indicated in your statement.

Odell Waller had no previous trouble and was known in his neighborhood as a hard-working, respectable family man with little education or opportunity.

Waller was being cheated, or at least he felt that he was being cheated, out of his wheat crop. His aged mother and wife had been evicted from the plantation shack by Oscar Davis. We have every reason to believe that when Waller went to try to collect his wheat he was in great fear. The fact that after Waller's conviction, Oscar Davis' sons did bring 52 sacks of wheat to the mother and wife of Odell Waller shows that he had a share coming.

There is no competent testimony to show that Davis was first shot in the back. On the contrary, it is fair to presume from all the facts known in the case that Davis threatened Waller when he demanded his wheat, reached his hand in his pocket which Waller thought held a gun and Waller started shooting. The first shot or two may have spun Davis around or he may have turned to run and then there were two shots lodged in the lower part of his back. There were two bullets causing scalp wounds in the front of his head which would have been impossible to have been inflicted after the back wounds.

Specific evidence has been offered that the jury which tried Waller was selected from a list of qualified voters from which all nonpayers of poll taxes were systematically excluded. We made a complete study of the voting lists and the jury lists and established beyond doubt from the official court records and election lists that all members of the jury which tried Waller had paid their poll taxes for three years past and that nonpoll tax payers were excluded, which means in Pittsylvania County that 80 per cent of the population including all members of Odell Waller's economic group were ineligible for jury service. If this doesn't constitute discrimination, we don't know what does.

Gov. Darden has shown a generous and humane attitude toward this case and we are all grateful for his consideration.

Proper Emphasis

Crime is the result of causes. Often these causes have been operating and growing stronger since adolescence, or even birth. Frequently criminal tendencies can be eradicated during adolescence and youth by experts in the field of criminology and psychiatry. Often antisocial tendencies are difficult for the layman to discover. Why not compel every child in school to be examined each semester by a psychiatrist and/or a criminologist? Many a criminal tendency would be nipped in the bud.

A teacher or social worker may see signs of criminal tendencies developing in children, yet in most communities he is powerless to compel action unless a crime has actually been committed. Then it is often too late. Under such a system society must wait until the person with a tendency toward being a pyromaniac has set fire to a home or property before anyone can compel action. Such a conception keeps society one move behind in the battle with crime.

The primary function of the police, the penal system and the legal system is the protection of society. Society can best be protected by placing the major emphasis on stopping the crime before commission, rather than placing it on the punishment of the criminal after the commission.

Some Cause For Nurse Shortages

We ask you why should a young girl enter training? Why should she put in three years of hard work—be strictly disciplined and receive no money and very little thanks, when on the other hand the Government makes other positions far more attractive? Now don't get us wrong. It isn't that we don't consider the W. A. A. C.'s a worthy organization. It's not that we don't like our own profession nor that we're not glad to be of service. It's just that it makes us disgusted, and downright angry, to read on one page of the newspaper articles about the shortage of nurses and on the next page columns and columns of the things to be done and things to be furnished for the W. A. A. C.'s. Is there no wonder there is a shortage? Why should any girl give up her home life, her friends, her time and her pleasures when she can keep all of those and at the same time receive the glory and, honor, besides her hose, anklets and girdles?

Oh, yes, there is a shortage of nurses. Naturally. We receive $70 a month plus maintenance. We buy our hose, our undies and our girdles, if we can get them. If we want summer uniforms we buy them also. Our white uniforms are furnished if they can fit us and if there are any in stock at the time. If not, furnish your own. We receive our rank and are instructed right then and there not to associate with noncommissioned men. Our social life is practically nil—you know there's no USO for nurses. When once we acquire full uniforms we stay in them—day and night. Not so with the W. A. A. C.'s, who are going to be able to wear street clothes for social functions and evening wear.

We realize our profession is one in which we are quiet, serene and dignified. In which we are taught to give and give, and then give some more. We make sacrifices which are never known to the public; we carry on because there's something gratifying which makes you stick it out no matter how hard it is to take. But—there does come a time when things get a little too hard to bear. We don't like articles denouncing our profession. Hinting to the public we're shirkers and saying we're not willing to do our bit. Why not put the facts side by side? Let's be practical and use common sense. Why not make the nursing profession more attractive?

If you were a young girl 18 or 19 years old, which would you choose—(1) three long years of training with no future ahead except longer hours, harder work and little pay; (2) or a short business course with a future of eight hours a day, pleasant work and surroundings and good pay; (3) or join the W. A. A. C. for a six-week training period, receive lots of honor, glory, three uniforms, hose, anklets and such, Army ranks and fair pay?

And, oh, yes, remember you're not supposed to have any love life, either. No marriages for Government nurses, you know. After all, we are human. No one can certainly expect any young girl full of pep, vim and vigor, and with a love of life, to give it all up, even though she does have the courage and strength to bear untold hardships.

A shortage of nurses there will always be as long as it is seen fit to outfit completely W. A. A. C.'s and to make Government positions far more attractive than any kind of nursing ever could be.

It all boils down to this: we're hundreds of thousands strong, we're willing to fight and fight hard, we're ready to sacrifice all we have, but we've got to have material and a little hope and a little thanks to keep us going.

The Post Impressionist

Hey-y-y Lock!

"Hey-y-y, lock!" The echo, "Hey-ay-ay, l-l-lock!" comes floating, ghost-like, from the rocky crags overhanging the bend of the canal. The barge captain cups his hands and shouts his warning again to the lock tenders of the old Chesapeake & Ohio Canal. The driver leads the old nag along the towpath, drawing the barge up to the lock, while wavelets ripple off the bow. Frogs accelerate their croaks, hailing the passage of the wooden monster, while its cargo of passengers chatter comment on the scenery. Leisure and calm soften the atmosphere.

It was a tonic, watching these "refugees" from the jittery hubbub of wartime Washington board the barge at the Old Angler's Inn, near Widewater, then gradually unbend and grow friendly as the barge moved around the bends of the canal, between moss-grown banks, under cathedral-like, vaulted sycamores, past well-kept farms, beneath rocky cliffs. Strained expressions relaxed. Conversations budded and flowered among strangers "all in the same boat"—and all anxious to recapture the feeling of being home folks, of being warmly in tune, too, with Mamma Nature, far from the harried, hurried Capital of a militant democracy.

The chirp of crickets, the pastoral scenes along the banks, the gliding motion of the barge as it progressed up the canal, made one murmur grateful "Peace! It's wonderful!"

Only when the barge approached the lock was there evidence of excitement. Everyone arose from the benches on the deck to watch the captain-steersman guide the barge between the narrow walls of the lock chamber, which allowed only 3 inches leeway on each side.

A colored lad, one on each side of the miter gate, throws his weight against a timber beam, closing a heavy wooden wall behind us. Iron paddle gates are then opened in the bottom of the "wall" facing us. A swift gurgle of water; boom! boom! Our barge trembles, scraping, climbing up the sandstone walls of the lock. Geysers of water shoot up the sides, spraying several passengers. They gasp, and dash for center seats. Watching the "horizon" of the lock, 8 feet overhead, we see curious folk on the bank appear gradually, head first, and the shells of the ruined lockhouses come into view, chimney downward.

We bob up, like great corks, until we reach the water level in the next stretch of waterway. Some passengers disembark to take pictures and stretch their legs, while walking up the towpath to meet us at the next lock.

When the forward gates are ajar our barge proceeds, overtaking stragglers on the path who have stopped to chat with fishermen, hikers and natives of this section. Or they are seen to wander off into quiet bypaths, picking wild flowers and reappearing with "beggar's lice" dotting their clothing.

The historian and naturalist, being among the regular "crew," point out interesting spots along the route: Here sharpshooters popped away at Confederates on the Virginia side of the Potomac; there are the ruins of our captain's birthplace, and there is the Great Falls Tavern, where tight-trousered dandies strutted about, whirling their canes and tapping beaver hats to curtsying young ladies in hoop skirts, with parasols twirling over their shoulders.

The tavern, looming over Lock 20 like some white, dilipidated ghost from America's past, may soon be restored as a musuem. Its exhibits will help visitors visualize the history and importance of the canal. It was first constructed in 1785 by the Potowmack Company, with George Washington as its first President. Later it became the Chesapeake & Ohio Canal, under the blessing of John Quincy Adams, sixth President of the United States, who lifted the first shovelful of earth, July 4, 1828, at Little Falls, and dedicated the "Eighth Wonder the World" to the service of America. An assortment of drawings and photographs will portray the halcyon days of the canal, when it stretched 184 miles west to Cumberland, Md.

The C. & O. Canal is rich in American lore. It carried immigrants to the borders of the fabulous West; when they became farmers, miners and manufacturers it transported their products East; it crossed the Potomac River, on the old wooden Augeduct Bridge (the stone pilings are still visible, west of Key Bridge); it carried supplies and Federal troops to fight the rebels.

Hour slowly envelops hour, each moment resting, refreshing. Forgotten is the hectic hurry of Washington streets, the screech of traffic, the maddening clatter of office machines, the corridors and partitioned cubbyholes of Government "temporaries," the crowded city, worrying over the world's woes; even one's personal troubles with gas and tire rationing boards.

Everything is forgotton while the past weaves its spell, and we hear of Charles Dickens' humorous account of travel on the American canals. We hear of captains and their families journeying up and down the waterway, the children diving into the canal for refreshing swims, picking wild flowers to sell in the towns, driving the mules along the towpath, living joyously, fully, during summer vacations aboard the canal boat. It must have been a perfect kids' vacation, we reflect . . . and nostalgia hands around some rose-colored glasses.

At the end of our trip the historian recites the ditty which crews roared as their boats left the last lock and the mule teams jogged into the home stretch above Georgetown:

I was comin' down the Log
Wall an' give a mighty yell—
The hames catched afire an' the driver catched hell;
The cap'n played the fiddle; the steersman played the flute,
The cook poured coffee in the old man's boot—
Git along, ole bones, git along.

Allies To Enemies

Brussels, September 16, 1939

WITHIN two weeks after the declaration of war by Britain and France on Germany, the Russians and Japanese have agreed, according to the press reports, for an armistice on the Far Eastern front. Thus not only has Hitler closed his eastern door in Europe, but he has solidified his position by composing the differences between Japan and Russia.

From Report to the Secretary of State

Brussels, October 12, 1939

THE Diplomatic Corps and official circles here have become acutely Moscow-conscious. The Russian Bear has taken a handsome revenge for being thrown out of Munich.

The Moscow-Berlin pact is generally conceded to be the greatest tragedy in the development of this war situation. The shadow of the Soviets, reaching from the Oslo group down over Poland and into the Balkans, has brought new fear in addition to the old German menace. Speculation is high as to whether the Russians will come to aid Hitler on the western front. Just as there was a tendency to belittle Russia a year ago, there is now a tendency to exaggerate her purpose at the present time.

I find that my own judgment is in accord with neither of the two extremes. I am disposed to the opinion that the Russian policy may be exactly what she proclaims it to be; namely a desire to establish peace in Europe if she can, and particularly on her eastern border, and in addition thereto to develop her own resources secure from attack of the capitalistic western nations. To effect this security, naturally, the Soviets would desire to have their western line shoved as far west from Moscow and the Don Basin as possible, as a protection against a possible enemy Germany.

IT IS also vital to her strategic defense and economic and national development that her access to the sea shall be protected by open water sea bases the year round, and hence her attitude toward the Baltic countries. It may be quite possible that the Soviets are sincere in their statement that they wish to give complete independence and autonomy to these various countries, but desire to secure by amicable arrangement naval bases that will protect them against possible future German attack.

Their attitude toward Turkey and the Dardanelles, as well as their attitude toward Constanta and the Black Sea, is equally consistent with a pacific intent and not a war purpose to aid Germany.

Stalin's whole plan since 1926 has been to develop an internal economy that would be self-sufficient and create a socialistic communistic community that would be a model for the world; and he said to me himself that they figured that was a man-sized job and as much as they could do, without trying to run the whole world.

Brussels, November 28, 1939.

THREE months have now elapsed since "the state of war" was declared by England.

It has developed many surprises.

Apparently the Moscow agreement envisaged a complete restoration of the geographical and political spheres of tsarist Russia to the Soviets, and more, to wit: the uprooting and abandoning of the Baltic German civilization and life, as well as the restoration of Polish White Russia and Polish Ukraine to the U. S. S. R. The Soviets are willing to risk alienating world opinion by attacking Finland to complete the naval outpost fortification of Leningrad against possible future attack by an enemy, who can only be conceived to be their present ally, Germany. Such an anachronism seemed impossible a few months ago.

Nor would the well informed have conceived it possible six months ago that Germany would pay so high a price to Russia in order to close her eastern door when attacking Poland.

THE implied threat to England and France contained in Ribbentrop's Moscow statement that "consultations as to the necessary steps" to be taken jointly, unless the western nations stopped their war on Germany, had apparently no real basis in any agreement with Molotov. The "necessary steps" were not taken, or proved abortive. Instead of embarking on such action, Molotov declared the policy of the U. S. S. R. to be one of neutrality.

Last September it was stated to me that Stalin was resisting Hitler's effort to secure military and political penetration into Russia—this for the reason that the Russians did not trust Hitler. The full value of the Russian pact depends on the German ability to make it fructify through technical assistance in the organization of staff work and, particularly, industrial production.

Conditions now have been changed as between the two by the Finnish developments. Undoubtedly Hitler has made the most of it by playing both the Balkan and the Finnish situations to bring pressure on Stalin to accede to the arrangement that German engineers and technicians shall cooperate with the U. S. S. R. to get greater supplies to Germany. There are indications that the effort is successful and that Germany now has both military and industrial experts in Russia.

A FORMAL statement has been issued by the Moscow Foreign Office that the Bulgarian government had advised that it consented to the entry of German troops into Bulgaria, in order to "consolidate peace in the Balkans." The Soviet Foreign Office formally notified the Bulgarian Minister that it did not agree as to the correctness of the Bulgarian attitude; that this action led not to peace, but to an extension of the sphere of war, and that the Soviet government would not support the Bulgarian government in the execution of their present policy.

This is going pretty far in opposition to Hitler's plans.

WENT on visit to Madison for the June commencement of the University of Wisconsin, and stayed with President and Mrs. Dykstra.

After the alumni dinner and my broadcast, when we were driving up to the president's house, a young man came dashing up over the lawn and stopped us as we were going into the house. He was the correspondent for the United Press. He told us the startling news that Hitler had attacked the Soviet Union. It was like a bombshell.

He wanted a statement from me. I said that it was all to the good for the Western democracies. I told him that, in my opinion, the extent of the resistance of the Red army would amaze the world; and even though Hitler were to take a substantial part of the Ukraine, his troubles would then just begin. It was plain common sense for us to give the Soviets all the aid we could, because they were fighting the greatest danger to our security in the world, the menace of Hitler's aggression and lust for world domination.

This statement was widely carried by the press, as it was directly contrary to practically all of the opinions of the best military experts. It was, however, founded not upon hearsay. It was based upon what I myself had seen in Russia.

Washington, July 7, 1941.

TO MY amusement, I find that my friend, Lindberg, is quoted that he would prefer Nazism to Communism.

It would be a desperate choice to make, but there is a very wide difference between the two. We should be eternally grateful that we do not have to make the choice. Ours is the best form of government yet devised by man, and democracy is not yet dead. It is a defeatist attitude and not good Americanism, in my opinion, to talk about the necessity of choice as between the two.

Both Germany and Soviet Russia are totalitarian states. Both are ruthless in their methods. There is one distinction, however, and that is as clear as black and white. It can be simply illustrated.

If Marx, Lenin, or Stalin had been firmly grounded in the Christian faith, and if by reason of that fact this communistic experiment in Russia had been projected upon that basis, it would probably be declared to be one of the greatest efforts of Christian altruism in history to translate the ideals of brotherhood and charity as preached in the gospel of Christ into a government by men. The point is that the Christian religion could be imposed upon the communistic principles without doing violence to its economic and political purposes, the primary one of which is based upon "the brotherhood of men."

Applying the same test to Nazism, the difference between the two is clear. The principles of the Christian religion cannot be imposed upon the Nazi philosophy, without destroying the political base of the state. Nazi philosophy makes the state superior to the Christian religion and is in fact a religion in itself. For that end it has tried to destroy Christianity in Germany through persecutions.

The Nazi state is deified. To it, war is a virtue. Brotherly love, charity, justice and Christian virtues are indications of weakness and decadence if they conflict with the utilitarian needs of the state. The communistic ideal is that the state may evaporate and be no longer necessary as man advances into a perfect brotherhood. The Nazi ideal is the exact opposite—that the state is the supreme end of all.

Bad News

By Ernest Lindley

Clears The Air

THE NEWS from Libya and Russia has blown away the mist of false optimism which hung over the United States a few weeks ago. This optimism was not shared by top officials. A few indiscreetly said, in one way or another, that things looked better. These comments helped to mislead citizens who perhaps had never realized how bad the immediate future had seemed to these officials.

But even the pessimists had not expected the British to get thrown out of Libya so quickly. Apparently almost everything went wrong. The British were outnumbered; the German 88 mm. gun on self-propelled mounts was too powerful for them. They were also outmaneuvered. The British and allied forces were scattered, in the effort to hold various strong points. They were beaten in detail by a force which probably was not as large numerically as the defending troops. The German plane-tank team operated with great efficiency. The R. A. F. on the other hand, employed its planes to strike at the German supply lines. In this it had very considerable success and at one point apparently had Rommel in a tight spot for lack of fuel and other supplies. Then sandstorms halted the R. A. F. strafing and permitted Rommel to replenish his stores. The German mobile repair units were evidently extremely efficient in keeping tanks and wheeled vehicles in operation. The fall of Tobruk came with startling suddenness, although several British sources had acknowledged doubt that it could be held for another long siege.

And this serious reverse, it must be remembered, occurred during a season of the year which, it used to be said, was too hot for fighting in the Northern Africa desert.

London reports indicate that at least some high ranking Britishers think the turn in Libya must further postpone the opening of a second front in Western Europe. However, the argument to the opposite effect can be, and is being made. The purpose in opening a second front in the West this year would be to divert Nazi strength from the Russian front and the Middle East. The more serious the Nazi gains in the East, the more pressing the need for a diversion in the West—as long as there is hope of saving the Russian army and the British position in Egypt and the Middle East. And now it is not only the Russians, but perhaps the British also, who need to have the pressure taken off the Eastern fronts.

In England the opening of a second front has become a political issue. There is a loud public clamor for action. In this country the public is silent, leaving the whole question to the high commands and their superiors, the President and the Prime Minister. Among the top military men, there is reason to think, the Americans have more strongly felt the need of opening a second front this year than have their British opposite numbers.

It takes six weeks or more to send reinforcements to Egypt. In a week or little more the same troops and equipments can be sent to England. And if the second front were located in northern France, small craft could ferry them across the Channel. Thus, the argument for a second front relies heavily on the shortage of shipping and naval escorts. The route across the North Atlantic, via England, is the shortest and quickest way of bringing American armed force to bear on the critical struggle in Europe this summer, and also to release the very considerable British armies now tied down to the United Kingdom.

But since the controversy over the second front began five months ago, the shipping situation has turned for the worse. The losses of the United Nations have been terrific, far greater than the commissioning of new ships and probably greater than new ships plus the tonnage gained by making more efficient use of ships already in service.

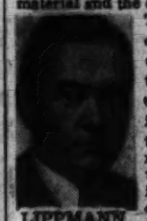
Few people outside the British and American general staffs and the President and Prime Minister Churchill know enough about the present state of war efforts of the two countries to venture a decision. But what has happened in the last two weeks supports the thesis, long entertained in the American high command, that this is the critical year of the war: that the next few months probably will determine whether Hitler can be licked in 1943 or 1944 or whether we must buckle down to a long inter-continental war of attrition.

Today And Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

The Quality Of The Command

THE REVERSE in Libya is a grim reminder that battles are not decided merely by the quantity of material and the courage of troops.



LIPPMANN

There is also the quality of the command. It is the most critical of all the factors in war. Yet in nations which do not fight until they are attacked, in nations which do not take seriously the business of war until they are actually at war, the selection of commanders who know how to win battles is rarely achieved except by the costly method of trial and error. The records which men make in the long years of a defensive peace do not, as so many British and American wars have shown, give a clear indication of how they will meet the test of battle.

Indeed the primary advantage of nations like Germany and Japan, which have a warrior caste, is that their commanders understand the war they are going to wage before they begin to fight it. It is this understanding of the kind of war they mean to fight which enables them to use an inferior quantity of resources to mobilize a superior quality of striking power at the point which they have selected. We, on the other hand, bound down by the rule that we must strike nowhere but must defend everywhere, must plan to aim at sheer quantities of material and men rather than at quality specifically prepared for a specific purpose. The commanders in the field and at home are men who prepare for preparedness in general, rather than men like Rommel who prepare for the precise tactical situation in the place where they mean to fight.

THIS QUALITATIVE unpreparedness is almost certainly the result of the fact that at the outset of a war of this kind the aggressor has a small, compact territory to defend (which no one is prepared to attack anyway) while his opponents have vast scattered territories which are military liabilities in that they have to be defended and yet furnish no force of their own.

In this global war, for example, Russia is great man power and an arsenal though not a self-sufficient arsenal. China is man power but not an arsenal. Britain is small man power and a very considerable arsenal. The United States is man power and an arsenal. But, except on the Russian front, the campaigns of the United Nations have had to be for the defense of regions like the South Pacific, Burma, and the Middle East which are military liabilities, originating almost no military power of their own, dependent upon power produced elsewhere and laboriously moved to the theater of war.

THIS SITUATION has confronted the governments, Mr. Churchill and Mr. Roosevelt, with a series of dilemmas as to which front to reinforce. The front they did not reinforce was the one most likely to be attacked: the front they did reinforce was likely to become a place where precious military forces were locked up and left in cold storage. Political considerations of a most compelling kind—from Australia, the Netherland Indies, Malaya, India—have prevented them from taking the purely military decision to concentrate all the available forces somewhere for the counter-offensive.

Thus none of the fronts has been held with decisive strength, and Hongkong, Singapore, Java, Manila, Burma, and Libya have fallen one after the other. Our enemies have had no such dilemma. They could pick the battlefield, ignoring all others, because they were operating in our territory and not in their own.

BUT WHILE this explains a great deal, including our qualitative unpreparedness for the kind of warfare we have had actually to conduct, the explanation does not justify us in taking an indulgent and resigned attitude. The United States, leaving Britain's failings to the British, was qualitatively unprepared at Pearl Harbor: With war imminent the commanders were not alert to the kind of attack which our own war games had demonstrated was feasible and therefore possible. The United States was qualitatively unprepared in the Philippines or, hours after war had begun, the lesson of Poland would not have been ignored and the airforce would not have been lined up on the ground where it could be destroyed.

The United States was qualitatively unprepared for the submarine war in the Atlantic, or the Navy Department which had plenty of money, would have realized two years ago the need for the quick production of a large number of escort vessels. The United States is qualitatively unprepared for the Aleutian campaign, or the Navy Department would not countenance the complacent explanation that the Japanese are there to save face after their defeat at Midway. For while the occupation of the islands may not be a matter of the first importance, the inspired comment is positively alarming in its frivolity.

THE DEFEATS we have been suffering are not wholly attributable to insufficient equipment and we shall deceive ourselves dangerously if we hug the delusion that they can be retrieved by the sheer quantity of material we can produce. Our defeats are attributable in part to the fact that at the highest level of the United Nation's command the political leaders have had to compromise their strategic decisions: they had not prepared the people to understand that to become strong somewhere it is necessary to make political sacrifices elsewhere.

Our defeats are attributable then to an excessive desire not to hurt the feelings of likable men, and of a club spirit which protects and even promotes men who have failed and are clearly inadequate. In war the lives of men and the fate of nations depend upon competence, and it is impossible in a war of this kind to hurt the enemy mortally if we are too amiable to hurt the feelings of men who ought to be weeded out.

Tragedy Of Tobruk

By Barnet Nover

The Lost Second Front

LAST YEAR the British garrison at Tobruk survived a siege of 241 days. Last week it fell after an assault of less than 24 hours.

NOVER

Is there a relationship between these two facts? Did the British assume, on the basis of past experience, that Tobruk was impregnable, particularly since, in the meantime, its garrison had been considerably expanded, its defenses greatly strengthened? Were they, in other words, again the victims of the Maginot Line mentality that has been responsible for so many disasters in this war?

The facts are not yet available that would enable us to form a correct judgment as to just why a nut that could not be cracked last year came apart so easily this time. It is fair to assume, however, from the large numbers of British troops and large quantities of materiel captured by the Axis forces at Tobruk that the British had set great store by Tobruk's defensive strength. Which leads to the further assumption that had the garrison at Tobruk been smaller and the forces available to General Ritchie larger the outcome of the fifth Libyan campaign might have been different.

In any event, the fact is clear that the fall of Tobruk, setting the cap on the British defeat in Libya, is a disaster of considerable magnitude—another Crete, possibly even another Singapore.

DURING RECENT months we have been hearing a great deal of talk about a second front. The necessity of establishing such a front has been accepted in principle by the British and American governments and their respective high commands. But while the Allies were making up their minds when and where to strike there was a second front in existence all the time. That second front was in Libya.

The Libyan front came into being in June, 1940, after Mussolini, envisaging the possibility of a speedy and inexpensive victory, brought Italy into the war on the German side. But aside from an Italian incursion across the Egyptian border to Sid Barrani nothing happened in Libya for some time. In December, 1940, however, General Wavell, with a handful of men, drove the Italians out of Egypt and swept across Cyrenaica to a point beyond Bengazi. Then came Hitler's invasion of Yugoslavia and Greece, making it necessary for the British to strip their forces in North Africa to a minimum. The result was that in March they were driven back to the Egyptian border.

Last November the tide of battle was again reversed. Again the British got as far as El Agheila. Again they had to strip their forces—this time to reinforce Singapore. And again they were driven back.

THE LIBYAN battle front has thus been for the British a battlefield of lost opportunities. Even at the peak of their strength there they never had any large numbers of men or great reserves of supplies. Yet the Libyan-Egyptian sector has been of steadily increasing importance.

Should Rommel be able to capitalize his recent victory and sweep across Egypt not only would the British fleet be driven out of the Eastern Mediterranean—Alexandria is the only decent naval base the Allies possess in that area—not only would Germany be astride one of the major routes to Asia and within reach of the oil fields of Irak, but the vital American air supply route to the Middle East, India and China would be threatened. And the repercussions of such a development would be felt in Turkey, in Vichy, in the Moslem world.

HITLER has never minimized the importance of the Libyan theater as the Allies appear to have done.

He might have assumed, in view of the enormous expenditure of men and material that was involved in the fighting on the Eastern Front, that the diversion of troops and supplies to Libya was wasteful. He did nothing of the kind.

All through the winter and spring convoys were sent across the Mediterranean to Rommel regardless of cost. And while the German high command refused to allocate any large number of planes for the defense of German cities bombed by the R. A. F. or reprisal raids on Britain, they permitted a lavish expenditure of air power in the attack on Malta.

Many planes were sacrificed in that assault. But Malta's importance as an offensive base was thereby reduced and a larger proportion of Axis convoys got through to Libya in consequence.

In Libya the Allies had a ready-made second front.

It is true that Egypt is a long distance from England and America, particularly with the Mediterranean closed. But it is nearer to both countries than Iran, India, Australia.

There was thus no inherent obstacle in the way of building up Egypt as a great offensive base against the Axis except the psychological.

Having twice failed to drive the Germans and Italians out of Libya, the British were not too sanguine of their capacity to do so if they tried again, although on both previous occasions they had attempted to have a boy do a man's job. Being preoccupied with the problem of a second front (which meant a second front in the west of Europe) they ignored the possibility that the purpose of such a second front might indirectly but nonetheless effectively be served by concentrating on Libya.

There were other hazards, mental and otherwise: The Cairo mentality which has its resemblances to the Singapore mind; the stupidity of the British colonial office bureaucrats who repeatedly have turned down the appeals for a Jewish army in Palestine, an army which had it been established when the idea was first proposed would today be of enormous value; the very real problem created by the existence of far-flung fronts each of them requiring to be supplied; the shipping shortage.

The tragedy of Tobruk is, however, not a British tragedy alone. It is a tragedy for all the United Nations. The disaster is not irremediable. It is nonetheless real. And unfortunately the end is not yet. Rommel is still on the march.

The Second Front Problem

By Mark Sullivan

WHAT IS written here is only for the information and interest of readers. It is not for the enlightenment of officials who make decisions. They have the responsibility, and they must supply the element of judgment. Also, they have later information, and more detailed, than can be had by anyone else.

In the decision being made by Prime Minister Churchill and President Roosevelt—about a "second front" and about the conduct of the war generally—a determining factor is shipping. Shipping is a limiting factor—it limits what can be done.

The figures about shipping are not all made public. Our Government gives out the number of ships sunk by submarines and mines off our coast, though not the tonnage. The British government withholds all figures about sinkings.

Two recent American figures about shipping are these: In a given month, 64 ships were sunk off our Atlantic Coast. In the same month, 58 new ship were built in our yards. The two figures almost offset each other. While the number of new ships is somewhat smaller than the number sunk, the new ships probably have a greater tonnage. So we may say that we are building as much tonnage as is being sunk off our Atlantic Coast. But when we say that, we say little.

The sinkings off our Atlantic Coast are only a part of the whole. There are sinkings in the Pacific by Japanese submarines, planes and other means of destruction. There are sinkings in European waters, the figures of which are not reported. Altogether, as of today, and for some months past, it is safe to make two statements:

First, we are losing ships faster than we are building new ones. "We" means not only the United States; it means also Britain and the other United Nations. Second, Germany is building new submarines faster than we are sinking them.

In this condition, can we—at this time or in the near future—set up a new front in Europe? In trying to answer this, we are again baffled by uncertainty about figures. Just what would a new front mean—how large an American expeditionary force to be sent to Europe? Call it two million, which is a low figure.

To send such a force to Europe, and to maintain it there, how much shipping would be required? About this, again, estimates vary, almost fantastically. By one of the lower estimates, maintaining an American army of two million in Europe, equipped according to modern standards, would be required the constant service of about half all the shipping America has. Can we spare half our shipping for that purpose at this time? Can we and Britain combined spare enough shipping to maintain two million American soldiers in Europe?

There are many other demands upon our shipping. Here is a partial list of places where American forces are stationed, which depend upon shipping for supplies: Iceland, Northern Ireland, England, Greenland, Newfoundland, several of the West Indies, Dutch Guiana in South America, the Panama Canal. Supplying the American forces at these places is a constant charge upon our shipping, in some cases helped by the shipping of Britain or other United Nations.

Here is a partial list of places in the Pacific where American forces are stationed and which are almost wholly dependent upon American shipping: Alaska, Dutch Harbor, Hawaii, Midway Island, Australia, New Caledonia.

There are other places to which we send lease-lend supplies, requiring ships, ours or that of our Allies. Most of these points are distant, the journeys there and back long and hazardous. They include Murmansk and the Persian Gulf, entry points of supplies for Russia; Northern Africa, India. There is further need for shipping between the United States and Latin America, to procure indispensable materials.

Considering the immense and widespread need for all the shipping we have, all that the United Nations combined have, is it practicable to set up at this time a second front in Europe? In answering this question, some may be tempted to depart from strict dependence upon the shipping now in existence; they may rely upon two hopes or expectations. One is that the United States from now on will build an enormous quantity of new shipping; the other is that our Navy will in time be able to check sinkings by the enemy.

But is it prudent to make decisions in reliance upon future expectations?

The decision should be a military one, strictly; not caused by sentimental considerations, or political ones. Sentimentally, it would be nice to tell Russia that a second front will be set up in 1942. Sentimentally and politically, it would be desirable to tell the people of France and the other conquered countries that there will be a second front before the present year ends. Other political considerations might be served by such an announcement. But the only sound basis for a decision about the time of a second front is the present facts and the present military situation.

Don't Let Your Dress Overshadow You

Try Mirror Test For Self-Analysis, Advises Singer

By Jane Driscoll
The Post Fashion Editor

Possibly you are one of the scores of women who have in their wardrobes at least one dress that is a total loss. Poor buying technique is usually the answer. Perhaps the dress was bought too hastily without the realization that it would have to make regular trips to the cleaners. Possibly it is a size too large because you had your heart set on the dress and took it, even though your proper size had been sold. Or, you may have flattered yourself that you could wear a size too small and now it embarrasses you.

Miss Antoine

These are times for wise buying. You cannot afford to have misfits in your wardrobe. It is a time for searching straight up to a full length mirror and getting acquainted with yourself. Find out who you are, what you really look like, where your bulges are and what your actual height is.

Guidance From a Star

This is the advice of Metropolitan Opera Soprano Josephine Antoine who is guest soloist tonight with the National Symphony Orchestra at the Watergate Concert. She says that the best way to start the hunt for the right clothes is to stand in front of a full length mirror to get a clear image of yourself in mind. "The fault most women have in purchasing becoming costumes, whether it be for daytime or evening," said this star, "is that very few of them see themselves in the gowns they contemplate buying. Instead, they are prone to visualize a Hedy Lamarr or a Marlene Dietrich glamorously clothed."

Miss Antoine also believes women should pay more attention to their own figure faults and not be carried away by attractive outfits. "Most women forget their own figures," she said. "They should study garments to see if the lines are appropriate for their particular build. A short woman, for instance, should steer away from selecting dresses with horizontal lines; she should be careful not to have the shoulder pads on her dresses too full. This tends to make her look even shorter than she is."

Up Best Points

After a woman has analyzed herself in a mirror, she should remember to buy clothes that enhance her best points, the singer points out. A woman becomes self-conscious and ill at ease, if her clothes do not fit well. She should feel comfortable in the clothes she wears and also be able to move around in them without feeling that a seam might burst, or that the skirt is too short, or that a bulge might show in the wrong place.

"Never hide yourself in your clothes, either," advises the singer, "but select garments that will allow your personality to rise above the attractiveness of the dress itself." Miss Antoine is cautious in selecting her own wardrobe, especially her concert gowns. They must be striking from the stage, yet not too "showy" for a party immediately afterwards. She depends on simple fitted lines, drop shoulders and full skirts, sometimes in filmy chiffon, for effects. A colorful decoration in her hair is often the only touch of color.

Barbara Britton, movie star, here models a type of dress that does the most for the figure and forms a background for the personality of the wearer. Thus, according to Josephine Antoine, Metropolitan Opera star, does a frock fulfill its true function. This very feminine dress of dark, flimsy lace is a practical style to buy as it may be worn more than one season. Lace, especially, is a good wartime investment as it looks new when it is old. Even old lace—the older the better—is in vogue these days.

The Gentler Sex

By Malvina Lindsay

Dollar-a-Year DeGoofey

ATTIRED in fur coat and toque, and fanning herself vigorously, Mrs. Henrietta DeGoofey, noted reformer, faced her press conference yesterday.

Mrs. DeGoofey

"Are you by any chance leaving for the Aleutian Islands or the Arctic Circle?" asked a foreign correspondent.

"No, I am merely trying to keep ahead of the styles," replied the intrepid head of the Do Something About It League. "When I found out that women were already getting into their little black dresses even before the Fourth of July, I thought it was high time to do something.

"Now, I had just gotten around to looking for a white hat—and, despairing of ever finding one, I might add—when I found that other women had stolen a march on me and were coming out in black satin.

A Fashion First In Winter Furs

"Now I have never been one to be caught napping where style was concerned, and as I have just accepted an appointment as a dollar-a-year woman, I knew I must do something at once to appear as smart, chic, soignee, sleek and sophisticated as possible. How could I go out over the country organizing and reorganizing women unless I was up to the minute in my attire?

"Therefore I decided I would take no risks on being behind in fashion but would get into my mid-winter furs at once."

"Who appointed you to your dollar-a-year post?" inquired a city desk special investigator.

"I appointed myself," was the reply. "I saw a job to be done and, finding no one else qualified, I named myself to do it."

"What will be your special racket—or I mean duties?" asked a representative of the Muckrakers Digest.

"Primarily I intend to be a co-ordinator of a lot of things that have not yet been coordinated. For instance, take gossip. My first enterprise will be to coordinate the gossip of the Nation.

"Which gossip?" asked a society columnist.

"The gossip relating to public personages and to the goings on in Washington. Now it is a lamentable fact that you can scarcely find any two spicy tales about persons or events that jibe. For instance, take all this hearts and powers talk about prominent people. One minute you hear that Senator Rant is carrying the torch for Minnie Mouse, the next that he is crazy about Dorothy Thompson. If a woman attains any prominence she is credited with admirers ranging from Mickey Rooney to Mahatma Gandhi. If a man comes before the public eye his name is coupled with everyone from Baby Sandy to Fanny Ward.

Gossip Should Be Standardized

"Now I think women—and men too, for that matter—should get together in these whisperings and that all of us at our parties should be telling the same tales about the same people. Take the stories told about Mrs. Roosevelt. At one bridge table she is conniving to be Empress of Shangri-La; at another she is going to run for dog-catcher of Greenwich Village. Now one thing I especially want to do is to coordinate and correlate all the chatterings about the Roosevelts."

Mrs. DeGoofey said that on her Nationwide tour she would hold public hearings at which all gossips would be invited to appear with their contributions. "By charging admission to these events I hope to raise enough money to build one battleship," she said.

The reformer also declared she would coordinate a number of other things—among them hors d'oeuvres. "I note there is no national coordinator of either hors d'oeuvres or canapes," she said. "As a result, women of the country are being driven crazy trying to outdo each other in making these dainties. Once we get these and all forms of cocktail and tea party refreshments standardized, we shall have a great deal more time for war work."

Learn to Relax And Enjoy Life to Fullest

By Ida Jean Kain

YOU can keep going on your nerves for just so long. Then something snaps. When it does, you require much longer to recoup your energy and hit your stride again than it would if you could relax in time.

Continued insomnia is a danger signal. Some of the best advice on getting to sleep that has come my way appeared as an editorial in a recent issue of the Journal of the American Medical Association. It was prefaced with a quotation by Dr. Josephine L. Rathbone, of Columbia University, who is a leading authority on relaxation. She says:

Rhythmic Exercises

"If we could learn how to balance rest against effort, calmness against strain, quiet against turmoil, we would assure ourselves of joy in living and psychological health for life."

The editor goes on to point out that psychologists believe the people who live to its fullest without working up tension—which gradually interferes with both efficiency and pleasure—have mastered four secrets.

They have learned to establish a rhythm in their activities, with great swings of effort alternating with repose. They have a clear-cut sense of values that enables them to minimize effort and strain. They can cut down on muscular and nerve tension at will. And they can fall asleep at the drop of a telephone receiver.

Sleep Inducing Tricks

If you can sleep, you have a pretty fair chance at doing the other things. It does no good to go to bed and grit your teeth and tell yourself "I must get to sleep!" But the doctor gives a list of sleep tricks that may work for you. Don't try to run through them all—that would keep you awake all night. Just experiment with one or two a night until you hit the right combination. Here is the list:

1. Cut down on the important things at which you are thinking about half an hour before retiring. Relax with Chinese checkers, or listen to some dreamy music.
2. Allow plenty of time for getting to bed—get out your clothes for tomorrow morning and take a leisurely bath.
3. If you read in bed, choose a book so dry that it bores you to sleep.
4. Try to clear your mind of fears, hates and worries and think about pleasant things.
5. Do some mental gymnastics. Make your mind hop around from one subject to another.
6. Have light bedclothes and loose sleeping garments—let your body feel free.
7. Take a cold bath and rub-down. Get into bed a bit damp and chilly. As you become warm and comfortable you should be able to relax. When you wake up in the night, kick back the covers and cool off. Then when you cover up and get comfortable, you are apt to drift off.
8. Try to breathe as you do when you sleep. That may ease your mind and calm your emotions. It does lessen tension in the stomach muscles.
9. Sink into your mattress and relax your muscles completely.
10. Get rested before you try to sleep. If you are really having insomnia trouble, go to bed an hour before you have any expectation of sleeping. Do this night after night to build up a reserve of energy and to fall into a sleep routine.

Mary Haworth's Mail

3-Year-Old Twin Boys' Mischievous Failure To Fall Asleep, Until Spanked, Drives Mother To Ask How to Cope; Threats and Cajolery Fail

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Can you please advise me how to cope with my 3-year-old twin sons, who won't sleep? There must be some way of handling this problem, other than by cajoling, threatening and finally spanking. I put them to bed at 1 o'clock for their afternoon nap; but often it is 2:30 before they have fallen asleep.

In the meantime, they have run through a performance of scampering to the window; of calling to me for a drink of water; asking for a blanket, etc., until finally my patience is worn thin and I spank them. Then they settle themselves. In the evening, it is the same thing all over again, and usually it is 10 o'clock before quiet reigns in their room.

I hope you will regard this problem as sufficiently important to merit your attention. I realize I am asking a great favor in soliciting your help in solving; but I have great faith in your judgment and feel that for the children's sake, I must find the answer. One last question: Can you recommend a book I might read, that would help me "keep ahead" of my exasperatingly lively little sons? Gratefully, L. B. M.

Situation Requires Executive Handling

DEAR L. B. M.: The easiest way of overcoming the children's habit of excited wakefulness, after being put to bed, would be to bunk them in separate rooms behind closed doors, for a while, for the afternoon nap—provided, of course, this can be managed. And it probably can; since, if they have a room of their own, this must mean that you, too, have your own bedroom, just across the hall from the general "living" quarters.

Isolate Dan in one room and Dick in the other. If you balk at having your bed disarranged, get a collapsible cot to unfold for the nap hour; or an old-fashioned sofa, or chaise lounge, (always a practical extra piece of furniture) for the child's use now, and your own use later on. If it has been your custom to snatch some rest on the flat of your back, when and if the children nap,—you may have to take it up during this e m e r g e n c y "reconditioning" period; or relax as best you can on the living room couch.

Be laconic and calm about introducing the corrective arrangement. By your own attitude you must prevent the innovation from becoming the occasion of hilarious commotion. Having unobtrusively prepared the new afternoon sleeping accommodations, tell them quietly, while preparing them for their nap: "Dick is going to sleep in my room this afternoon, where he won't disturb Dan. And where Dan can't disturb him." Then, be very explicit about the last drink of water, the last visit to the toilet, etc., before they are off to bed. Say: "Here is a drink for you, Dan; and you, Dick, so you won't need another before you wake. Have you been to the toilet, Dick? That's fine. Your turn next, Dan, while I put Dick in bed." March Dick off to your room, tuck him in, draw the shades and close the door, perhaps turning the key on your side as a final control measure—until you have stowed Dan away in his own bed.

This is only a good beginning. It would be a miracle if perfect peace and instantaneous sleep were to follow. Several days' systematic suppression of individual restlessness may be required to inculcate good sleep habits in both. The child in your room probably will immediately undertake a tour of exploration of his new quarters. Go in quietly at once, and put him back to bed, with the fewest possible words. Go in a dozen times, if necessary; gently but constantly ignoring conversational overtures; letting your actions alone proclaim your sole purpose, which is to promote a nap.

All further requests for special service—on the part of either child—or excuses to leave the room, must be consistently denied with a shake of the head and a hushing gesture of finger on lip. Deal out essential supervisory restraint to each child swiftly and quietly, as needed. And keep them apart—out of sight of and communication with each other—during the hour allocated to napping; even if this means keeping each door locked between restraining visits. This policy blandly and indefatigably enforced for several days should work wonders—soon sending them quickly to sleep, out of sheer boredom with their tedious isolation from each other.

At night, when they have been put to bed in their own room,—again, after strong emphasis has been quietly placed on the finality of last-minute preparations,—you (or their father) should "take over" as guardian of the peace until they fall asleep. Make a comfortable chair and a soft, well-shaded light in a far corner of the room, your "sentry box." On tucking them in, say simply: "Now, I am going to sit here and read (or knit) until you're both asleep." Settle down with an air of preoccupation in your own affairs, half turned away from them.

Whispers or giggling or restless twisting and turning may be ignored. But any attempt to get out of bed should be checked on the instant, by stepping quietly to the child's bedside and tucking him in again, with the low voiced statement: "Time for sleep." The answer is still a firm "No," to every wheedling request for extra service or privilege; no more bed coverings; no more trips from the room, etc. By being in full view, yet immovable in your purpose to maintain quiet, and devoid of emotional attentiveness,— you become very dull company, in addition to blighting their familiar expectation of nervous excitement. Soon they will readily accept sleep as the only solution of their frustration.

Your contribution to the solution of this problem must include: first, all the time necessary; and, second, inflexible calm. During the retraining period, you may have to give up all social engagements, both afternoon and evening. You must be Johnny-on-the-spot day after day. There must be no break in the new routine; and no transfer of sentry duty to a stand-in. After a week, 10 days or two weeks, when the boys realize that going to bed means going to sleep,—and no fooling!—and have dropped off to sleep two or three nights in succession, soon after hitting the pillow, you may say to them pleasantly, at nap time: "You know, I believe you boys have learned how to go to sleep by yourselves now. I am going to put Dick back in his own bed this afternoon." If the experiment goes well in the afternoon, put them to bed at night with the remark: "Since you were such good boys this afternoon, mother is going to trust you to be good boy tonight. I am going to turn out the light and go sit with Daddy." If they break over, go quietly back to the reconditioning routine; and keep it up until the lesson sticks; as it will in time.

Now, about a book that sheds light on your bafflement; Grace Langdon's, "Home Guidance of Young Children" is acclaimed by experts in the field of child management as perhaps the best volume available on the subject. No doubt the public library has it; or you could order it through any good bookstore. M. H.

Wear Neckline to Flatter Face

"Women should pay as much attention to fashion necklines in relation to types of faces as they do to hairdress. Necklines serve a very particular purpose in adding to or detracting from beauty."

These are not words from a world-famous designer, but from beauty expert Wally Westmore, director of make-up for Paramount studios.

Westmore justly contends that women with long, thin necks and long faces should avoid the V neck in dress. "These are the faces that need a higher neckline—the slit type; the soft, close-fitting little round collar; crisp jabots; close-to-the-throat roll collars. Adhering to these neckline fashions will tend to minimize length and thinness of face and throat, create an illusion of fullness.

The woman with an angular jaw should avoid square necklines. "The face," says Westmore, "over this type of neckline becomes a continuation of a square pattern, and its particular fault is emphasized."

In opposition to the thin neck, the fat, short neck should be complemented with V necklines and away-from-the-throat treatments. Here, the close neckline overemphasizes size and lack of length, tending toward the appearance of a head resting solidly on the shoulders. "Too often," says Westmore, "the woman with this type of neck insists on wearing bead chokers. This particular form of jewelry only attracts attention to an already obvious fault."

Capital Whirl

by Hope Ridings Miller

EMERGING TODAY from his incognito status, the youngest monarch ever to visit Washington will start his official Capital calendar . . . with a cup of tea at the White House.

In the absence of the First Lady, whose own crowded schedule will have her in New York at that hour, Mrs. Cordell Hull will receive His Majesty King Peter II of Yugoslavia, Foreign Minister M. Mintchich, the Yugoslav Minister and Mme. Fotitch, and a few other members of the Yugoslav Legation staff.

Mrs. Roosevelt won't see His Majesty at all . . . and she has an idea he won't mind a bit. "He's so young," she said at her press conference yesterday, "that I hardly think it would thrill him to meet an old lady." She added, incidentally, that a visiting king at the White House is no more trouble than anyone else, "except that a king takes up more room." Reason for that, she went on to say, is that a monarch has to have both a bedroom and a sitting room, since so many people usually are waiting around to confer with him.

The White House dinner tonight will be a stag affair—"black tie," of course, in keeping with the war-and-warm idea. Because of his country's plight, King Peter will be feted with as little fanfare as possible, although when the calendar is finished down to the final function, his Washington round will be as complete as that arranged for any other monarch.

Host in His Own Official Household

The State Department has firmly declined to reveal an hour-by-hour program for His Majesty. Only in a general way have reports been released as to what he will do, and when. After an overnight visit at the Executive Mansion, King Peter will move across the street to Blair House tomorrow morning. He will be honored at a dinner to be given by the Secretary of State and at a luncheon by the National Press Club. Members of the Newspaper Women's Club will fete him at tea, and he will address the Senate and shake hands with members of Congress en masse.

KING PETER

Four fetes, at least—maybe more—are on schedule at the Yugoslav Legation during His Majesty's Washington visit. At legation parties he will, of course, be host in his own official household, in keeping with the kingly custom. There are to be two men's luncheons and the Saturday evening reception, which will be preceded by a large dinner.

Although crested invitations to the reception went out to several hundred members of Capital officialdom and top-ranking members of the Diplomatic Corps, the party is to be no long-white-glove affair. Cards of admission sent to guests carry the notation "black or white dinner jacket," which means women included certainly won't be wearing trailing evening gowns and six-button kid gloves, while their escorts appear in black-tie attire.

Trips to Arlington Cemetery, Mount Vernon and Annapolis are also on His Majesty's current calendar; and, according to the State Department release, "he will then proceed to New York City, where various functions are being planned in his honor."

So much for the official round. The unofficial one seems to be entirely off the record; but I understand at least one, and probably two, strictly private parties, have also been worked onto His Majesty's calendar . . . which, it seems to me, is as it should be.

Foreign Minister At Dutch Embassy

Whether Queen Wilhelmina of the Netherlands will meet President and Mrs. Roosevelt in Washington or at Hyde Park, or probably at both places before her visit is finished, was a subject Mrs. Roosevelt declined to discuss at her press conference yesterday. All she said was, "I'm not sure."

Anyway, Her Majesty is not expected to come here—if at all—until the end of July at the earliest, and nobody will be surprised if her visit takes place even later than that. Arriving in Washington yesterday afternoon, however, was the Netherlands Foreign Minister, Dr. Eelco Nicholas Van Kleffens, who has visited here twice before and frankly admits he is "beginning to feel quite at home here."

Dr. Van Kleffens, whose current visit is presumably connected with Queen Wilhelmina's official visit later, is the guest of Netherlands Ambassador Loudon. Mme. Loudon, incidentally, is vacationing in Nonquit, Mass., and the Ambassador probably will join her there later for a short sojourn while Dr. Van Kleffens goes to Lee, Mass., to confer with Queen Wilhelmina and Crown Princess Juliana.

CUFF NOTES: En route to Brazil is Ambassador Carlos Martins, who left Washington on Monday afternoon and is flying to Rio de

Smart-Dawson Wedding in Alexandria

In a twilight ceremony in the garden of her parents' home in Alexandria, Va., Miss Virginia Cary Dawson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. S. Cooper Dawson, became the bride last evening of the Rev. Frank F. Smart, jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank F. Smart of Milton, Mass. Chaplain William N. Thomas of the Naval Academy performed the ceremony at Cameron, Seminary Hill, in Alexandria.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, wore a gown of white organdy under a finger-tip veil of illusion trimmed with orange blossoms. She carried a loose sheaf bouquet of white roses, white larkspurs and gypsophelia.

The bridesmaids, Mrs. Donald Macdonald of Birmingham, Ala., and Mrs. Thomas W. Ruggle of Wallingford, Pa., set off their white dotted swiss dresses with bouquets of picardy gladioli and blue delphinium. Dressed like the bridesmaids was Miss Mary Forrest Azbriskie of Seminary Hill, Alexandria, who carried an old-fashioned nosegay of garden flowers.

The Rev. Charles H. Douglass of Tuscaloosa, Ala., served as best man, and the ushers were Dr. Blake Loring and Lieut. S. Cooper Dawson, jr., U. S. N. R.

Following the ceremony a reception was held, after which the couple left on their wedding trip. They will make their home at the Presidential Gardens in Alexandria. The bridegroom attended the United States Naval Academy and the Virginia Theological Seminary in Alexandria, Va.

British Attache To Marry Soon

Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Moffatt of Buenos Aires announce the engagement and approaching marriage of their daughter, Mrs. Phoebe Marianne Baddeley Totten Brown, to Maj. Reginald A. F. Williams, Assistant Military Attache at the British Embassy.

The bride-elect, who arrived in this country recently from England, came to Washington this week and is completing plans for a simple ceremony here this weekend.

Major Williams is the son of Dr. Tom A. Williams, former Washington psychiatrist, and Mrs. Williams, who now make their home in New Orleans. He passed much of his childhood in this city and has been at his present post with the British Embassy since September.

Buels Mark Silver Anniversary Aided by Jubilee Committee

A silver-trimmed wedding cake centering the dining room table, a handsome array of silver gifts, and a gala gathering of close friends accented a 5-to-8 reception yesterday afternoon when Mr. and Mrs. Walker S. Buel celebrated their twenty-fifth wedding anniversary.

Also on hand, full force and in fine fettle, was the Buel Silver Jubilee Committee, which stayed in the background for the first half of the party, and then came forward to run the show according to its well-laid plan.

Capital officialdom, the Washington press corps—with special emphasis on the Gridiron Club, of which the host is a prominent member—relatives and other friends attended the informal fete, which was planned as a small gathering but assumed sizable proportions before it was over. A number of those present remembered the evening rites 25 years ago in Delaware, Ohio, where the former Sakie Prout became the bride of Walker S. Buel. The ceremony took place at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. S. C. Prout, and the wedding cake at the reception was almost as large as the one cut for guests at the "silver wedding" yesterday.

For a couple of hours the anniversary celebration yesterday proceeded along the usual lines of late afternoon gatherings. Guests, received informally, gathered in congenial groups and lingered around to enjoy the pleasant affair as long as possible.

Mrs. Buel Gets Medal For Valor

Then the Buel Silver Jubilee Committee took over.

This group, comprised of a few close friends of the host and hostess, stepped to the fore and demanded that both the Buels retire to the background and do as they were told. James L. Wright then took over the spotlight to make a presentation speech. He closed by handing over to Mrs. Buel a medal "for valor—above and beyond the call of duty."

Phelps H. Adams, jr., next on the program, read his latest poem, "The Buel Hindsight Saga," which presented a summary of the past quarter of a century in the Buel household.

There were other acts and interludes before the "Jubilee Committee" finally turned the party back to the host and hostess, but the climax of the impromptu program was the presentation of a handsome silver tea-service tray to Mr. and Mrs. Buel.

Names written on the card attached indicated that members of the "Jubilee Committee" included Edwin W. Gableman, chairman, and Mrs. Gableman; Mr. and Mrs. Franklyn Waltman, Mr. and Mrs. A. P. Reeves, Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Z. Henle, Mr. and Mrs. Phelps H. Adams and Mr. and Mrs. James L. Wright.

Two Tea Services On Display

Incidentally, among the gifts on the buffet table were two complete silver tea services, one of which had belonged to Mr. Buel's grandmother, and the other to his mother.

Among guests at the party, in addition to those already mentioned, were Representative and Mrs. Dow W. Harter, Representative and Mrs. John Vorys, Undersecretary of the Treasury and Mrs. Daniel Bell, Mr. and Mrs. Merle Thorpe, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Henning, Mr. and Mrs. Paul Cromelin, Mr. and Mrs. Paul Hodges, Mr. and Mrs. Donald Richberg, Mr. and Mrs. Emil Hurja, Col. and Mrs. W. S. Culbertson, Maj. and Mrs. Albert Warner, Mr. and Mrs. Byron Price, Capt. and Mrs. William Granat and others.

Only regret in connection with the entire party was that neither Buel son could be present. Walker, jr., is working on the Cleveland Plain Dealer at the home office, and Meredith is at the University of North Carolina.

Lady Dixon Arrives Here To Join Husband

Arriving in Washington yesterday to take over her duties as chatelaine of the Australian Legation, was Lady Dixon, whose husband, the Australian Minister, Sir Owen Dixon, has been at his post here for several weeks.

Lady Dixon came in from the West Coast by train, where she had arrived from Australia by troopship. Accompanying her were her four children, Franklin, aged 20; Edward, 18; Betty, 13, and Anne, 8.

Her husband succeeded Dr. Herbert Vere Evatt as Minister. Dr. Evatt was the ad interum Minister between Richard Casey's departure to the Middle East and Sir Owen's arrival from Australia.

Carls Celebrate Silver Wedding At Reception

Celebrating their silver wedding anniversary, Mr. and Mrs. Edmund Otto Carl entertained yesterday at a 5-to-8 o'clock reception in their home in Rollingwood.

Receiving the several hundred guests with Mr. and Mrs. Carl were her sister, Mrs. John E. Andrews, and his brother, Louis Carl, both of whom were wedding attendants at their marriage 25 years ago. Early summer flowers decorated the house where Miss Ruth Carl, the daughter of the household, assisted.

Assisting in the dining room were Mrs. Paul B. Cromelin, Mrs. B. Frank Murphy, Mrs Clarence Gosnell, Mrs. James Cassidy, Mrs. Harvey Jones, Mrs. Frank Puryear, Mrs. Fred Smith, Mrs. Henry McLin Bell and Mrs. A. W. Lee.

Janeiro by Pan American clipper. . . . He will join Mme. Martins there for a brief vacation, and the two, accompanied by Mrs. Nathan Wyeth, will return to Washington about July 10. . . . Just about the time the envoy took off for his homeland, Francisco Alves Santos, jr., Brazilian delegate to the Inter-American Conference of Central Banks, arrived in Miami by clipper. With him was his assistant, Achilles Moreaux. The two came on to Washington yesterday; are staying at the Shoreham, and will be here for several days following the conference on June 30. . . .

Albert Warner, noted radio commentator, is now Major Warner, of the War Department staff. . . . A series of small, Sunday luncheons are on the current calendar for Mr. and Mrs. Wade Ellis, who gather in a small company almost every weekend at Rippon Lodge, their country place in Virginia. . . . Like most hosts dispensing rural hospitality these days, however, they have found that comparatively few guests have "X-cards" and managing to get their friends out that far is A Problem. . . . Making the usual rounds is the report of the recent dinner given by Col. and Mrs. M. Robert Guggenheim in honor of Philippine President Manuel Quezon. Seems that invitations went out, American fashion, to both M. Quezon and his wife, and were accepted. . . . But when time for the dinner hour rolled around, only the Philippine President showed up, without either Mme. Quezon or any explanation as to why she did not accompany him. At that point some quick behind-the-scenes work went on in the Guggenheims' dining room, for the table-seating arrangement had to be changed at less than a moment's notice.

April Wedding Made Known Now

Mrs. Helen J. Clancy announces the marriage of her daughter, Miss Georgia Kathryn Clancy, to Ensign John C. Theys of New York.

The marriage took place April 2 in Our Lady of Sorrows Church, Takoma Park, Md. She is the daughter of the late E. I. Clancy of Asheville, N. C. She attended St. Genevieve-of-the-Pines, Asheville, N. C., and Holy Cross Academy, American University and Maryland University.

He is the son of Mrs. J. K. Latchut of Bellrose, Long Island. He was graduated in the class of 1941 from the United States Naval Academy.

Mrs. Theys is making her home with her mother in Takoma Park while her husband is on sea duty.

First Lady Of Costa Rica Here for Visit

With a schedule to rival kings and presidents visiting the Capital, Senora Calderon Guardia, wife of the President of Costa Rica, is in Washington for a short visit.

Yesterday Senora de Guardia called on Mrs. Roosevelt during the tea hours and on Tuesday, June 30, she will be guest of honor at a reception to be given by the Minister of Costa Rica and Senora de Fernandez.

Meanwhile informal entertaining is filling her days. She plans to return to the Central American republic during the first week in July.

Troncosos Entertain For New Envoy to Their Homeland

The Minister of the Dominican Republic and Senora de Troncoso entertained at dinner last evening at the Legation in honor of our newly appointed Minister to the Dominican Republic, Avra Warren, and Mrs. Warren. The new Minister, accompanied by his wife, will leave shortly to take over his new post in Central America.

Among the guests were the Assistant Secretary of State and Mrs. Adolf Berle, jr., Mr. and Mrs. Phillip Bonsal, Mr. and Mrs. Wheeler Barber, the First Secretary of the Dominican Legation and Senora de Vega and the Military Attache of the Legation, Maj. Salvador Cobian, and Senora de Cobian.

Dr. Oribe, Noted Writer, Is Honored

Charles A. Thomson, Chief of the Division of Cultural Relations of the State Department, was host at an informal dinner given at the Cosmos Club last evening in honor of Dr. Emilio Oribe, distinguished Uruguayan educator, and one of that country's most eminent men-of-letters. Dr. Oribe is in the United States at the invitation of the State Department, and while here will visit universities and other cultural centers.

Other guests at the dinner were Dr. Juan Carlos Blanco, Ambassador of Uruguay; Dr. Lewis Hanke and Robert Smith of the Hispanic Foundation, Library of Congress; Gustavo Duran and Mrs. Concha Romero James, of the Pan American Union; Dr. Alfred Metraux, of the Smithsonian Institution; Dr. Jorge Zalamea, editor and critic of Colombia; Dean Henry G. Capacity Crowd Expected at TuesdayBenefit

Advance reservations indicate that a capacity gathering will witness the Watergate Festival on Tuesday, June 30, for the benefit of Russian War Relief, according to an announcement by Mrs. Gifford Pinchot, chairman of the Watergate Festival program committee.

With the Russian Relief Week campaign well under way, reports coming in from the ticket committee, headed by Mrs. Nathan Hurwitz, give evidence that the festival is being anticipated with great interest by Washington music lovers. The program will feature the 50-piece Philadelphia Balalaika Orchestra, Russian dancers in native costume and the mass chant by Harold J. Rome. Melvyn Douglas will act as narrator for the mass chant and master of ceremonies for the festival.

Proceeds from the festival will go toward purchasing medical supplies in this country for convalescent soldiers and civilians in Soviet Russia. A quota of $100,000 has been set by the Washington chapter of the Russian War Relief committee.

Members of the program committee include Mrs. Nathan Hurwitz, chairman; Mrs. Tomas Cajigas, Mrs. Leo Brison Norris, Mrs. Consuelo A. Seaone, Mrs. George G. Gaydash, Mrs. Russell G. Clubwomen Plan Rubber Party for Fourth of July

In a patriotic effort to aid Uncle Sam in his rubber collection the D. C. Federation of Women's Clubs will encourage the work of its conservation committee of which Mrs. Newton Cordis Wing is chairman, through a Fourth of July celebration, at the home of Mrs. Henry Fenno Sawtelle, 6200 Connecticut Avenue, from 3 to 6 p. m. Each person is requested to bring a piece of rubber.

The program will be handled by the following chairmen: Mrs. C. D. Lowe of the Women's City Club; Mrs. Lee D. Ritter of the Pro Bonata Club; Mrs. Lee Ashcraft, Housekeepers' Alliance; Mrs. F. D. Ashburn, Parkview Woman's Club; Mrs. George E. Fuller, Petworth; Mrs. L. L. Lemon, Takoma Park; Mrs. William C. Dulin, Junior Alliance and Mrs. John J. Darby, Political Study Club.

Plans for the rubber party, which will be presented to the meeting of the federation, or will be formulated at an afternoon tea, given the committee by Mrs. Darby today at her home, 1605 Buchanan Street. Guests at the party will be the federation president, Mrs. Arthur Charles Watkins, Mrs. Henry Fenno Sawtelle, treasurer of the federation and the hostess for the rubber party, and the federation press chairman, Mrs. Lee W. Kasehagen.

The Doctor Takes a Wife

In a noon ceremony yesterday, Miss Ruth Goodman, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Moe Goodman, was married to Dr. Sydney Leventhal, son of Mr. and Mrs. Gilbert Leventhal. The ceremony, which took place in the Jefferson Street home of the bride's parents, was performed by the Rev. Norman Gerstenfeld in the presence of members of the immediate families.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, wore an ice blue afternoon frock and a small hat of the same shade. She carried a Bible covered with white orchids. Her only attendant was her sister, Mrs. Benjamin Fishman of New York, and Harry Minkoff served as best man.

Both Dr. Leventhal and his bride attended George Washington University and the former is a graduate of the George Washington Medical School as well. Following a wedding trip to Lake Placid, the couple will make their home in Washington at 53 Concord Avenue.

J. M. Woodard Is Dinner Host

Informality was the keynote when J. Marcellus Woodard entertained at dinner last evening at Army-Navy Country Club in honor of John Rogers of California. Mr. Rogers is vice president of the Douglas Air Craft Co. in Santa Monica, Calif.

Mr. Woodward played the solitary host last evening as his wife is in Penn Yan, N. Y., where she has opened their summer home. Among the guests were Capt. and Mrs. Ernest Pace, Gen. and Mrs. Leland Miller, Col. John Jewett, Mr. and Mrs. William C. Murphy, jr., Mr. and Mrs. Frank Fleming, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Stokes, Robert McCrae, Mr. and Mrs. Ray Tucker and several others.

Mr., Mrs. Haskins Back From Wedding Trip

Mr. and Mrs. Gerry Haskins are making their home at 402 E. Glendale Avenue in Alexandria following their return from a ten-day wedding trip to Detroit and Grand Rapids, Mich.

The bride is the former Miss Dorothy Newlon, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. M. B. Newlon of Marietta, Ohio. Their marriage took place Wednesday, June 3, at 7:30 in the Lincoln Chapel of the Presbyterian Church in Washington. For her bridal costume, the bride wore a frock of pale blue crepe with coat of dark blue wool crepe, navy blue hat and shoes and white accessories. Miss Mary Newlon was the bridesmaid.

Mrs. Haskins is a graduate of Mountain State College in Parkersburg, W. Va., and the bridegroom received his degree at Michigan University. He is now stationed at Fort Belvoir, Va.

Mrs. McNutt Takes Lead in Move To Share Cars and Conserve Rubber

NOT ONLY are the prominent women residents of the Shoreham Hotel willing to share their cars to conserve rubber and gasoline, but they will go a step further and share taxis. Also, a few women, who have no regular working schedules, will set aside certain days of the week to take passengers to designated points. This is the gist of the program decided upon yesterday by a group of Washington women who met in Mrs. Paul V. McNutt's apartment at the Shoreham Hotel.

Mrs. Paul V. McNutt

Mrs. McNutt, wife of the President's war man power chief, and Mrs. Daniel Stapleton called a meeting of car owners of the Shoreham Hotel to work out a feasible method of sharing transportation. Approximately 20 residents showed up—the other 10 who had been invited sent notes signifying their willingness to cooperate. The share-your-car-with-your-neighbor is a project of the women's safety committee of the American Automobile Association. Mrs. George C. Thorpe, chairman of the women's safety committee, who inaugurated the idea, brought along questionnaires for the guests to fill out. Also, she gave a brief background survey of the entire share-your-car campaign.

Mrs. Thorpe told the group that it formed the embryo of a city and perhaps Nation-wide campaign that would be started to alleviate transportation problems.

While only one member of the group, Miss Grace Frysinger, follows a working schedule, others there were either eager to make regular itinerary trips or drive by the taxi stands and pick up persons who needed rides. Mrs. Warren Lee Pierson, wife of the president of the Import-Export Bank, is one who offered to circle the driveway for prospective passengers instead of heading for town straight from the garage.

Madame Barney Offers Her Services

Madame Drefuss Barney would assume a regular itinerary, morning or afternoon, depending upon the convenience of the majority. She will take residents to and from Red Cross meetings or back and forth to the Sulgrave Club.

On the other hand, Mrs. Frank Morrow will take three or four women downtown to shop. Mondays are her days for shopping sprees. She will drive to and from one appointed place.

Mrs. James F. Byrnes, wife of Justice Byrnes of the Supreme Court, makes her trips to town at the same time her husband goes to his office. However, she asserted that any morning Justice Byrnes would be glad to take any who want to go to Capitol Hill. Just telephone the apartment for arrangements.

Mrs. McNutt pointed out that it was no advantage sharing a car unless going to a common destination. To drive a person from one end of the city to another would spoil the plan. Not waiting for the plan to go into effect, she said: "Our car never leaves the hotel with vacant seats. Mr. McNutt always calls out his destination and invites those going to the same place to hop in."

Mrs. Whittall to Assist Music Lovers

Mrs. Matthew John Whittall, when once convinced that passengers with whom she shared her car could not sue for exorbitant damages in cases of accidents, put her car at the disposal of music lovers. Specifically, the Watergate concerts are her immediate goals.

Among others present who offered various suggestions for mapping out plans to share their cars were Mrs. Richard Duncan, wife of Representative Duncan of Missouri; Mrs. Clarence Norton Goodwin, who brought with her Mrs. Harry Thomas Jordan of Philadelphia.

Did You Know . . . ?

THAT—Mrs. Richard Kilroy, who recently came to Washington from Los Angeles with her husband, is starting a class in Spanish at the AMERICAN WOMEN'S VOLUNTARY SERVICES. Beginning July 7, the classes will be held every Monday and Thursday from 11 to 12 o'clock

In making the announcement, Mrs. Daniel C. Long, chairman of the AWVS training school section, states that Mrs. Kilroy, who is part Spanish and a member of the famous Bandini family that helped to build California, speaks the language fluently.

Moreover, Mrs. Kilroy is a writer of note. She signs her articles with her own name—Margaret Gaffey. Perhaps, you've read her articles and short stories on California that have appeared in nationally circulated magazines.

Darden Visits Scene of Crime In Waller Case

By the Associated Press

Richmond, Va., June 23.—In an effort to obtain all the information possible bearing on the conviction and sentencing of Odell Waller, condemned Pittsylvania County Negro, Governor Darden visited the place where Waller shot and killed Oscar Davis, white farmer, and talked with witnesses in the case, he disclosed today.

Waler's fate now rests with the Governor and a hearing is to be held Monday, beginning at 9:30 a. m., on his counsel's plea for exercise of executive clemency. The case was carried through the State and Federal appellate courts to no avail.

The Governor's unheralded trip to Pittsylvania Monday was made for the purpose, he said, of getting first hand information that would be helpful in reaching his decision. He talked with the eyewitness to the shooting on July 15, 1940, when the Negro went to the Davis home in regard to division of a wheat crop, to the slain man's widow and to others connected with the case. Davis was a tenant farmer and Waller had been a subtenant, or sharecropper.

Governor Darden stayed Waller's execution from June 19 to July 2 in order to permit time for the commutation hearing, requested by John F. Finerty of New York, a representative of the Workers Defense League and counsel for the Negro. The reprieve was the third granted by Governor Darden and the fifth Waller had received since the original order of the trial court sentencing him to die December 27, 1940.

J. M. Proctor, Realty Man, Dead at 77

J. Martin Proctor, 77, Washington real estate man for the past 60 years, died suddenly yesterday at his home, 1149 North Glebe road, Arlington, Va.

PROCTOR

He had been associated in recent years with the firm of Bradley, Beall and Howard. Mr. Proctor apparently had been in good health until he was stricken yesterday morning. Death was attributed to coronary thrombosis.

Funeral services will be held at the First-Covenant Presbyterian Church, of which he was a member, at a time to be announced. Burial will be in Rock Creek Cemetery.

Mr. Proctor was a long-time member of the Washington Board of Trade and the Asociation of Oldest Inhabitants. A native of Tottenville, N. Y., he was educated at Centenary Collegiate Institute, Hackettstown, N. J. He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Louise Springer Proctor; a daughter, Mrs. Parke F. Engle of Arlington; two sons, Col. Carlton S. Proctor, U. S. A., and Lawrence M. Proctor, Falls Church, Va.; three brothers, G. Edward, Robert G., and Frederick R. Proctor, and four grandchildren.

Reynolds' 'Vindicator' Folds Up

Senator Robert R. Reynolds (Democrat), of North Carolina, asked District Court yesterday for an order dissolving the Vindicators Association, Inc., an organization dedicated to a five-point program of "100 per cent Americanism."

Senator Reynolds, its president, said in his petition to the court that because of the outbreak of war "it has become undesirable and impractical" for the association to continue its activities.

A monthly magazine, the American Vindicator, was published by the group, which had its headquarters at Reynolds' home here, 1 Second Street Northeast. The purpose of the organization, founded March 13, 1939, was embodied in five objectives: "To keep America out of war, to register and fingerprint all aliens, to stop all immigration into the United States for the next ten years, or until such time as every unemployed American has been provided with employment, to deport all undesirables and criminal aliens, and to banish all foreign 'isms' (communism, nazism and fascism), all 'isms' foreign to the fundamental principles of the American form of government."

McCann Appointed To Alhambra Post

Francis A. McCann, past grand knight of Carroll Council, Knights of Clumbus, has been named to the supreme board of the Order of the Alhambra as deputy supreme commander, it was announced yesterday.

Long time member of the order, McCann was district deputy of the society from 1936 to 1938. He was appointed colonel, aide-de-camp on the staff of the Governor of New Mexico by that Governor in 1940. He also is a member of the Alcantara Caravan, Order of the Alhambra; Washington Lodge of Elks, and the Ancient Order of Hibernians.

Eberstadt, Munitions Board Chairman, May Be Named WPB Deputy in New Setup

Ferdinand Eberstadt, chairman of the Army and Navy Munitions Board, may be named a deputy to War Production Board Chairman Donald M. Nelson, it was learned last night.

Eberstadt would come to WPB if the production agency puts into effect a contemplated plan of reorganization which calls for delegation of the board's administrative functions to three deputy chairmen.

There was no comment from Eberstadt on his reported move to WPB, but the transfer would be in line with contemplated abolition of the munitions board and assignment of its responsibility for priorities to WPB.

Eberstadt, if the transfer is made, would be handed what is admittedly WPB's toughest job—effective operation of the new production requirements plan by which priority ratings on materials are to be related to allocation of materials by quantity.

He also would take over WPB's Division of Industry Operations and the Raw Materials Branch.

Eberstadt, 52 years old, a native of New York City and an alumnus of Princeton University and the Columbia University law school, has had a long career in investment banking. He also has been associated in an official capacity with several paint and varnish companies. He has been chairman of the munitions board since December.

The three-deputy reorganization plan for WPB would have as one of its major purposes the elevation of Nelson to a position where he would be relieved of administrative duties and freed to devote his time exclusively to policy considerations which have become increasingly vital since the recent move to link United States and British production to the strategic needs of the United Nations.

It is expected, under the reorganization plan, that the other two deputies would be William L. Batt and J. S. Knowlson. Batt is the American member of the Combined (American-British) Raw Materials Board and chairman of the WPB Requirements Committee. Knowlson is the present head of the Division of Industry Operations.

War Risk and Bombardment

INSURANCE

WITH THE GOVERNMENT'S free blanket war damage coverage expiring at midnight, June 30th, it is the individual's responsibility to provide ample insurance protection for his real and personal property. The time is short!

Welcoming this as a wartime duty, the membership of the Insurance Club of Washington has perfected its plan to provide these policies quickly, adequately and efficiently. Application blanks supplied by the Government are now on hand. The personnel of our offices have been trained to complete these forms speedily and accurately.

The War Damage Corporation will accept no application directly from the applicant; this service is rendered through established insurance agencies only. Rates are standard and the complete schedule is now available for your information.

Because of the vital necessity for procuring this insurance coverage and the time limitation of your present protection, it is advisable to consult your insurance agency immediately. A great task lies before us—and we are honored by this opportunity to do our part.

PRIZE ELECTRIC MUSIC FAN of Washington is Policeman Oliver T. Coffin of No. 8 Precinct. Since the Rainbow Room's Milton Davis and Melvin Henderson started broadcasting novachord and electra-sharp music a couple of months ago, Officer Coffin has made records of their radio programs. He now has a library of "electric music" that can't be duplicated. In his spare time Officer Coffin makes electrical musical instruments, recently turned out an electric guitar that Maestro Davis says is the finest he's ever seen.

Hisses for the villain will sibilate on the Willard Roof tomorrow eve for the opening of "East Lynne." There'll be music hall tables so that you can sip between your cheering and hissing.

A FITCH BANDWAGON RIDE seems likely for Ralph Hawkins and his Crossroads Band. Around 400 of the Hawkins admirers have already sent in their votes for these up-and-coming swingsters. How about adding your voice to the chorus of Hawkins boosting?

"Amen!" is the new shout in the Victory Room. When Abe Lyman introduced "Amen" (otherwise known as "Boogie-Woogie Spiritual") the other night there was so much customer joy that he immediately ordered 500 of his recordings of it sent to Washington. Maestro Lyman will soon appear at a local store, autograph a record for every purchaser of two "Amen" records. You're supposed to send the extra record to a soldier. Other side of the platter carries "Silver Wings," song of the R. A. F. . . . P. S. George Auld's band will open in the Victory Room on Sunday.

D'you know a lovely California girl now in Washington? If so, hurry up and send her name to Glen Echo's band leader, Paul Kain. She may be selected as the queen of the evening at Echo's "California Night" to be staged about the middle of July.

CULTURE PAYS OFF at Mayfair where musically knowledgable patrons are revelling in the rare classic music of Pianist Dorothy Hutcheson. We refused to believe our ears when we heard the strains of the Kreutzer sonata as we entered. But later came "Claire de Lune" and Grieg and Tschaikowsky concertos (and not in swing, either).

Jane Pickens' truly marvelous singing at Del Rio. She's the tops, the ultimate, the acme of all that a night club singer should be . . . Equally a champion in another line is Adrian Rollini, whose trio is now at El Patio. His trio makes more real music than many a ten-piece band . . . Leonard Friendly's masterly organing at the Plymouth, especially when he's putting trimmings on his own catchy compositions . . . And you'll like Al Norton's blend of Dixieland favorites at Merry-Land. It includes "Capetown Races," "Alabama Bound" and "Waitin' for the Robert E. Lee" . . . "Siempre te Vas" as sung by Carlos and Melisa in Restaurant "400." It's the loveliest Spanish song we've heard for months . . . And you'll never hear "Stardust" given more faint and soaring sweetness than when it's sung by Eve Knight in the King Cole Room . . . Mischievous Marianne of Hi Hat is at her best in the playful "Ferris Wheel Song."

In Europe they'd go completely crazy if they could attend a River Road "Piggy Party." Such unlimited quantities of chicken chow mein, hot dogs and chile con carne. Not to mention draught beer flowing like water.

Luxury Brothel Keeper Held In U. S. Fraud

By the Associated Press

New York, June 23.—A woman of 56 whom the Government termed the operator of "the most luxurious brothel in New York City," was held in $5000 bail today by U. S. Commissioner Garrett W. Cotter on a charge of bankruptcy fraud.

Assistant U. S. Attorney Bruno Schachner said she was arrested yesterday and charged with filing two fraudulent bankruptcy petitions in Federal Court in 1940 under the names of M. Sarah Hamilton and Jessie Matthews.

"Her list of customers, seized by government agents, looks like a carbon copy of the social register," said Schachner, who told the commissioner that Mrs. Matthews, employing beautiful entertainers, grossed between $35,000 and $75,000 annually for the last three years from her enterprises.

Describing one of two places he said were operated by her, Schachner said it was "Undoubtedly the most luxurious place of its sort in the East."

"It had costly mirrors everywhere, on walls, as door panels, in closets, in bedrooms, in the bathroom, in a sun parlor and mirrors were used even to conceal radiators," he said. "One of the notations in records seized by Federal agents indicates that one customer paid $1800 for entertainment at the Madison Avenue establishment, $900 of which went to Mrs. Matthews and the rest to a show girl."

The government contends that Mrs. Matthews purchased the furnishings on credit and then moved to new addresses and assumed different names in order to avoid payment.

Transit Men Face Crackdown

D. C. traffic deaths this year .. 54
Deaths this date last year 40
District total last year 95

For the first time in the history of the Police Department, an executive order calling for a "crack down" on "speeding, reckless driving and other traffic violations by bus and streetcar operators," was in effect.

Prompted by an alarming increase in the number of accidents, fatalities and collisions involving vehicles of the Capital Transit Co., Maj. Edward J. Kelly, superintendent of police, directed that the order be issued through his personnel chief, Inspector Harvey G. Callahan.

The order brought immediate response from the transit company and E. D. Merrill, president of the company, called on Commissioner John Russell Young yesterday afternoon to discuss the situation.

Merrill asked permission to review Police Department statistics dealing with the number of bus and streetcar accidents and the records of arrests of company operators for traffic offenses.

At the same time, the transportation company chief took the opportunity to reply to a letter the latter wrote following a two-bus crash at Vermont Avenue and U Street Northwest, June 16, in which 31 persons were hurt.

The Commissioner condemned in his letter the "apparent utter disregard of traffic regulations and public safety" by company drivers and warned Merrill that the Police Department will "enforce strictly" all traffic regulations against them.

Merrill promised Young that his company will "cooperate fully" and praised company drivers for the job they are doing under adverse conditions.

Major Kelly's order to policemen that "every effort and attention be given by all members of this department on foot, motorcycles and in scout cars, to speeding, reckless driving and other traffic violations by bus and streetcar operators."

Statistics show that 15 persons have been killed by streetcars and buses here this year. During May streetcars and buses figured in 145 of a total of 971 accidents.

No serious traffic accidents were reported to police yesterday. Two victims of accidents Monday improved but remained in serious condition at Emergency Hospital.

Mohamed A. Sirag-el-Din, 38, Commercial Attache of the Egyptian Legation, was reported slightly improved last night. He suffered head injuries when his machine crashed headon into a bus in the Sixteenth Street underpass at Scott Circle.

F. B. Tipton, 67-year-old Washington pharmacist, also was improved yesterday. He received a broken left leg when struck by a streetcar at Fourteenth Street and Rhode Island Avenue Northwest. He lives at 1324 Farragut Street Northwest.

Roosevelt And Churchill Praise Editors

By the Associated Press

Quebec, June 23.—President Roosevelt, joining Prime Minister Churchill in greetings today to the convention of the National Editorial Association, expressed "deep appreciation" for the part its editor and publisher members have played in the war effort.

"The Government accepts as first responsibility its duty to keep the people informed in every way," Mr. Roosevelt said in his telegram read before the opening session. "The assistance being rendered by newspapers, which accept this also as a duty of their own, is very gratifying."

Churchill sent best wishes and expressed regret that he could not be present and renew old acquaintances.

Welcoming the delegates, who included some 400 from the United States, Henri Gagnon of Quebec, honorary president of the Canadian Press, briefly outlined the service provided by his organization through cooperative efforts of Canadian newspapers and the Associated Press. The service of the Canadian Press, he said, can only be "paralleled" by that of the Associated Press.

Edwin F. Abels of Lawrence, Mass., vice president of the N. E. A., replied to the welcome address, and W. H. McIntire of Vandalia, Mo., read the treasurer's report.

We have an immediate need for huge quantities of rubber. We want every bit of used rubber you can possibly spare. We are setting aside the period from June 15 to June 30 to get the old rubber in.

We have asked the filling station operators to help . . . And they have generously and patriotically agreed to help—they and the oil companies which serve them.

We want used rubber in every form. Take it to your nearest filling station.

One thing you can be sure of—we are going to see to it that there is enough rubber to build the planes to bomb Tokyo and Berlin—enough rubber to win this war.

—from Presidents Roosevelt's radio address of June 12, 1942

Bring in your Scrap Rubber NOW

RUBBER...AMERICA'S No. 1 SHORTAGE

92% of the world's natural rubber resources are now in Axis hands.

So President Roosevelt has sent out an S. O. S. call urging every man, woman and child in America to get in the scrap.

To help speed your scrap rubber to the fighting fronts, the Petroleum Industry—through its War Council—has quickly and unanimously mobilized almost a million employees and 400,000 service stations from coast to coast.

Every gasoline dealer's station is a scrap rubber collection depot. He is authorized to pay you a penny a pound for your scrap rubber, if you do not wish to donate it. Every ounce of rubber you turn over to him will be delivered to the Government without profit to the Oil Industry.

The need is urgent. The War won't wait. So get in as much as you can—as soon as you can!

If you don't want to donate your scrap rubber your gasoline dealer is authorized to pay you a penny a pound for it.

Scour the attic, garage, cellar, yard, farm—for rubber articles like these:

TIRES · INNER TUBES · HARD RUBBER TIRES · CREPE RUBBER SOLES · BOOTS · OVERSHOES · HOT WATER BOTTLES · TENNIS SHOES · RUBBER BELTING · RUBBER GLOVES · RUBBER SHEETING · PADS AND MATTING · RAINCOATS · RUBBER HEELS · BATHING CAPS · JAR RINGS · PLUMBER'S SUCTION CAPS · RUBBER ASH TRAYS

Get in the Scrap! Help win the War!

Overstaffing of War Dept. Charged in Report

In a report to Congress, the House Appropriations Committee yesterday said it was "inclined to the view that there had been some overstaffing" in the War Department here. The committee commended the order of War Secretary Stimson that prohbiits additional appointments for a three-month period unless he's convinced of the need. The committee reported: "There is no disposition to interfere with the dispatch of work in an efficient and orderly way, but, on the other hand, the local situation as regards housing and transportation is such as to warrant the head of every department and agency personally to see that no job is filled or kept filled that is not absolutely essential."

Brig. Gen. F. W. Browne told the committee that the department expects to have 47,476 employes here on June 30. He estimated that more than 14,000 new employes would have to be hired within the next year. The offices of Adjutant General and the Chief of Finance will have to hire 4452 employes to administer the dependents' allowance bill. The committee has limited the number of employes the Navy can hire here, but it has imposed no such restriction on the Army. Moreover, it has given War full authority to hire more than the estimated 14,000 if the need arises.

Nathan Straus, former USHA chief, may run for Congress against Representative Baldwin, New York Republican . . . A Cabinet member is doing his best to smear Justice Felix Frankfurter . . . National Housing Agency is in a quandary. Henry Ford doesn't want it to build defense homes near his huge Willow Run bomber plant . . . The House Rules Committee today is expected to give a green light to the bill that would raise the base salaries of custodial and subprofessional employes. The hope of the bill's passage has kept many guards, mechanics and others classified as custodial, in their jobs despite the fact that they could get better jobs outside.

The priority system in Government is due for a shake-up shortly. The Civil Service Commission will be given greater powers. It will be able to transfer employes regardless of priority rating . . . Federal Deposit Insurance is moving to Chicago over the weekend. About 350 jobs will be transferred and about 300 will be kept here. Only 100 of the 350 employes refused to go, which is the lowest percentage of any agency decentralized . . . National Housing Agency will soon conduct a room census here. An appeal will be made to citizens with vacant rooms to take in "war guests" for the duration.

The Truman Committee will soon investigate certain officials in War Production Board's iron and steel branch. . . . Lowell Mellett, chief of the Office of Government Reports, has offered to resign from Government service altogether if it's believed his usefulness is at an end. He'll probably continue under Elmer Davis . . . Dillon S. Myer accepted the job as chief of the War Relocation Authority because it brought him closer to the war. He tried to enlist in World War I, but he was rejected. He was too valuable in food production work in Indiana at the time. He grows soybeans, a war crop, at his Falls Church place.

Memo to Donald Nelson: Isn't it true that both William Batt and J. S. Knowlson, your two top assistants, threaten to resign if the Army is given all it wants from War Production Board? . . . The President's approval of the employe health plan described here yesterday is assured. Congress will be asked to approve it shortly . . . Sidney Weinberg, close adviser to Donald Nelson, has been offered an Army commission . . . General Accounting Office has raised the salaries of some 1700 of its employes here within the past few weeks. The raises must have been deserved . . . Elmer Davis has asked all OEM information employes to stay on the job.

The Board of Legal Examiners, now that it has legal standing, will probably invoke the State quota law in the appointment of attorneys to the Federal service. From July 1 to April 25, 1291 lawyers were appointed, and 272 came from New York, 102 from Illinois and 95 from California. Several States weren't even represented. Harvard, Yale and Columbia were the three leaders, with 218, 86 and 75, respectively. Local law schols didn't do badly. Georgetown had 41 grads get jobs, George Washington 40, Columbus and National 21 each, and Catholic 5.

Even as You and I

Ramifications of wartime gasoline and tire rationing were brought to the attention of passengers on a Sixteenth Street bus yesterday when a middle-aged woman of some bearing got aboard. "A trawnsfer, please," she said to the operator.

Wrong-Way Stretch

Thirty-two rubber floor mats were stolen from 16 milk trucks some time Monday night while the vehicles were parked at the Model Farms Dairy, 4115 Kansas Avenue Northwest, it was reported to police yesterday. Charles Gramlich, of Chevy Chase, Md., discovered the theft and said the mats were worth about $1 each.

D. C. Budget Bill Awaits Signature

Supply Measure Carries $176,680 More than First Voted by House

The largest District budget appropriation in history was awaiting the President's signature today—a total of $56,313,851 to defray the city's expenses during the 1943 fiscal year.

The product of three months' paring and patching by the Appropriations Committees of both houses, the bill now carries $176,680 more than the amount originally voted by the House. It won final congressional approval Monday.

Most of the Senate increase is included in an appropration of $110,000 for the erection of a new fire engine house at North Capitol and Crittenden Streets.

It carries money to increase the Health Department's sanitary and health inspection staff, as well as providing for extra public health nurses and their equipment. Also written into the bill, as a result of the increasing shortage of hospital facilities, is a fund of $139,920 to reopen the old Tuberculosis Hospital at Fourteenth and Upshur Streets Northwest for the use of convalescent patients.

Personnel increases for most of the municipal agencies are provided for, also attributed to the extra burden brought on the city by the zooming wartime population.

Other grants were made for the opening of a sub-branch library in Anacostia and for the expansion of a physical training program in the public schools. The newly created Department of Recreation was voted $391,394 with which to inaugurate its career, though most of this was made up by transfers of funds from agencies which had previously operated recreational facilities.

Legislative clauses written into the bill by the House and Senate fared ill. A section requiring suburban school children to pay tuition for attending District schools was passed by the House but deleted at the insistence of the Senate. The House in turn forced the Senate to abandon its attempt to eliminate ceilings on public assistance payments.

Still a third legislative amendment, sponsored by Senator McCarran, was finally killed after it almost blocked passage of the conference-approved bill Monday. Only partially and indirectly affecting local revenues, it would have charged the personnel expenses of congressional investigations to the governmental agencies—District or Federal—under investigation.

O. E. S. Will Hold Communication Tonight at 7

The Grand Chapter of the Order of the Eastern Star, Prince Hall Affiliation, for the District of Columbia and jurisdiction, will meet in its fiftieth semiannual communication tonight at 7 o'clock at Scottish Rite Hall, 1630 Eleventh Street Northwest.

Mrs. Susie Wallace, worthy grand matron, and Peter Phillips, worthy grand patron, will preside. Several hundred representatives from the 14 subordinate chapters of the Order of the Eastern Star among Negro citizens in the Nation's Capital will participate. Special emphasis will be placed upon a fraternal war service program. Mrs. Wallace upon her inauguration last December, urged the chapters to subscribe substantial amounts of their respective treasuries to the war bond drive.

The 14 chapters of Negro Eastern Stars have a combined balance of $33,500. Gethsemane Chapter, No. 3, is the wealthiest, being worth $10,475. Reports on the amounts invested will be made by the various matrons of the chapters. Plans for awarding scholarships to girl graduates from Dunbar, Cardozo, Armstrong, and Margaret Washington Schools will be completed.

Naval Employe Cleared in Theft Of Bomb Parts

A District Court jury, deliberating only 10 minutes, yesterday acquitted Paul G. Yula, 37, of a charge of stealing two bomb parts from the United States Navy magazine at Bellevue, D. C., where he was employed.

Testimony revealed that Yula, a former radio operator in the Marine Corps, had been innocent of subversive intentions when he took the two small parts last February.

Lieut. Comdr. Frank Varney, formerly of the Metropolitan Police Department, told the court that the bomb mechanisms were not secret.

Yula had needed the parts it was testified, to make a lamp, and when he could not find his foreman at quitting time he pocketed two of the pieces lying nearby. The naval property was later discovered by police who had arrested Yula on a minor traffic violation.

Gas Death of Railway Mail Employe Probed by Coroner

Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald last night had under investigation the death from illuminating gas of Forrest L. Bowers, 36, of 3922 Thirteenth Street Northwest.

In the meantime, Dr. MacDonald issued a certificate of suicide in the hanging of John Francis Kidwell, 26-year-old civilian fire fighter at Bolling Field, who lived at 4203 Prospect Avenue, Brentwood, Md.

Bowers, a railway mail service worker, was found dead in his apartment after Sixth Precinct policemen forced open a door. They had been summoned by neighbors who detected the odor of gas.

Fully dressed, Bowers was lying on a bed and all doors and windows were closed. Gas was flowing from one open jet on a kitchen stove. He was pronounced dead by a doctor from Emergency Hospital.

His body was ordered to the District Morgue for an autopsy this morning.

Kidwell made a noose of a trouser belt, police said, and hanged himself in a closet of a store room at the Bolling Field firehouse. The body was discovered about 5:30 a. m. by Howard White, 1820 North Capitol Street, another fire fighter.

Army authorities investigated the death and told Dr. MacDonald the man had been suffering from a nervous disorder for some time. They blamed the ailment for his act.

Britt String Sextet Gives 2d Concert

By Ray C. B. Brown

C. C. Cappel and the Elizabeth Sprague Coolidge Foundation in the Library of Congress present the Britt String Sextet (Remo Bolognini, Edwin Ideler, Conrad Held, Gerald Kunz, Horace Britt and Carlo Piscitello) in Meridian Hill Park on Tuesday night. Program: String Sextet in B flat major, Op. 18 (Brahms), "Echo" for two string trios (Haydn), String Sextet in A major, Op. 48 (Dvorak).

Having been rained out on Monday, Horace Britt and his five colleagues made their second appearance last evening in the Starlight Chamber Music series in Meridian Hill Park under ideal conditions of weather. For the large audience assembled on the formal terrace, nature provided a cooling breeze, a cerulean sky and a moon in its third quarter—a combination conducive to the proper romantic mood for enjoyment of the first work on the program, the B flat major string sextet of Brahms. Under those circumstances, it would have been an insensitive listener who did not respond emotionally to the eloquent performance of that work.

BROWN

The second work on the program was one which had never come my way in a long experience with chamber music—Haydn's diverting "Echo" for two-string trios. To comply with the composer's direction that it be played by two trios in adjoining rooms, half of the sextet remained on the stage and the other three musicians stationed themselves behind the reflecting shell. In the four short movements of the work, Haydn made cunning use of the echo device with effects both comic and serious, and the general impression of the music is that of genial entertainment. The humor is light and graceful, carrying out the intent of a jest for the court of Prince Esterhazy.

To close the program with music of greater import, the admirable artists gave a fine reading of Dvorak's A major sextet, another rewarding product of romanticism with its broad contrasts between the elegiac Dumka movement, the exciting Furiant and the exhilarating finale.

Chamber Music Guild presents its String Quartet (Emanuel Zetlin, Alexander Levin, Benjamin Sosner and Marcel Ancher) in Dumbarton Oaks garden on Tuesday night. Assisting artists: Henriette Bagger Plum, messo-soprano; Theodore Podnos and Paul Brightenburg, violins; Sarah Feldman, viola; Mary Hill Doolittle, violoncello, and Albert F. Eney, bass. Program: Quartet in G minor, Op. 27 (Grieg). Three "Lyric Pieces" (Grieg), "Kansanlaula," Op. 2 (Toivo Kuula), Songs by Lange-Mueller, Grieg, Palmgern and Merikanto.

For its fourth summer concert in Dumbarton Oaks garden last evening, the Chamber Music Guild offered a program of Nordic music by Norwegian, Danish and Finnish composers for the delectation of an audience that filled the terrace. Norway was represented by Edvard Grieg, Denmark by Peter Lange-Mueller, and Finland by Toivo Kuula, Selim Palmgren and Oskar Merikanto. It was a diversified list which called for the participation of Henriette Bagger Plum, mezzo-soprano, and five instrumentalists.

Arriving late from the rival open-air concert, I missed the Grieg string quartet and two songs by Lange-Mueller and Grieg which preceded the intermission. My interest was centered primarily on the novelty of the evening, Toivo Kuula's "Kansanlaulu" for string ensemble, as it was my first encounter with that composer's music. Born in 1883, Kuula had the advantage of study with his countrymen, Sibelius, Jaernefelt and Wegelius for the stimulation of his native idiom, and with Marco Enrico Bossi for a touch of Italianate grace. It is the Finnish element which strongly marks "Kansanlaulau," a thoughtful and neatly treated elaboration of a folk song. The music disclosed an individual style and interesting personal traits of poesy.

District Area Radio 'Hams' To Organize Saturday Night

A meeting of "radio hams" in this area will be held at 8 p. m. Saturday in the auditorium of the Department of Agriculture, it was announced yesterday by Roy C. Corderman, temporary chairman.

Officers for the newly organized unit, which will work with civilian defense leaders, will be elected from the following ticket: Corderman, Fred W. Albertson, Herman Hobbs, Joe A. Beard, Oscar W. B. Reed, jr., Raymond E. MacOmber, William Smith, Paul Thomsen, and Franklin Montgomery.

Donald McClenon will report on a design for a new radio receiving system to be used by the organization, and OCD movies will be shown. All radio operators, service men, and those interested in the venture are invited to the meeting, Corderman said.

Second-Hand 'Bikes' Not Under Ration

New adult bicycles are the only ones which individuals as such are not entitled to purchase, pending issuance of further order by the Office of Price Administration, L. P. Steuart, Chairman of the local War Price and Rationing Boards, announced yesterday.

Steuart issued this statement in order to clear up confusion which has developed with respect to the bicycle rationing program. He said there are no present restrictions on the sale and purchase of used adult bicycles or of new or used juvenile bicycles.

Steuart also announced appointment of two new members to the War Price and Rationing Boards by the District Commissioners, Karl Kindleberger to Board No. 28 (the Oyster School), handling gas and sugar, and Robert B. Doing, of Doing Press, Area 1 C, who will also handle gas and sugar.

Mr. Kindleberger resides at 3721 Windom Place, nw., and Mr. Doing at 2639 Myrtle Avenue, nw.

Chavez in Hospital

Dennis Chavez, jr., son of and secretary to the Senator from New Mexico, underwent a minor operation at Georgetown Hospital yesterday morning. He was reported in excellent condition last night.

Playground Improvement Plan Ready

$300,000 Program Waits Signatures Of Secretaries Stimson, Knox

Playground improvements to the tune of $300,000 await two signatures, those of the Secretary of War and Secretary of the Navy, Milo F. Christiansen, superintendent of recreation in the District, report to the newly formed Board of Recreation of the District yesterday.

The money, which would be used for constructing tennis and handball courts and other areas, would come from "old Lanham money" made available to the District last year by Congress for "defense areas."

Because of this defense area stipulation, the Federal Works Agency, which has charge of the Lanham fund, is asking for indorsement of the need here from the heads of the Army and Navy Departments, whose many employes would benefit from the expansion.

The recreation areas which would be improved after release of this $300,000 are Randall, Southwest, Langston, Hillcrest, Oxon Run and the Anacostia Park section.

Tour Slated for July

The board, which was formed early in June to control and operate all recreation in the District, will go on the first of a series of inspection tours of recreation areas July 8, leaving at 1:30 p. m. from the Recreation Offices at 3140 Sixteenth Street Northwest. Recreation here was previously administered separately by the Board of Education, the District Commissioners and the National Capital Parks office, each of which has a representative on the new board.

Playgrounds and recreation areas are staying open until dusk this year, rather than closing at 5:30 p. m. as in previous years, Christiansen told the board. Facilities are also open on Saturday afternoons and Sunday at the 110 areas, which started operations a week ago today.

An innovation also is the series of community sings and band concerts at Sylvan Theater on Thursday evenings, the second of which will be tomorrow night. Plans now underway for community Fourth of July celebrations at 12 play areas were also brought to the board's attention.

Community Center Possible

Possibility of a giant community center for Federal employes, with the McKim property mentioned as its site, loomed on the horizon as the board voted to take full responsibility for operating such a center, if money is made available for it. Money might come from the war fund drive slated to start soon or through public appropriation, it was pointed out.

Parent, civic and other organizations will be invited to send representatives to a meeting at 8:30 p. m. Tuesday, July 14, in the Thomson School Building to present their recreational needs to the board. The information will be used in advising the board on its next year's budget, it was announced. The recreation board itself will meet at 7 p. m. before the open meeting begins.

Defense Committee Seeks Furniture

Urgent need for furniture for the office of the Consumer Interests Committee of the District Defense Council was reported yesterday by defense officials.

The committee's new offices, 1212 Eleventh Street Northwest, require at least a desk, table and chairs and a filing cabinet. The lack of these essential furnishings at present is due to as yet uncleared appropriations from the Defense Council, it was said.

D. C. Flier Hurt, R. A. F. Reports

Pilot Officer Walter P. (Wally) Gray, jr., 22-year-old Washington flier serving with the R. A. F., has been seriously injured in a crack-up while on a routine flight in England, his parents were notified yesterday by the British Air Ministry.

GRAY

Parents of the youth, who live at 1417 Parkwood Place Northwest, said their son had suffered possible fractures of the skull and spine and was in a hospital somewhere in England.

The youth, who has been with the R. A. F. since March, thrilled his parents when he spoke to them May 17 in a special radio broadcast arranged by Station WOL. Speaking from London, he told them at the time: "Write often and keep smiling."

Gray was graduated from Central High School several years ago and later attended Wake Forest College and George Washington University. He received flight training at Pensacola, Fla, and at the Polaris Flight Academy, Glendale, Calif.

OPA Considers Taking Control Over Suburbs, Effective July 1

More than 400,000 persons live in the suburban Washington areas where the Office of Price Administration is considering reduction of rents to the level of January 1, 1941, figures made public by OPA disclosed yesterday.

Prince Georges and Montgomery Counties in Maryland, and Alexandria and Arlington and Fairfax Counties in Virginia are slated to be put under Federal rent control effective July 1. The areas are among 60 war-rental areas in the country for which maximum rent regulations are scheduled to be issued.

Latest figures on rent increases in suburban Washington were not available at the Bureau of Labor Statistics last night. Available figures, however, showed low-cost rentals in Arlington County to have risen from an index of 102.5 on January 1, 1941, to 107.6 in December of that year.

The index rose in the same period for Arlington rental dwellings of all classes from 100.8 to 102.4, while the increase in Alexandria was from 100.4 to 102.2. In Prince Georges County, Md., the rise was 1.6 points and in Montgomery County the increase was three points.

Bureau of Labor Statistics indexes are based on rents for October, 1939.

Federal rent control may be instituted, said Price Administrator Leon Henderson, because voluntary control efforts "have not been effective enough."

"Our defense workers—and that means everyone these days—must be protected from soaring rents and threats of evictions," Henderson said. "Our investigations in defense-rental areas are continuous and we will act wherever necessary and whenever necessary."

Kenny to Manage Statler Hotel

Fred G. Kenny, veteran employe of the Statler Hotel Corporation, has been named manager of the new Hotel Statler here, scheduled to open some time this winter, it was announced yesterday.

Kenny has been with the organization since 1923, and is now manager of the Hotel Statler in Detroit. He is a native of Brooklyn, holdee of the Purple Heart from the last war, and is married and has a son.

The new hotel will contain 1000 rooms, and is expected to help in the easing of the hotel problem here.

A Storm Brews Around the Nats' Clary

Chicago, June 23.—Little Ellis Clary has been in the big leagues for only three weeks, but his legs are already pigeon-tracked with spike wounds, and he has been beaned twice. Thus far the bantam second baseman of the Nats has held his temper, but it might not be for long.

POVICH

Two of the uglier wounds that Clary bears are receipts for his efforts to tag out Barney McCoskey of the Tigers. Twice now, McCoskey has landed in the lap of the little Irishman in breaking up double plays, and the other day when Clary was hurt, they brought him to the Nats' bench for treatment.

Rookie Johnny Sullivan, the shortstop who came up from Chattanooga with Clary, shook his head and remarked to Manager Bucky Harris, "I feel sorry for that McCoskey."

"Sorry for McCoskey?" repeated Harris incredulously. "How about Clary? He's the guy who got hurt."

"Yeah, I know," said Sullivan, who has a long acquaintance with the fiery Clary, "but I feel sorry for McCoskey, because the next time he goes into second base that Clary will butcher him. I wouldn't want to be McCoskey when it happens. I've seen Clary shove his spikes in a base runner's mouth for less than what McCoskey has been doing."

Little Clary's firebrand play has been alleviating for Manager Bucky Harris somewhat the pain of the Nats' defeats. Harris still has grave doubts that Clary is a sure-fire big leaguer, but he wants the little Irishman on his ball team if only for the aggressiveness that he provides an otherwise dead-fish infield.

Bucky Puts the Blame at Home

"Much of it is Clary's own fault when he gets hurt," says Harris. "I've never seen a second baseman take such chances flying into spikes when he's tagging a runner. He doesn't have to take those chances, but it looks as if you can't stop him. He's got a certain kind of finesse and that's all that prevents him from being killed, I guess. But he's the biggest chance taker I've ever seen in anybody's infield."

At Detroit, the other day, Clary had full warning before he was beaned by a pitch thrown by Harold Newhouser. Catcher Birdie Tebbetts of the Tigers related the story after the game. "I never say anybody crowd the plate like Clary does, with his head hanging over in the line of the pitch. When he first came to bat, I told him he'd better stand back, or he was liable to get hit with a pitch that was over the plate. He didn't pay any attention to me, and when it happened, it was no surprise."

When Clary did get hit he flopped to the ground and almost in the same motion he got up and ran to first base. "Didn't hurt nope," he said later. "That pitch hit me on my padded helmet, and the only reason I went down was because the umpire might think it hit my bat instead. I was holding the bat close to my head, and they might have thought it was a foul. We needed somebody on base."

The American League has not yet seen the temper of Clary, but for five years the minors have known him as a wildcat. Clark Griffith hesitated to bring him up to the big league because he was untamed. At Durham, N. C., one day, he walked out to the mound after a pitcher had thrown a ball at his head, and punched the fellow in the nose.

Rookie Takes Himself to Task

When he fell down rounding third base the other day, and was out at the plate, costing the Nats an important run, he was beside himself with rage in the dugout. He cracked his favorite bat with a swipe against the concerete and all but banged his head against the wall. "I ought to pull a Hershberger," he told Manager Bucky Harris. Hershberger was the Cincinnati catcher who committed suicide a couple of years ago.

"I don't care if he hits only .210," Bucky Harris was saying of Clary, "I'm going to keep him in the line-up every day. Perhaps he can impart some of his spark to the rest of our infield. And he's not a bad ball player. He's the best leadoff man we've had in years and he shows more determination up there than any man on the club. After the way I've suffered with some of our too philosophical ball players, it's a treat to me to see a fellow with some spirit."

Only after Clary fell down while trying to score from second base, did Harris notice that the fellow was playing with a pair of cheap drug store shoes on which the spikes were worn almost to the sole. "No wonder he skids around," said Harris, "playing in those sandals. I guess he doesn't have the 22 bucks to spare for a new pair of big league shoes, but I'm ordering some for him today, and make him a gift of them. I get $22 worth of pleasure watching him give all he's got out there."

On the Line

With CONSIDINE

Joe Chooses Conn for His Foe

New York, June 23.—"I won't fight nobody but Billy Conn," Corpl. Joe Louis told us as he stood in a doorway of the twentieth Century Limited, a minute or two before he left New York for Fort Riley, Kans.

CONSIDINE

"No sense fighting anybody else," he added soberly. "Fact is, I won't fight anybody else—if they let me fight. He's the only fella I can draw with."

We asked him about his overdue tax, which, by the way, is $117,211.75.

"That's alright," he said rather surprisingly. "They're going to let it ride until after the war."

Joe was making his first long trip by himself. It depressed him a little, for he has been the hub of a big retinue whenever he has traveled before. But the prospect of getting to a cavalry replacement center cheered him a little, even if he doesn't get into the Cavalry. He's an expert horseman. He has a lot of mounts on the big Utica, Mich., dude ranch which has sopped up all his money.

The conductor waved the lantern presently and the big swank train moved silently out of the station. Joe waved slowly to the little group that had come down to the station to see him off. Manny Seamon, his new trainer, said, "good luck, Joe. God bless you."

That seemed to echo the sentiment of the little crowd.

Farley Still Wants a Ball Team

Big Jim Farley was in the station, too, hurrying for a train. But he stopped to chat for a few minutes. We asked him if the Yankee deal was dead.

"No, just dormant," Jim said. "I was just about to put in a good bid for the team when the war came along, and then there didn't seem to be much sense in doing that. I figured it would have been too tough paying back the money I planned to borrow as my own share of the deal. It would have been about $250,000. But as far as I'm concerned, things have just been postponed—not cancelled. I'm going to get into baseball, or bust. If the Yankee deal can't be made—it involves an awful lot of money—there may be another team. Can't say which one."

Jim looked at the big clock over the information desk.

"I've got to run now," he said, clamping on his new straw hat. "Wish Joe Dimaggio would come out of that slump . . ."

Jockeys Match Brains—Whirly Wins

Whirlaway (or was it Georgie Woolf) took another ten years off the lives of favorite players at Aqueduct the other day when he got up just in time to stick a nose in front of Attention.

Whirly went past Attention like a bat out of a belfry one or two strides past the finish line, but by that time half of his supporters were too weak to watch what the 30 cents to a dollar favorite was doing.

Inside story of the race seems to be that Woolf was outsmarted by Don Meade, but that Whirly simply had enough stretch-run in him to win despite the fact that his pilot was put-thought. On the backstretch when Whirly began to move up, Eddie Arcaro, upon the Rhymer, very nicely moved over to give Whirly and Woolf racing room. It was a nice gesture, but it wasn't predicated on the fact that Arcaro and Whirly are old pals. The Rhymer just didn't have it, and Arcaro knew it.

Well, Whirly kept moving up and pretty soon he was behind Attention, and Meade, Meade moved out a little from the rail, ostensibly to give Whirly racing room. But when Woolf urged him forward, Meade closed up the gap and Woolf had to pull up suddenly. Whirly lost ground, and his stride was broken. Whirly got going again, but this this time Woolf decided to go outside of Meade. Meade bore out very, very subtly, as Earle Sande used to do, making Whirly run just a little farther than Attention had to run—and nearly got away with it.

Pity MacMitchell—Not Yet, Please

The talk is that Julian Black and John Roxborough will become the managers of red-hot Ray Robinson when the uncrowned welter-weight king reaches his twenty-first birthday . . . We had a piece half written the other day, recommending that as much pity be shewn Les MacMitchell, as was shown the over-worked Alsab. So what? So MacMitchell, supposedly on his last legs, broke by nearly a full second the 23-year-old record for the 300-yard run, set in 1910 by the late Mel Sheppard . . . I think I'll write a piece saying how tough Hitler is.

Bettina Defeats Harry Bobo in 10 Rounds

23,574 See Charity Card At Cleveland

Christoforidis Wins Over Colan; Muscato Beats Lem Franklin; Bettina Is Floored

By the Associated Press

Cleveland, June 23.—Getting up from the floor after two savage left hooks floored him for a count of nine in the fifth round, Melio Bettina carved up his heavyweight rival, Harry Bobo, to take a 10-round decision tonight in a feature bout of the Cleveland News' bomber-for-MacArthur card before 23,574 Cleveland Stadium customers.

Thus the 187-round southpaw battler from Beacon, N. Y., duplicated his comeback in a recent Pittsburgh fight with Bobo, who scaled 211, and ran his string of undefeated heavyweight scraps to 30.

For a while in the fifth—as in the ninth at Pittsburgh—it was touch and go for Bettina, who at 5 feet 10 inches is a half foot smaller than the Smoky City scrapper. But Bettina, who was having the better of it until Bobo's two lefts flattened him, weathered a storm of some 30 lefts and rights by bobbing, ducking and holding until the bell gave him a chance to clear his head.

Christoforidis Wins

From there Bettina went on to carve up the towering Negro, almost closing his right eye, and having Harry's mouth in bad shape.

Another headliner on the 6-round card, which netted more than $25,000 to send the newspaper's bomber fund above the $330,000 mark, saw Anton Christoforidis send Johnny Colan to the floor three times in the first round and once again in the tenth for a decisive triumph.

In another scheduled 10-round scrap, Sergt. Joe Muscato of Buffalo, N. Y., slapped Lem Franklin into oblivion with a first round flurry of rights and lefts that had the Chicago negro so glassy-eyed that Referee Joe Sedley had to stop the fight.

Christo, who scaled 169 against Colan's 175½, floored Johnny with a barrage, ending with a savage left hook, in the first stanza. Colan got up at six and promptly was floored again. This time, he barely arose after the count of nine and was sent down again as the bell rang. After the scrap he said he was "out" until the sixth round.

Franklin, a leading heavyweight challenger until Bob Pastor and Harry Bobo knocked him out, was so groggy mentally after Muscato's savage buddy of rights and lefts that he got up without a count and stood there, helpless, arms glued to his sides.

Maxie Shapiro, the ring-smart Brooklyn, N. Y., lightweight, handed a boxing lesson to Harry Teaney of Cleveland, to take the decision in another ten rounder. Using a wide open style, Shapiro, 133¼, frequently caused Teaney, 133, to miss with his constant cleaning.

After being ahead all the way, Phil Muscato, 160, Buffalo, N. Y., suffered a technical knockout at 1:50 of the fifth round at the hands of Johnny Lawer of Cleveland. Lawer, 156, was dropped for a count of nine the preceding session when only the bell saved him. The scrap was scheduled for five.

Young Drops Bout To Ruffin in N. Y.

New York, June 23.—Bobby Ruffin, New York lightweight weighing 134¾, outpointed Terry Young, also of New York, and weighing 135, in a fast, 10-round bout before 5123 spectators at the Queensboro Arena tonight.

It was the second meeting of the two, who are sons of fighters who opposed each other numerous times in New York rings 20 years ago.

Ruffin's left kept Young off balance most of the way and the winner had his opponent in distress during the third, fifth and seventh frames.

Archibald Bows To Willie Pep

Hartford, Conn., June 23.—Joey Archibald of Providence became the forty-third victim of Willie Pep's flailing fists today, the unbeaten Hartford featherweight contender punching out a decision before a crowd of some 5000 fans at the first outdoor show of the season at Bulkeley Stadium.

Williams' Home Run Defeats Tigers, 6-2

Tabor, Judd Also Hit for Circuit to Lead Assault on Trout; Sox Grab Early Edge

By the Associated Press

Detroit, June 23.—Hanky Ted Williams returned today to his favorite park, Briggs Stadium, and belted a two-run homer, his sixteenth of the season and first since Memorial Day, to help the Boston Red Sox to a 6-2 victory over the Detroit Tigers in the opener of a three-game series.

Jim Tabor and Pitcher Oscar Judd, 21-year-old rookie southpaw, also hit for the circuit in the ten-hit assault on Paul (Dizzy) Trout, who was charged with his seventh defeat against five victories. Judd had a three-hit shutout until the eighth when the Tigers clustered a double and two singles for their runs. It was Judd's sixth victory against four defeats.

The Sox started early in downing the Tigers for the fourth straight time. Bobby Doerr doubled in the second for the first of his three hits and scored on Tony Lupien's single. Judd homered with none on in the third for his first round tripper, and Tabor connected for his third in the sixth with Doerr aboard.

Lou Finney's single was followed by Williams' homer in the seventh.

Buddy Lewis Star For Sandlot Nine, Playing Incognito

By the Associated Press

Pine Bluff, Ark., June 23.—Bleacherites thought that fellow "Merle Johnson" who played first base and pitched a couple of innings for the Painters Union team in a south Arkansas sandlot league looked "pretty good. Then the secret slipped out.

"Johnson" is Usher K. (Buddy) Lewis, third sacker and outfielder for the Washington Senators and a member of the 1938 American League All-Stars. Now in uniform cadet at Pine Bluff, Lewis said he played under an assumed name because he didn't want any publicity.

"I just wanted a good workout in case my training schedule can be arranged to allow me to play with Mickey Cochrane's All-Service team against the American League All-Stars in Cleveland July 7," he grinned.

Brooklyn Scores Four Runs After 2 Are Out in Fifth; Medwick Goes On

By the Associated Press

Brooklyn, June 23.—Lefty Larry French received credit for his sixth victory without a defeat tonight in a relief role as the Brooklyn Dodgers downed the Pittsburgh Pirates, 6 to 2. The Dodgers broke a tie score by bunching five hits for four runs after two were out in the fifth inning.

The climax of the rally was a two-run double by Joe Medwick, extending his batting streak to 26 games.

French, who relieved Whitlow Wyatt after two innings, started the decisive rally with a single after two were down. Pee-wee Reese and Lew Riggs also singled to load the bases, then Pete Reiser brought in two runs with a single and Medwick doubled for two more.

Wyatt left the game, complaining that he could not get his pitching arm loosened up. He gave up two runs on three hits in the first two frames, but the Dodgers drove two runs across in the first inning to retain control of the proceedings.

Bob Klinger started on the mound for the Pirates, but in the opening stanza Riggs, who accounted for three of the Dodgers' nine hits while subbing for Arky Vaughan, singled and moved to third on another single by Reiser. Then Medwick lifted a long fly, scoring Riggs and Dolph Camilli doubled Reiser home.

After five innings Klinger was removed for a pinch hitter.

The game was played at twilight, with the spectators' vision of fights being limited on for most of the game, and drew a crowd of 15,848. The victory boosted Brooklyn eight games in front of the idle St. Louis Cardinals.

Adrian College Gives Up Sports

Adrian, Mich., June 23 (AP)—Adrian College announced today the abandonment of all intercollegiate athletics for the duration of the war.

The announcement was made by President Samuel J. Harrison, who said the decision was influenced by three factors—limited funds for athletic purposes, the transportation emergency and generally tightened circumstances of college finances.

In place of intercollegiate sports, President Harrison said, the college will expand its intramural program. President Harrison said that Adrian was withdrawing from the Michigan Intercollegiate Athletic Association.

Yanks Down Browns, 6-5 In Night Game

By the Associated Press

St. Louis, June 23.—Even the sight of weak-hitting Don Gutteridge cracking a first-inning homer, his first of the year, availed the St. Louis Browns nothing tonight as the New York Yankees unleashed a 14-hit attack for a 6 to 5 victory.

But the ever-trying Browns, despite the pounding given Pitcher Al Hollingsworth by the Yankee sluggers, were within shouting distance at the finish, mainly by virtue of an eighth-inning uprising which brought three runs.

A walk, four singles and an infield out did the trick, but Mike Chartak tripled with the tying run on first. That paralleled the Yankee fourth, in which Joe Di Maggio tripled, Joe Gordon doubled and Tom Stankich and Buddy Rosar singled for a total of three runs.

The largest crowd of the year for the Browns, 18,761 paid admissions, went berserk when the Browns broke away from the quiet cast on them by Atley Donald, who held the St. Louisans to five hits until the eighth.

Wright Ordered To Defend Title

New York, June 23 (AP).—For the second time in two months the New York Athletic Commission today ordered Chalky Wright, holder of the New York version of the featherweight title, to defend his laurels against Charles (Lulu) Constantino, Gotham candy store clerk.

For the second time, Eddie Walker, manager of the Los Angeles Negro, said it would be done.

Walker is under suspension in New York because Wright went to Baltimore recently and fought Henry Jefra in a title bout instead of opposing Constantino. The board said the suspension would be lifted, however, if Walker produced signed contracts for a Wright-Constantino fight by July 21.

Giants Blank Reds Behind Lohrman, 7-0

By the Associated Press

New York, June 23.—The New York Giants continued their mastery over the Cincinnati Reds today with an easy 7-to-0 shutout on the 4-hit hurling of Bill Lohrman.

It was Mace Brown's seventh triumph in nine games with the Reds this season and the third time Lohrman has beaten them.

All of the Giants' runs were charged against Pat Paul Derringer, who gave up seven of New York's nine hits before being relieved with none out in the fifth inning.

Errors helped New York get a foothold in the second stanza. Derringer dropped a throw-at first base to let John Mize get on. Babe Barna singled him to third and Bert Haas fumbled a hard grounder by Hank Leiber to let in the first run. Then Harry Danning singled for another tally.

In the third inning the Giants loaded the bases on a single by Billy Jurges and successive walks to Mize and Barna. Leiber brought in one run with a long fly and Danning singled for another.

Then the roof fell in on Derringer in the fifth. Mize got beat out a single to Second Baseman Lonnie Frey and Mize reached first safely when Frey attempted fielding a grounder and couldn't decide whether to throw to first or second. Barna tripled to deep right and after Clyde Shoun had replaced Derringer, Danning hit his third single to score Barna.

It was the fourth defeat against three victories for Cincinnati's big right-hander and Lohrman's fifth triumph against one setback as a Giant. He also won one and lost one for the St. Louis Cardinals earlier this season.

Marjorie Row Upsets Medalist in Women's Western Golf

Rally Wins Over Dudley By One Up

Michigan State Star Takes Five Of Last 9 Holes; Favorites Advance

By the Associated Press

Chicago, June 23.—Marjorie Row, 20-year-old Michigan State College coed from Detroit, jolted Medalist Eleanor Dudley out of the Women's Western Open Golf Tournament today with a stinging 1-up victory in the first round of match play.

Rallying hard to win five holes to the Chicago girl's three on the incoming nine after being a hole in arrears at the turn, Miss Row moved into tomorrow's second round, where she will meet Mrs. Frank D. Mayer of Chicago.

The blond Michigan girl, her left hand taped to cover spike wounds suffered yesterday when another girl stepped on it while Miss Row was sitting on the grass watching a driving contest, had her bad moments—but not on the seventeenth and eighteenth fairways when she took both holes to win.

The other favorites, including Betty Jameson of San Antonio, Tex.; Dorothy Kirby of Atlanta, Ga.; Georgia Tainter of Fargo, N. Dak., and Mrs. Russell Mann of Omaha, Nebr., came through handily. The only sensational match besides the Dudley-Row affair was between Jane Crum of Orangeburg, S. C., and Dorothy Ellis of Indianapolis, Ind.

Miss Ellis was 1 up going onto the eighteenth, when Miss Crum holed out a chip shot for a birdie two and forced the match into overtime. Miss Ellis then won out on the nineteenth.

Mrs. Mann edged out Frances Ann McCanna, Rockford, Ill., 1 up; Miss Jameson defeated Ann Casey of Mason City, Iowa, 4 and 2; Miss Kirby eliminated Mrs. Fred Krauss, Chicago, 5 and 3, and Miss Tainter spilled Margaret Gunther of Memphis, Tenn., 4 and 3.

Other results: Mrs. Frank Mayer, Chicago, defeated Mary Jayne Garman, Hammond, Ind., 6 and 5; Virginia Ingram, Winnetka, Ill., defeated Elaine Sorenson, Chicago, 6 and 4; Phyllis Otto, Atlanta, Iowa, defeated Shirley Ann Johnson, Winnetka, Ill., 1 up; Mary Wilder, Chicago, defeated Eileen Stulb, Augusta, Ga., 4 and 3; Sallie Sessions, Muskegon, Mich., defeated Mrs. A. W. Sumpter, Dayton, Ohio, 3 and 2; Jeanne Cline Bloomington, Ill., defeated Betty Jane Haemerle, St. Louis, Mo., 6 and 5; Betty Brown, Texarkana, Ark., defeated Virginia Nilles, Chicago, 5 and 4; Mary Agnes Wall, Menominee, Mich., defeated Mrs. Thomas Olan, Newcastle, Pa., 4 and 2; Dorothy Foster, Springfield, Ill., defeated Mrs. Bernie Sick, Joliet, Ill., 6 and 5, and Mrs. Charles Dennehy, Chicago, defeated Mrs. Perry Fiske, Lake Geneva, Wis., 7 and 6.

Stewart Tops 64 Qualifiers In College Golf

By the Associated Press

South Bend, Ind., June 23.—Earl Stewart of Louisiana State topped a field of 64 qualifiers today in the National Intercollegiate Golf Tournament with a 36-hole total of 141.

But in a gesture of sportsmanship the 20-year-old defending champ, who will enlist in the Army next week, relinquished medalist honors to Dick Haskell of Northwestern.

Haskell, who at 26 is the oldest player competing on the Chain o' Lakes course, finished with a 142, hooking a 73 onto his subpar 69 yesterday.

"I qualified automatically, anyway," Stewart modestly explained, "and was just competing for the team championship."

Stewart's 71-70—141 will stand, however, as a new qualifying record. His 142 last year established a medalist mark.

Behind Stewart and Haskell at 145 were Eddie Johnston of Baltimore University and Burleigh Jacobs of Wisconsin, the 1936 Western Amateur medalist.

Bob Eckis, Jr., the Colgate ace, came in with 148 but was declared ineligible as a freshman after Coach William Courtwright, Sr., of Michigan filed a written protest. Officials said that because of the confusion in semesters resulting in wartime academic changes Eckis' status had been overlooked.

Forty-nine players were banked in brackets from 149 to 155, the deadline, with Yale qualifying seven, Stanford six and a total of 27 schools having representatives.

The first United States Naval Academy players to enter the meet were represented among the qualifiers by Midshipmen B. H. Paul with 149 and J. H. Stevens with 152.

Following Stanford and L. S. U. in the team standings were Northwestern, 597; Washington, 604; Yale, 605; Minnesota, 608; Ohio State, 610; Notre Dame, 612; Michigan, 614; U. S. Naval Academy, 615; Michigan State, 625; Wisconsin, 634; Holy Cross, 641 and Bradley Tech, 697.

The 64 qualifiers will start a 36-hole match play grind tomorrow which will cut the field to 16 by evening.

Mrs. Glick's 87 Earns Maryland Golf Medal

Mrs. Pray, One Stroke Back, Leads D. C. Contingent at Baltimore

By the Associated Press

Baltimore, June 23.—Mrs. Maurie Glick of the Woodholme Club, Baltimore, snatched medal honors from a field including the defending champion and two former titleholders today in the annual Maryland Women's Golf Tournament.

Mrs. Glick turned in an 87 for the 18 holes, one stroke better than Mrs. L. G. Pray of the Manor Club, Washington.

She shaded Mrs. Jerome Sloman of the Suburban Club, Baltimore, former champion, by four strokes and came in five strokes ahead of the defender, Mrs. Betty Meckley of the Kenwood Club, Washington. Mrs. Walter Stokes of the Manor Club, another former champion, qualified for the championship flight with a 94.

The field of 44 was described as of average size, but large considering war conditions and shortages.

Low Scorers

The qualifying scores included:
Mrs. Glick, 87.
Mrs. L. G. Pray (Manor Club, Washington), 88.
Mrs. T. E. Schluderberg (Baltimore Country Club), 89.

C'est la Guerre! Cubs Buy Tickets To White Sox Game

By the Associated Press

Chicago, June 23.—Here's something unheard of in the 40-year-old baseball rivalry between Chicago's two major league clubs—the Cubs are buying tickets to a White Sox game.

Only a war could bring it about and the National Leaguers would have you know it was strictly a patriotic gesture that prompted them to purchase 100 box seats for Army-Navy night, July 2, when the Sox will play Cleveland in one game and two service teams—Great Lakes and Chanute Field—meet in another.

The tickets will be distributed to Cub employes and service men.

Commissioner K. M. Landis also made a purchase—125 box seats—to help swell the advance sale to $6040.

War Swimming Show Listed At E. Potomac

One of the most instructive swimming shows of the season will be held tonight at East Potomac Pool when the D. C. Chapter of the Red Cross and the Recreation Association sponsor an event titled "Swimming in Wartime." Starting time will be 8 p. m.

Among the exhibitions will be one in basic swimming, by Dudley Gordon's Shoreham Pool swimmers; in floating equipment by the Naval Air Station, and rescue squad work by the U. S. Social Security Board first-aid detachment. In addition, riflemen from Fort Washington will demonstrate the crossing of streams, Bolling Field aviators will demonstrate rescue methods and the Army Medical Corps will show methods of keeping survivors afloat until rescue arrives.

The student band of the U. S. Navy Music School, directed by Bandmaster Ralph Mack, will furnish music and Toby David will act as master of ceremonies.

Kolley to Manage Bowling Plant

Mr. Kolley is a Washingtonian and a newcomer to duckpin bowling.

Nats Decide to Sink or Swim With Sullivan at Shortstop

By Shirley Povich

Post Staff Writer

Chicago, June 23.—From here in, the Nats' shortstop will be Rookie Johnny Sullivan, for better or worse, Manager Bucky Harris stated today.

"Some day, he's going to be a good big league shortstop," said Harris of Sullivan, "and the quicker he gets a chance to play, the better it will be for him and us."

Coach Ossie Bluege has thus become a man with a mission on the Washington team. Harris has asked him to make a shortstop of Sullivan, who has been in organized baseball for only two years. "If I thought it was an impossible job, I wouldn't ask Bluege, and he agrees with me that it isn't" said Harris.

The Nats haven't had an acceptable shortstop all year. Bob Repass laid an overaized egg at the position for the first month of the season, and Jimmy Pofahl has been both erratic and a weak member at bat.

"Sullivan is worth concentrating on," said Harris. "He's green about

Indians' Three Homers Beat Athletics, 7-5

By the Associated Press

Cleveland, June 23.—A flurry of home runs from the bats of Oris Hockett, Les Fleming and Ken Keltner today gave the Cleveland Indians a 7-to-5 victory over the Philadelphia Athletics in the opener of a three-game series.

The fourth circuit smash of the contest, by Bob Johnson in the fifth, counted for three Philadelphia tallies.

There was a flurry of hits, too, each team collecting 12. Both starting pitchers retired, but Jim Bagby was credited with his eighth victory against three defeats. Bob Harris, the A's starter, was charged with the loss.

Hockett, second at bat for the Tribe in the first, brought in Roy Weatherly, who walked, with his four-bagger. Fleming scored his seventh homer of the season in the third, and Keltner's circuit blow in the fifth drove in Hockett ahead of him.

The A's, tallying their first run in the fourth, scored the rest in the fifth. Johnson's smash into the left bleachers brought in two of his mates.

Telegraphic Skeet Title To D. C. Team

By the Associated Press

Stratford, Conn., June 23.—The National Capital Skeet Club of Washington, D. C., was announced today as the winner of the national telegraphic sket shoot held in conjunction with the great Eastern skeet championships here last weekend.

The Washington squad, which retained its team title in the regular shoot, posted a total of 491 in the telegraphic competition, two targets better than its closest competitors among the 46 teams throughout the Nation which participated in the event.

The Gary (Ind.) Municipal Gun Club and the Austin (Tex.) Skeet and Gun Club tied for second with 489's. A coin toss gave the Indianans second place and the Austin Club the Class 1 prize.

Other class winners included: Class 5, Corpus Christi (Tex.) Gun Club, 471; Class 6, Pioneer Gun Club, Des Moines, Iowa, 462; Class 7, Southern Hills Skeet Club, Tulsa, Okla.

Grab a ringside seat!

This show's a honey! IMPERIAL is showing the town something in whiskey flavor, whiskey goodness—an expensive, "imported-whiskey" flavor at a blushingly modest price. It's a ringside seat to fine whiskey enjoyment at a balcony price, mister—so try this unique and different whiskey today!

GREAT FOR TWO BIG REASONS!

1. "Flavor-peaked" base whiskies! This superb American blend has that expensive, "imported-whiskey" flavor because its foundation whiskies are specially distilled to give them individual qualities—then blended together to a delicate "flavor peak."

2. "Velveted" spirits! Choice spirits actually made in the same stills as the rare base whiskies are then "velveted" by a method similar to the softening of spirits used in making fine Scotch.

IT'S "MR. BIG" WITH LITTLE PRICE!

If you aren't the throwaway type when it comes to money—yet plenty fussy when it comes to whiskey flavor—take one get-acquainted drink of IMPERIAL. One sip and we believe you'll say—"There's my first-choice whiskey from now on!"

Rolls Rough Takes Charles Town Feature Race by 2 Lengths

Favorite Out Front All the Way

By Walter Haight
A Staff Correspondent

Charles Town, W. Va., June 23.—Making every post a winning one, Rolls Rough, owned by R. C. Waple of Fairfax, Va., won the Bluejacket Purse featuring the Tuesday program of the victory meeting here on the West Virginia Panhandle. The 3-year-old son of Rolls Royce found the heavy track to his liking and came to the wire two lengths in advance of J. Pedrosa's Cushlamacree. A neck farther back was Mrs. R. W. Chambers' Honey Play. Only three others competed in the test of 120 feet more than 6 furlongs.

Rolls Rough was installed a second choise to Cushlamacree and returned a $5.60 mutuel to his backers. His time of 1:22 1-5 was fair under the track conditions. Cushlamacree ran out when apparently the winner of her previous race and today had more trouble of a different nature.

When the break came, Jockey E. Fort had the daughter of Mr. Bones in a tight spot and was forced to pull back to last position. The long-named filly ran a winning race from there, but could not overtake the flying pacemaker, Rolls Rough. The winner was strongly ridden by Jockey Butsy Hernandez.

Jockey Wayne Weber was blamed for shutting off Cushlamacree leaving the gate and the stewards slapped a fine of $25 on him.

The locally-owned Heloria Stable sent out two winners on the eight-race program, Battle Line carried the white, red and brown colors to victory in the fourth race, leading High Blame and City Judge to the wire to pay a $9.20 mutuel. In the seventh race, Harbell galloped along in front, winning by 20 lengths from Candle Ends. Lady Mowlee was third in the field of five. The winner paid $3.20. Jockey Sammy Palumbo rode both.

Thirty-seven tickets were cashed on the day's $152.20 daily double. Jockey Danny Scocca started the ball rolling with a victory aboard Mrs. Evelyn Smith's Nyleve, a $21 shot and Jockey Carson Kirk brought D. H. Tabler's Strumming home to put the finishing touches on the sizeable pay-off. Strumming paid $14.60 in his own right.

MISS BRICK BAR	(Claggett)	112	8	1	8	8	8	8	43.80

Two-dollar mutuels paid—FREE GIRL, $48.20, $19.60, $10.20; SUG, $14.40, $7.60; HOPEFOR $4.40.

FREE GIRL forced to front in opening furlong, drew out and held sway under strong handling to end. SUG was in first flight from break, was hard ridden and closed with good energy. HOPEFOR was slow to begin and closed willingly. SOME WHERE went evenly.

SECOND RACE—Six and one-half furlongs. Purse, $300; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 3:04. Off at 3:04. Winner, Mrs. E. Smith's br. g. (3) by Ned Reigh—Denise. Trained by A. T. Smith. Value to winner, $215.00; second, $50; third, $25; fourth, $10. Time, 1:27.

Horses	Jockeys	Wgt.	Post	St.	¼	½	Str.	Fin.	Straight

Two-dollar mutuels paid—NYLEVE, $21.00, $9.20, $4.80; ADHELMAR, $7.80, $4.40; TAUT, $3.80.

NYLEVE, allowed to settle into best stride, improved position steadily along backstretch, responded when placed to punishment and wore down leaders to win going away. ADHELMAR was hard ridden while closest to TAUT'S pace and closed with good energy. TAUT saved ground while setting pace and weakened in final stages. SCOTCH SAGE improved position after 3 furlongs and closed willingly.

THIRD RACE—About 7 furlongs. Purse, $400; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 3:32. Off at 3:32½. Winner, D. H. Tabler's b. m. (7) by Royal Minstrel—Alice Harris. Trained by C. Houston. Value to winner, $300; second, $60; third, $30; fourth, $10. Time, 1:31⅘.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—STRUMMING, $14.60, $6.80, $3.80; BROOMORIA, $7.60, $3.60; VANTRYST, $3.00.

STRUMMING went to contention with bold rush, took command and was kept to pressure to hold BROOMORIA safe. BROOMORIA was shut off on backstretch, got through on inside and closed willingly. VANTRYST had no excuses. MOST ALERT was used up running in front and weakened.

Daily Double, NYLEVE and STRUMMING, paid $152.20

FOURTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $400; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won handily; place driving. Went to post at 3:58. Off at 3:58½. Winner, Heloria Stable's br. h. (5) by Mars—Red Ribbon. Trained by J. L. Cartright. Value to winner, $300; second, $60; third, $20; fourth, $10. Time, 1:54⅘.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—BATTLE LINE, $9.20, $3.60, $3.20; HIGH BLAME, $4.40, $3.20; CITY JUDGE, $2.80.

BATTLE LINE saved ground early, went through on inside to take command, drew out and won with speed in reserve. HIGH BLAME was sluggish early, improved position gradually and closed willingly. CITY JUDGE saved ground but could not menace winner at any stage. WINDSOR CHIEF was not a serious factor.

FIFTH RACE—About 4½ furlongs. Purse, $400; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 4:24. Off at 4:25. Winner, J. C. Crivella's br. f. (4) by Twink—Alicia W. Trained by J. C. Crivella. Value to winner, $300; second, $60; third, $30; fourth, $10. Time, 0:53.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—FLICK, $38.00, $19.00, $9.00; PANDORAMINT, $6.20, $2.80; CLOCKS, $2.40.

FLICK had keen speed from start, drew out and held PANDORAMINT safe in closing stages. PANDORAMINT was vigorously handled from start and closed willingly. CLOCKS was off poorly and failed to reach serious contention. SONNY H. was a beaten-off fourth.

SIXTH RACE—Charles Town course. Purse, $600; allowances. For 3-year-olds. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 4:51½. Off at 4:52. Winner, R. C. Waple's br. c. (3) by Rolls Royce—Play Laura. Trained by M. H. Everhart. Value to winner, $425; second, $100; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 1:22⅘.

†Broke down.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—HAREBELL, $3.20, $2.60, $2.40; CANDLE ENDS, $3.40, $2.40; LADY MOWLEE, $2.80.

HAREBELL went to front early, opened long lead and won with speed in reserve. CANDLE ENDS was strongly handled, but was no match for winner and was best of others. LADY MOWLEE and BABY MOWLEE were outrun. IVA MAE broke down at far turn.

EIGHTH RACE—One and one-eighth miles. Purse, $400; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 5:47. Off at 5:48. Winner, N. Theodore's ch. h. Two-dollar mutuels paid—TRYSAK, $6.80, $3.40, $2.80; YANKEE LAD, $3.80, $2.80; VOLDEAR, $5.60.

TRYSAK went into lead at once, set steady pace and was kept to drive in closing stages to hold YANKEE LAD safe. YANKEE LAD was steadied for quarter, rallied when placed to drive, but could not seriously menace winner. VOLDEAR closed willingly. BOB JUNIOR saved ground and had no excuses.

Bill Bennings
—At The Post

Dear Al:

The Russ Hodges Purse will feature today's program and the WOL sports announcer is giving a war bond to the winning owner. I suspect he will come up to see the battle. If he does, Walter Haight will have him on the air at 4 p. m. Jockey Henri Mora, a little gentleman, is visiting here for a few days. He plans to ride in Detroit next week. Bill (Shepherdstown) Snyder and the charming Mrs. Snyder entertained the press and turf officials at dinner on the Potomac last night, and they are still the champions. He is publisher of the Shepherdstown Independent and postmaster of that city. Trainer Pat Poluch has taken over the training Never Home. The fast sprinter, Light of Morn, has been shipped to Delaware Park. Ultima Thule has been sold by A. S. Hewitt to E. B. Lee. Jockey Carson Kirk has been fined $10 for hitting Jockey Butsy Hernandez with his whip in the third race last Monday. The vetran distance performer Stand Alone has been taken over by Trainer J. Miller. Stand Alone races for W. J. Berry. H. R. Smith bolstered his small stable when he purchased the plater Sir Time from A. J. Lacoste. Terms were not made public. See you on the rail.

BILL.

First race—WESTING appears slightly best of the sprinters gathered for the day's opener. Needed that last race. DEL CHARM has stretch punch and may be along in time to be dangerous. SEA PILOT to take care of the show end.

Second race—CHILLEVALLEE turned in a promising race over this short route. Today could be the day and I'm going to string along. STAR DANCE has speed and belongs close. PHAIR YDLER to fill out the money circle.

Third race—ANYA showed me enough to warrant a top selection in this field. Could win at a fair price. LEE'S JIMMIE will get a change in riders and is a threat. EXPORT for the minor cash.

Fourth race—HARD LOSER has shown good races here and deserves the call over this field. MY ONE is consistent and belongs close. HIGHLAND SONG is a hard-knocking plater and deserves consideration.

Fifth race—GAYSET is a long shot that I believe can turn back a field of this sort. Needs some saddle help, however. AUTOGO is suited by this route. BILL K. belongs in the pay circle.

Sixth race—FUSIONETTE won impressively last out and may come back to beat these. CENTERVILLE, another recent winner, is a threat. GLITTER GIRL has speed and belongs in the first flight.

Seventh race—SHAILEEN gets my call in the day's feature, the Russ Hodges Purse. Gets in light and has enough class to beat these. ROYAL ECHO is good now and will be a threat. INDIAN SEA improves with every effort.

Eighth race—JUMELUS, from the No. 1 post position, looks like the right one in this distance affair. DON ORLAN and TYR to account for the place and show.

Ninth race—HOT MAN won his last and should make it two in a row. STAND ALONE and GAY TROUBADOR to fill out the money bracket.

Barse Collects Junior Golf Crown in Playoff With Skinker

New Champ Steady as Foe Falters

Scores of 76, 74, 37 Hung Up as Loser Twice Tosses Away Convincing Leads

By Merrell W. Whittlesey

Joe Barse, a 17-year-old husky from Columbia Country Club, won the District Junior Championship yesterday at Washington, but only after Earle Skinker found a half-dozen assorted ways to toss the title to his clubmate, finally accomplishing the feat in a nine-hold playoff. Barse had 76, 74—150, and 37 on the extra nine. Skinker 75, 75, 38.

Skinker has been knocking around in local tournaments since he was no bigger than his golf bag, but at the age of 20 he had never won the city junior crown. He was apparently over the hump yesterday with three holes to play as he led Barse by two strokes in what turned out to be an individual battle between the playing partners.

Then things began to happen. Skinker, with par in for a 71 in the afternoon on the sixteenth tee, sliced two balls out of bounds and finished with a six, losing a stroke to Barse who was trapped off the tee and again on his second and took five. On the seventeenth Skinker failed to allow for the ditch which traps the tee shots and he was in the water on the drive. He played a great shot out, chipped within 4 feet of the cup and then missed the putt and Barse parred the hole.

Topping Starts

On the eighteenth, with the match even, Barse topped his drive and topped a brassie but finally holed a 12-foot pressure putt for a one-over par five as Skinker sliced his drive on the first fairway, was short in two, past the cup in three and missed the putt for his par.

The boys were instructed to play nine holes for the title before half the field had finished as it was obvious that nobody could catch them after Dick Burgess finished with 75, 77—152, and defending Champion Tom Brandon was headed for an 80 after an opening 76.

Skinker won the first hole of the playoff with a par four, knocked in a 15-footer on the second for a birdie two and played the third hole well for a par four to Barse's five and at the end of three holes was three strokes up. They halved the next and again things began to happen—to Skinker.

He drove past the par 4 fifth green off the tee, used questionable judgement in trying to run a ball through a trap and finally missed a short putt for his par. Barse picked up another stroke on the sixth when Skinker three-putted and then climaxed the day on the seventh by sinking a 30-foot approach shot after Skinker looked like a sure thing to win the hole. Instead he lost it.

Barse Three-Putts

Barse then three-putted the eighth hole to give Skinker a halve in bogey fives, but the former averted a further playoff on the ninth when he hit the par three green from the tee and two-putted for his par while Skinker pulled his tee shot and missed a 4-foot putt to halve the hole. Barse had scored birdie deuces on the ninth the other two times he played it.

Barse, a 200-pounder who has been working hard on his game, is currently hitting the ball the best of his career and he proved he can play under pressure when he holed that long putt on the thirty-sixth hole to tie and then came back to pick up four strokes on the last five holes to win the playoff.

Norman Manders, of the host club, won the prize for the under-16 golfers with an 83, 79—162.

Barse graduated from Roosevelt High two weeks ago and was a member of the Dawes Cup championship team. He wears a hat with all his scholastic victims and the scores inscribed upon it.

Canadian Army Calls A's Hurler Marchildon

Penetanguishene, Ontario, June 23 (AP).—Phil Marchildon, a pitcher for the Philadelphia Athletics of the American League, has received his call-up from the Canadian active army, relatives were advised here today.

Under the Canadian call-up regulations, Marchildon will take four months' training and then enter the active service for home defense unless he volunteers active service overseas.

Marchildon pitched for the Toronto Maple Leafs of the International League before joining the A's in 1940.

Richard Kreuzburgs, Golfers, Have New Son

Mrs. Richard Kreuzburg, the Kenwood Women's Club champion, presented her husband, also a good amateur golfer, with a 7½-pound son yesterday.

The future golfing member of the Kreuzburg family just missed his mother's birthday by a day. Mrs. Kreuzburg won several tournaments before her marriage as Virginia Pope.

Schroeder and Dee Win in College Tennis

Favorites Pressed Into Long Second Set Before Taking Doubles Decision

By the Associated Press

New Orleans, June 23.—Stanford's top-seeded doubles team of Ted Schroeder and Larry Dee had a strenuous fight today to oust an unher-alded Rice duo in the National Intercollegiate Tennis Tournament, in a day notable chiefly for the failure of Ted Olewine, seeded second in the singles, to arrive on the scene.

Schroeder and Dee eliminated Ray Gladman and Jack Rodgers, 6—4, 13—11, after a prolonged match in which the Texans simply refused to lie down and take their prescribed beating.

The singles play proceeded about according to schedule except that John Hickman of Texas University, seeded eighth, lost to unseeded Robert Jake of Northwestern, 2—6, 9—7, 6—2.

Absence of Olewine, runner-up in the singles and member of the champion doubles team last year, clipped some of the glamour from the meet for he was generally expected to settle the individual title business with his fellow Californian, Schroeder.

Olewine's first-round opponent, Walter Driver of Texas, advanced by default.

Results of other matches:

Singles — Seymour Greenberg, Northwestern, seeded No. 3, defeated Vincent Distefano, Southwestern Louisiana Institute, 6—2, 6—2; Driver ousted Dan Canale, Notre Dame, 4—6, 7—5, 6—1; Eric Pratt, Kalamazoo College, beat H. B. Fowler, U. S. Naval Academy, 1—6, 6—3, 6—1; Bill Reedy, Southern California, seeded No. 4, eliminated Joseph Ball, Texas, 6—1, 6—4.

Doubles—Olen Parks and Jim Ford, Notre Dame, beat Hardy Fowler and Elston Wyatt, Navy, 7—5, 4—6, 6—3; Canale and Bob Faught, Notre Dame, ousted Pratt and Bill Culver, Kalamazoo, 6—2, 6—2.

Timber Wolf Ten Defeated By Surf Club

With young "Lefty" Sullivan pitching one-hit ball, Surf Club last night defeated the Timber Wolves of Battery H, Seventy-first Coast Artillery, at Washington Softball Stadium in the softball battle, 2 to 0.

The soldiers exhibited a remarkably fast team, sparked by Left Fielder Turoczi, a burglar in uniform. In the second inning he robbed the civilians of a run with a rifle throw from left which nipped Ben Harrell at the plate. Again in the ninth he went far into foul territory to bring down Jackie Walsh's long fly.

Tonight at the stadium Kavakos Grill, 1941 metropolitan champions, will tackle Garvin's Grill in the feature game. Tommy Boggs, premier clouter, who is on furlough from A. P. Hill Reservation, Va., will be in the Kavakos line-up. In the preliminary Greenbelt will take on FBI.

Heurich Routs Mellanos by 15-1 Count

Despite the use of four hurlers, Mellanos Cafe nine suffered one of the most one-sided losses in its Post-Industrial League career yesterday, a 15-1 lacing administered by the Heurich Brewers on the Ellipse.

The winners belted Silverman, Downes, Orlando and Leach for 16 safeties in the eight-inning game. Meanwhile Art Lacy limited Mellanos to eight hits and its one run in the sixth inning. Home runs by Zello Lagos and Huck Stahl featured the slugging of the Brewers.

Sullivan Gets Regular Job With Griffs

certain plays, but he has a good pair of hands, he's young, and he can throw. And if he learns to play shortstop, we'll have one more good hitter on the club, because Sullivan stings the ball pretty well."

The young Irishman came to the Nats via Thomasville, Ga., and Chattanooga, and in the few games thus far, Harris has been impressed with his determination to make good. "Bluege ran his tongue out the other day, hitting Sullivan ground balls, and the kid was still asking for more. That made an impression on me."

Harris is willing to sacrifice some of Pofahl's superior defensive ability for the better hitting of Sullivan. He's also taking the long-range view of the shortstop situation. "The only way we're going to improve is to develop a shortstop. We can't buy one. And we will have saved something from a poor season if Sullivan develops as a regular for us."

The Nats got no action today for the second day in a row. It blew up cold in Chicago and the White Sox called off the scheduled game at noon. Tomorrow they will try again to get in a ball game. Early Wynn will pitch for the Nats and Jimmy Dykes will try to beat them with one of his second-flight hurlers — right-handed Johnny Humphries.

Bob Bensinger Opens Defense Of Net Crown

Bobby Bensinger, the District junion champion, gets a chance starting today to regain prestige lost in his humiliating loss to newcomer Frank Willett in the finals of the Columbia Invitation tournament last week.

Bensinger, who suffered his first defeat by the one-sided count of 6-0, 6-4, 6-0, will defend his City of Washington junior crown at Friends School. The city boys tournament also opens today and will run concurrently. No players have been seeded among the boys, because none of them was ranked last year.

Following Bensinger in the junior seedings are John Waits, jr., Sterling Lee and Britt Schweitzer, 1941 boys' champion.

Today's matches start at 10 a.m. and the schedule follows:

Junior Patriots
First Round

10 a. m.—Lee Wood vs. Bob Hutchinson, Sterling Lee vs. Web Mealey, Gary Schweitzer vs. Bud Adams, Lawrence Ris vs. Pat Wilson, Leonard Solomon vs. Sam Doyle, John Waits, jr., vs. Leon Forman, W. Fishing with JACK BELL

Saturday afternoon, June 20, the creels of nine trout fishermen on Fishing Creek were checked. The total catch of the nine was 78 trout, ranging size from 10 inches to 16½. Two young country boys had their limit of 10 trout each. The creel of one lad not over 14 consisted of fish ranging from 12 to 16½ inches, three of them were between 15 and 16½ inches. The other lad had 10 trout that averaged 12."

JACK BELL

It was found that all nine fishermen caught their fish in the morning. That very morning Fishing Creek was stocked with trout. Other anglers who were only able to make the afternoon fishing did not fare so well because the pools were cleaned out.

This condition will always be with us, because there are "wolves" who are only waiting for the hatchery truck to plant the fish and immediately proceed behind the truck to clear out the pools. Some brag about it.

The trouting season in Maryland is about over, and the opinion gathered from many trout fishermen is that so far it was not a good one. There is room for improvement, and we hope to see Maryland's Game Department consider a new policy with its 1943 stocking method. That is that the day, time, and stretch of water that is to be stocked with fish should be made public. With the planting of the fish, those waters should then be posted with signs at the lower and upper ends of the stocked stretch with signs, "No Fishing Allowed for 24 hours."

New Jersey, is practicing this method and Pennsylvania on certain streams is finding it successful. It is a plan worth trying, giving the fish a chance to spread out and become acclimated to the stream, thereby making it more difficult to catch them, spreading out the sport over a week or two and not for a day or two. We would like to hear from trout fishermen about their veiws in this regard.

Those who ventured out on the Chesapeake Bay and over the "Geoses" and Eastern Bay over weekend and earlier the past week found plenty of fishing.

O. B. Lane, J. H. Rush, Grant Bergstresser, Parkins Birthright, R. Ruebsam, and Al Googins, say they fond the fishing on the "Gooses" the best ever. In a matter of a few hours, with the efficient help of Capt. Howard Bennett, of Kenwood, they boated 101 hardheads, all good-sized fish. As the fishing got under way they agreed not to take over 100 fish. The last man catching a fish, however, made a doubleheader haul and the score 101. They left the best fishing behind them just as it was getting dark.

Sunday the first of three qualifying casting contests for the Neptune trophy was held. The contest had a good turnout of both spectators and casters. The first five winners, who are now eligible to compete in the final or fourth contest were; Lou Gramlich, first; Jack Nelson, second; B. H. Nallan, third; Ben Dement, fourth, and Glen Reynolds fifth.

These five casters will be permitted to cast in the second or third contest, though their scores will not be considered in either, giving five others a chance to place in either the second or third. That will make a total of 15 qualifying casters for the final, best score taking the trophy.

Last night in Alexandria, Va., the first company of "minute men" was organized. This company to be known officially as the Virginia Reserve Militia, is composed of licensed hunters and fishermen, who own and know how to handle their firearms.

The Virginia Reserve Militia is being organized to fill in a much need gap in our plan for national defense. Local persons are more apt to detect the presence of strangers or suspicious persons near and around strategic points such as waterworks, electric plants, gas plants and etc., than are guards brought in from far away, not knowing the residents or natives.

Licensed hunters and fishermen, because of their hunting and fishing activities are thoroughly familiar with the surrounding woods, swamps and other possible hideaways.

Full House Expected for Rassle Card

Promoter Joe Turner announced yesterday that there was a brisk demand for tickets and reservations for tomorrow night's reopening at Turner's Arena featuring Jimmy Londos, the Gorgeous Greek, and champion, against Tommy O'Toole, the Irisher from the Coast Guard.

Turner said he looked forward to a packed house, for he points out that Jeemy always has attracted like a magnet and that fans have not had their wrestling regularly for at least four months—ever since the walkathon came into the arena.

Of particular interest is the announcement that Londos has invited George II, King of Greece, to be his guest, and definite word on his acceptance is expected when Londos goes to New York today.

Meanwhile O'Toole, benefiting by the experience of three years of intensive campaigning since his last match with Londos, is hopeful of springing an upset. "O'Toole has won his last two local matches since his return to these parts, having won from Joe Cox and Lou Plummer.

The supporting card has been closed out and finds Maurice LaChappelle and John Mulem facing Henry Kulkovich and Jim Austeri in a two-man team match; Abe Yourist opposing Hans Kampfer and Michele Leone engaging Milo Steinborn.

Tickets at popular prices are on sale at Turner's Arena, Fourteenth and W Streets Northwest, MIchigan 6614.

Corpl. Louis Visits Home; Wife Is Ill

By the Associated Press

Chicago, June 23.—Corpl. Joe Louis, his blue denim Army bag slung over his shoulder, returned to his home today and found his ice man and neighbors gathered outside to greet him.

He shook hands with all.

His wife, Marva Trotter Louis, has been ill with a cold for three days, Louis said.

The world's heavyweight champion is being transferred from Camp Upton, Long Island, to Fort Riley, Kans., where he will join a cavalry replacement unit. Louis requested the cavalry when he was inducted last January 10, because he likes horses.

Louis said he had forgotten all about boxing.

"The Army comes first and Uncle Sam is the boss," he explained. But under questioning, he added:

"If I should fight any more, I won't meet anybody but Billy Conn. No other fight would draw. The public says so and I say so."

The titleholder left for his new post at Fort Riley tonight, traveling alone for the first time since he became an outstanding boxer 10 years ago. Always one of his managers or his trainer, the late Jack Blackburn, traveled with him.

Lou Novikoff Homers, Cubs Top Phils, 8-4

By International News Service

Philadelphia, June 23.—The Chicago Cubs won the opening game of their series with the Phillies today, 8 to 4, aided by Lou Novikoff's three-run homer in the fifth.

The Phillies got to Vern Olsen for five hits and four runs in the seventh to approach within one run of a tie, but the Cubs bounced back with three in the ninth. Bill Nicholson accounted for two of the latter with a triple to center.

Olsen was credited with the victory, although he failed to finish.

Curbs Removed On Numerous Building Items

By the Associated Press

Inventory limitations were lifted by the War Production Board yesterday from a large group of slow-moving, noncritical building materials.

The order provided that dealers holding stocks of the materials need no longer include them in records and reports called for under the inventory limitation order, although they remain subject to the basic priority regulation requiring a "minimum practicable working" inventory.

The materials affected are Portland and natural cement, lime, gypsum and gypsum products, bituminous roofing materials, concrete pipe, cut stone, sand and gravel, crushed stone, clay products, insulation board, accoustical materials, mineral wool, paving materials, concrete products, brass, lumber, wooden millwork.

On Civilian War Front

Other developments on the civilian war front included:

The War Production Board froze all large stocks of canned beef in the United States for 90 days and made them available to the armed services. At the same time, WPB indicated that after July 2 all canned beef imports probably would be diverted to the Army or Navy.

The order was of major importance to South American countries, since canned beef imported by this country consists chiefly of corned beef received from Argentina, Uruguay, Brazil and Paraguay.

The Senate has approved a two-year extension of Presidential authority to requisitiion munitions and other critical articles intended for foreign nations, after hearing that more than 8000 carloads of these still are tied up in railroad yards of this country.

Senator Thomas (Democrat), Utah, told the Senate that shipments of much military equipment and tools to nations since subjected by Axis powers had been denied export from this country and that broad Presidential authority to requisition this would expire June 30, unless extended.

The Office of Price Administration made provision for the adjustment of abnormally low ceiling prices on ice sold to commerial or industrial users so as to reflect usual summer price levels.

By previous action, OPA had permitted upward adjustment of prices on ice sold to household consumers and the new action extends the same relief to ice manufacturers and distributors on sales to commercial and industrial users.

Senator Clark (Democrat), Missouri, told the Senate it should investigate an order he said was likely to be issued by the War Production Board against the use of nitrogen in farm crop fertilizers until next spring.

Clark said the Senate ought to investigate to determine if this order was to be issued to curtail the production of wheat, rather than to conserve nitrogen.

Although large quantities of meat will be needed for lend-lease and military requirements this year, the Agricultural Department foresaw yesterday a sufficient supply for civilian consumption.

The per capita supply of meats for civilian consumption, the department said, is expected to be at least as great as the 1931-40 average and materially larger than that of the short supply years of 1934 and 1936.

The department reported that the largest meat production on record was anticipated during 1942 and that it now appeared that the goal of about 21,700,000,000 pounds might be reached.

Drug and hardware stores, jewelers and other retailers who must have statements of maximum prices on file for public inspection by July 1 may use catalogues or similar printed price lists supplied by wholesalers, manufacturers or trade organizations, the Office of Price Administration said yesterday, as long as they include every item in stock which is covered by the ceiling.

Illusory Tax

By S. Oliver Goodman
Post Financial Editor

Treasury Proposals for Revision of Gains Tax Would Provide a Longer Carryover of Losses

This is the second in a series of articles reviewing the bitter battle to revise the capital gains and loss tax, the so-called "illusory tax" or the "Treasury's pot of gold at the end of the rainbow." The tax, one of the least productive of revenue, has led other permanent levies in volume of litigation and difficulty of administration.

The late Morris S. Tremaine, while comptroller of the State of New York, said that the capital gains tax 'positively has never produced a dollar of net revenue for the State.' He added that such a tax 'dams up the normal ebb and flow of trade . . . Because of it, many real estate owners have refused attractive offers of purchase The buyer is prevented from buying and improving property; contractors miss a job . . . The city misses an increased tax on porposed new building, and the Government collects no capital gains tax."

Impressive testimony in recent months has been given in support of the Boland Bill which was described in yesterday's article. Although the United States is the only important country to impose a tax on capital gains, the hope for complete removal of such taxes doesn't exist at present.

Treasury Secretary Henry Morgenthau recognized the need for some revision by recommending that up to $1000 of capital net loss be deducted from "other" income in the current year.

By recommending that capital net losses be carried forward and offset against future capital net gains over a five-year period, the Treasury Department agrees with sponsors of the Boland Bill that the present one-year carryover is insufficient. A five-year carryover, it was pointed out, would eliminate much of the restraint shown by traders who hestitate to take profits which would mean an unproportionate boost in current year's income.

Randolph E. Paul, appearing in behalf of the Treasury Department before the House Ways and Means Committee, opposed the Boland Bill and offered these proposals in its stead:

In the case of INDIVIDUALS (1) the distinction between long-term and short-term capital gains and losses is retained and a single holding period of 18 months is prescribed instead of the 18 and 24 months' periods under the present law;

(2) One-half of net long term capital gains are included in net income subject to normal and surtax rates, with a maximum effective rate on net gains of 30 per cent instead of 15 per cent and 20 per cent in the present law;

(3) Losses, whether short-term or long-term, are allowed as an offset against gains, whether short or long term, and as a deduction from other income to the extent of $1000 in the current year;

(4) Losses may be carried forward for five years against future gains.

In the case of CORPORATIONS (1) The present distinction between short-term and long-term losses is abolished;

(2) Losses are deductible against other income of the current year up to $1000;

(3) A five-year carry over of net losses against future gains is permitted.

As already stated, the Boland Bill in the case of both individuals and corporations provides for a flat rate of 10 per cent applying to all capital gains, regardless of the length of time the asset has been held, and for a two-year carryover of losses against future gains.

The House Ways and Means Committee has approved tentatively the major provisions of the Treasury proposals, with these modifications:

The holding period is made 15 months instead of 18 months, and the maximum effective rate of tax on long-term gains is made 25 per cent instead of 30 per cent. However, a final decision on these questions has not been reached.

In the lengthy hearings on the Boland Bill before the Ways and Means Committee in March appeared these withnesses:

Robert B. Dresser, a member of the executive committee of the American Taxpayers Association.

Emil Schram, president of the New York Stock Exchange.

Elisha M. Friedman, consulting economist.

Andre Istel, formerly a private banker in Paris and technical adviser to the French Ministry of Finance under Paul Reynaud, who testified regarding the French law.

Albert Andriesse, a former partner of the banking house of Pierson & Co., Amsterdam, Holland, who testified regarding the law of Holland.

D. M. Van Buren, a private banker and formerly professor of the ethics of finance at the University of Brussells, who testified regarding the Belgian law.

Celanese Files $35,000,000 New Offering

By the Associated Press

Philadelphia, June 23—The Celanese Corporation of America, the largest producer of cellulose acetate yarns in the United States, filed with the Securities and Exchange Commission today a registration statement covering a proposed issue of $35,000,000 of three and one-half per cent debentures, due July 1, 1962.

Proceeds from the sale would be used to redeem $24,700,000 of outstanding three per cent debentures, due 1955, pay off $3,000,000 of bank loans and the balance applied to general funds for plant additions and improvements and other capital expenditures.

Principal underwriters were named as Dillon, Read & Co. and Glore, Forgan & Co., both of New York City. The initial offering price and names of other underwriters will be supplied by amendment.

Treasury Borrowing May Pass 4 Billion

By the Associated Press

Secretary Morgenthau estimated yesterday that Treasury borrowing, through the sale of regular securities, will total between $3,750,000,000 and $4,500,000,000 in July and August.

He added that this was in line with the war financing expectations and that details would be announced from time to time.

These borrowings are in addition to the sale of war bonds, for which the Treasury has set a goal of one billion dollars a month in July and August.

Advertising Seen Essential For Free Press

By the Associated Press

New York, June 23.—Former District Attorney Thomas E. Dewey today described advertising as "an instrument of freedom" and urged 600 members of the Advertising Federation of America to fight for it as a "necessary part of a free press and free radio."

Speaking at a luncheon meeting of the federation's thirty-eighth annual convention, Dewey said:

"You are enlisted today in the cause of maintaining the instruments of freedom for which we fight. You must maintain advertising as an instrument of freedom, because after the war is won, you will have another great job to do. We do not know how long this war may last, but we can see that the longer it does last the greater will be our need of many necessities. After we have total victory those things we are doing without will be as essential as the once were, and more so.

Free Press Essential

"There can be no freedom without a free press, and there can be no free press unless it is able to print its papers without subsidy from any man, any single industry or any government."

He called advertising "the only means yet devised for producing the necessary revenue to support a free press, and I may add, free radio."

Dewey said the German radio under Propaganda Minister Goebbels was a dispenser of "hogwash."

"Once you stifle free speech and free criticism," he said, "you stifle the face of the people."

Paper Seen Plentiful

Paper "is plentiful in all its forms, despite a widespread misconception," Christopher Browne, editor of "Modern Packaging," said today at the convention.

Browne said later that his statement meant that newsprint, as well as other kinds of paper, was plentiful. Material for newsprint still was available in vast quantities, he said.

He predicted that paper "would take the place of tin and metal foils in many cases, since paper alone has escaped priority regulations."

Philip Morris Net Sales at New High

New York, June 23 (AP).—Record sales and earnings were reported yesterday by Philip Morris & Co., Ltd., Inc., for the fiscal year ended March 31 last.

Consolidate net earnings totaled $7,792,565 or approximately $8 a share. This compared with $7,360,669 or $8.14 a common share in the preceding year. The decline in share earnings in the latest period was accounted for by the issuance of preferred stock in February of this year, increasing the charge for preferred dividends.

Sales in the past fiscal year were $112,565,201, an increase of 29 per cent over the preceeding twelve months.

Overpaying for Scrap, OPA Charges Steel Firm

Chicago, June 23 (AP).—The Office of Price Administration filed suit in Federal Court today asking an injunction against the Inland Steel Co. to prevent its purchasing of iron and steel scrap at prices above Government maximums.

The complaint alleged that the company, largest purchaser of iron and steel scrap in the Chicago area, had violated price ceilings by payment of prices in excess of OPA scheduled maximums and by acceptance of scrap that was inferior to the grades for which the company was billed.

Towson Enters Army, Leaves U. S. Post

Norman E. Towson, assistant director of the Foreign Funds Control Division, has received a leave of absence to become a captain in the Army. Mr. Towson in his Treasury Department position assisted in the Federal seizure of approximately $7,400,000,000 in foreign assets.

Well known in local financial quarters, he formerly was in charge of the foreign department of the Washington Loan & Trust Co. He was connected with the bank for about 20 years before joining the Treasury Department about two years ago.

Bosch Stock Is Placed in U. S. Custody

By the Associated Press

New York, June 23.—The twice adjourned annual stockholders meeting of the American Bosch Corp. was held today and George Murnane, chairman, reported that 77 per cent of the outstanding stock held by him in voting trust for foreign interests had been deposited with Leo T. Crowley, alien property custodian.

Murnane said Crowley had approved reelection of the present board of five directors, an action ratified by the stockholders at the meeting. An increase in the board to seven members was to be effected later, two of the new directors to represent the alien property custodian.

American Bosch Corp., a manufacturer of ignition and fuel injection devices, was taken over by the Government a month ago by the alien property custodian's acquisition of 535,000 shares of the capital stock.

Under the freezing order issued by President Roosevelt on June 14, 1941, the corporation was classified as "Swedish national" because 77 per cent of its stock was beneficially owned by Swedish interests.

The Treasury, in December, 1941, reclassified the corporation as a national of Germany and the Netherlands, as well as of Sweden, undertaking at the same time an investigation of its affairs.

In taking possession of the corporation's stock, Crowley said his action "implied no criticism of the present management or directorate of American Bosch Corp., which have made an excellent record in the war effort."

The company's property is at Springfield, Mass.

Coal Freight Car Shortage Is Seen

New York, June 23 (AP).—Principal threats of railroad equipment shortages involve open-top cars for coal and other heavy loading carload freight, says Railway Age in its current issue.

"Total carloadings were slightly smaller in May," said the publication, "than last year because of the remarkable increase in average loading per car of less-than-carload merchandise. Consequently, the surplus of box cars increased from 33,705 in the last week of May, 1941, to 42,454 in the last week of May, 1942.

"But loadings of carload freight increased 7.2 per cent in May and were only 2 per cent smaller than at the 1941 peak last October. This reduced the surplus of gondola and hopper cars from almost 17,000 in the last week of May, 1941, to less than 10,000 in the last week of May, 1942."

Cargo Risk Rates Lifted On African Shipments

New York, June 23 (AP).—An increase to 15 per cent from 12½ in charges for cargo war risk insurance between the United States and Africa via the Cape of Good Hope was announced today by Marine Underwriters.

The rate included Red Sea and Egyptian Mediterranean port shipments. Rates for cargoes moving to other Mediterranean ports were to be quoted only on application.

Kroger Sales Up 25% In Four-Week Period

Cincinnati, June 23 (AP).—Kroger Grocery and Baking Co. today announced sales of $28,987,064 for the sixth four-week period ended June 13, or 25 per cent over sixth period sales of $23,204,440 in 1941.

Cumulative sales for 1942 totaled $167,049,830, up 27 per cent over sales of $132,029,564 for the same period last year.

Stocks Drift Unevenly Lower in Light Trade; Selected Issues Work Higher; Kodak Leaps $2

New York, June 23.—Selected stocks attracted buying support in today's market although many leaders loafed at slightly lower levels.

The better action of the list as a whole was attributed partly to the opinion in Wall Street that recent war reverses, while serious, were far from determning the conclusion of the conflict.

Early bids were forthcoming on the idea the fall of Libya had been pretty well discounted by Monday's stumble. Revival of hopes for a more lenient tax bill also were helpful to sentiment.

Trends edged upward at the start and prices were best around midday with gains ranging from fractions to a point or so. Top marks were reduced and advances converted into minor losses in numerous instances in the final hour.

The Associated Press average of 60 stocks was up .1 of a point at 35.2. Dealings fell sharply under yesterday's meager volume and transfers for the full proceedings of 207,980 shares were the lowest since August 26, 1940. They compared with 313,000 the day bfore.

Of 517 individual issues appearing on the ticker tape, 184 were up, 176 down and 157 unchanged.

Western Union was up ⅝ and Postal Telegraph preferred a point in response to the Senate's passage of the merger approval for these companies.

Eastman Kodak jumped 2 points. Modest gains were retained by Santa Fe, Goodyear, Montgomery Ward, Union Carbide, U. S. Gypsum, Douglas Aircraft and Standard Oil of N. J.

U. S. Steel and Bethlehem ended all even, while General Motors and Chrysler slipped a shade, along with American Telephone, Westinghouse, American Can and Woolworth.

Bonds were irregularly higher and commodities mixed. At Chicago wheat was down ⅝ to ¾ of a cent a bushel, corn unchanged to off ¼ and hogs 10 cents advanced. Cotton was unchanged to up 15 cents a bale.

In the Curb Brewster Aero and Great Atlantic & Pacific held moderate improvement. Minor losses were posted for Lake Shore, American Cyanamid and Niagara Hudson Power. Turnover here aggregated 45,215 shares versus 42,660 Monday.

Connolly Hot Oil Act Is Made Permanent

By the Associated Press

President Roosevelt signed yesterday a bill making permanent the Connally Hot Oil Act, legislation which forbids interstate shipment of oil produced in violation of State laws.

Originally passed in 1935 as a temporary measure, the bill was drafted to cope specifically with a situation in Texas. The law put an end to the unrestricted shipping of oil out of that State which had been produced in excess of production quotas fixed by the Texas Railroad Commission.

The bill was enacted at first for a two-year period. It was extended in 1937 for an additional two years, and then in 1939 for three years. Without the present legislation its terms would have expired June 30.

Iron and Steel Scrap Use Sets New Record

May consumption of iron and steel scrap in the manufacture of new steel was 4,857,000 gross tons, the highest for any month in history, The Institute of Scrap Iron & Steel, Inc., reported yesterday.

The previous record was 4,840,000 gross tons in March, 1942. April was third high month with 4,672,000 gross tons.

Total consumption of scrap in the first five months this year was 23,235,000 gross tons, compared with 22,127,000 tons in the same period of 1941 and 14,730,000 tons for the corresponding 1940 period.

Empire State Buys 22% of F and G War Bond Total

New York, June 23 (AP).—The people of New York tSate have purchased about $297,000,000—22 per cent of the national sales—of the newest war savings bond Series F and G, Bayard F. Pope, chairman of the New York State executive committee of the war savings staff, announced today.

Pope said sales in New York State of Series E, F and G combined had been approximately 18 per cent of sales throught the Nation. He addressed a meeting called to clarify the sphere of activities of bankers working on sales of the three series and of the victory fund committee concerned with other Federal war financing.

Pope said he thought the State eventually could absorb about two billion dollars in bonds each year, or one-sixth of the national total.

Wickwire Spencer Steel To Pay Off RFC Loan

New York, June 23 (AP).—The Wickwire Spencer Steel Co announced today directors had authorized payment of its Reconstruction Finance Corporation loan, which on May 1, last, amounted to $1,648,932. A new loan from a bank has been arranged, the company disclosed.

In connection with liquidation of the RFC loan, the company will terminate the voting trust of its stock.

At the company's annual meeting a few months ago a group of minority voting trust certificate holders pressed for termination of the voting trust agreement for the stock and repayment of the RFC loan, charging that the terms of the RFC borrowing tended to perpetuate the present management's control of the company through the voting trustees.

A. C. & F. Nets $12.09 a Share In Fiscal Year

By the Associated Press

New York, June 23.—The increasing momentum of the Nation's battle for production was indicated today by the American Car and Foundry Co.'s annual report announcing that earnings—augmented by the manufacture of tanks, shells, bombs and armor plate—were the best in more than 15 years.

Net profits of the company and its subsidiaries for the fiscal year ended April 30 were $9,275,376 after interest, depreciation and provision for estimated income and excess profits taxes, or $12.09 a common share after preferred dividends.

This compared with earnings of $5,161,129, or $5.23 a share, in the like 1941 period and with a net loss of $10,777 in the fiscal year ended April 30, 1940.

"The uncerttain factor," said Charles J. Hardy, president, "is as to what of the profit resulting from the year's operations will ultimately be available for distribution by way of dividends," taxation legislation still being in the offing.

Consolidated net sales billed were $216,336,567, while the company's backlog was $424,810,772, Hardy said. The company spent $11,143,767 out of its own resources, he said, to provide additional war production facilities. A 10-million-dollar indebtedness to banks was liquidated.

Utility Reports Loss On Rising Costs, Taxes

New York, June 23 (AP).—The report of the International Hydro-Electric System and subsidiaries for the quarter ended March 31 today showed a net loss of $31,825 compared with net profit of $317,707 for the first quarter of 1941.

For the 12 months ended March 31 there was a net loss of $859,889 against net profit of $373,087 for the preceding 12 months.

Irwin L. Moore, president, said in a statement accompanying the report that increased consolidated revenue had been offset by rising costs and increased taxes both in the United States and Canada.

"From a cash standpoint," said Moore, "the income of the system itself is also running below the amount required to meet expenses and to cover the full interest on the system's 6 per cent debentures."

Cities in All Regions Suffer as Plants Close

By James Marlow
and William Pinkerton
Wide World Business Writers.

Don't forget the towns the war passed by . . .

The one-industry towns of the Middle West whose stove factories, silk yarn mills, soft drink mixers have cut down for lack of the raw stuff and haven't obtained war contracts.

The little Southern shops which turned out a finished job in peace, and haven't the "know how"—or the machines, in many cases—for switching to subcontracting.

The county that lost 4000 customers to neighboring communities boom-happy with war work.

The deserted villages whose men have all gone off to airplane plants or tank assembly lines.

The Southern State where more than 200 small plants employing from 10 to 200 workers faced shutdowns long ago for lack of the necessary materials for civilian production.

The little fellows who needed machine tools to convert—and found that the big fellows had cornered the priorities.

The communities which formed war production "pools," uniting the skills of several factories to do a single job—and got no contracts.

The towns whose industries have the machines and skills to do a part of a war production job but are too far away from other shops to get into collaboration.

The town whose sole industrialist made repeated tries for war contracts or subcontracts and finally gave up discouraged.

The solid, self-made man with the going small-scale shop who flinched at trying to guess costs and dope out complicated Government specifications on new work without benefit of skilled accountants and engineers.

The men who got a bad deal or a bad break in the hustle-bustle of the contract race . . . The small manufacturer in Birmingham who got an invitation to bid on a contract involving subcontracting just five days before the bids were due in Atlanta. . . . The manufacturer who discovered that specifications for cotton mattresses called for a kind of material which none of his suppliers could furnish . . . The manufacturer whose stoves have warmed Southern homes for 50 years, who couldn't bid on camp stoves because specifications demanded not more than .06 per cent phosphorous content in the cast iron and his region's best iron tested .08 per cent phosphorus.

These are cases—probably multiplied a hundred-fold—which have turned up in confidential reports from all parts of the Nation since the first of the year.

Put them down on the "loss" side of the national ledger, which this month proudly showed that precious profit of "over the hump on war production."

Spokesmen for the War Production Board—fully aware of the dangers and tragedies implied in such cases—declare that the smaller industrialist soon would come into his own; that the first terrible need of the war was to produce, produce, produce, and, on short notice, the big fellows could do it faster and faster.

But too many smaller industrialists no longer have faith in such promises. They have been told repeatedly that they would be helped. They were told that in the fall of 1940, when the original advisory committee on national defense established a subcontracting section. They were told it again when the War Production Board was set up at the beginning of this year. Some have got orders; many still have not.

Now the smaller war plants corporation which Congress ordered into the WPB set-up by law will take another crack at solving the problem.

There are towns and cities which belie the stories told above—small cities booming along on subcontrac

Contract Bridge

Brilliant defense is where the champion shines, and Harry J. Fishbein, one of the country's most resourceful and dramatic players, displayed his skill on this hand dealt at the masters' individual championship. By overtaking his partner's trick on the first lead, even though he established a winner in dummy, Fishbein managed to time the defense so as to set the declarer at four spades, two tricks. Fishbein's partner was Mrs. Doris Fuller; declarer was the canny Sidney Silodor, Philadelphia master, who was paired with Mrs. Randolph Scott of Memphis.

Here are the cards, with both sides vulnerable and South dealer:

Mrs. Scott
♠ None
♡ K Q 8 3
◇ K 10 9 8 5
♣ K Q 10 3

Mrs. Fuller
♠ 10 5
◇ Q J 2
♣ A J 7 6 4

Fishbein
♠ 8 7 2
♡ 7 6 5 4 3
◇ A 7 6 3

Silodor
♠ A K Q J 9
♣ 9 5 2

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
4 ♠	Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: ◇ Q.

Uncle Bing, who watched the hand played, describes it like this:

"West opened the diamond queen and in spite of dummy's holding in the suit, Silodor cleverly ducked, but Fishbein correctly clattered right up with the diamond ace and returned the singleton club to the ace in the West hand.

"West returned the seven of clubs for Fishbein to ruff, and the heart ace gave East the ruff of another club, defeating the contract two tricks.

"If the diamond queen had been permitted to win, West indubitably would have shifted, but correct play would be to cash both aces before giving East a club ruff, which would have defeated the contract only one trick."

Dehydrated Butter Is New Development

Chicago, June 23 (AP).—Dehydrated butter is being produced in New Zealand, trade circles learned today, and the British government has contracted to purchase up to 20,00 tons this season and next.

Information on the product was contained in the June issue of the Dairy News Letter of the Canadian department of agriculture. It caused much interest in trade circles because, as far as is known, no similar development has taken place in this country.

The nearest approach to dehydrated butter in America is the so-called "Carter's Spread" developed by the Army quartermaster depot. In this process, fat is injected into butter to keep it from melting at high temperatures.

Listen! with Glynn

Three boys from Rochester, Ind., who won fame as court jesters to the King of Jazz and ever since have been known as the "King's Jesters" are now dispensing their humorous harmonies on Ben Bernie's new daily musical show at 5:45 over WJSV and the Columbia network.

Unpredictable zanies all, the Jesters can be counted on to upset the "Old Maestro's" smooth routine with everything from hot novelty numbers to outlandish burlesques of their own profession.

John Ravencroft, George Howard and Fritz Bastow were high school lads out for fun and possibly a bit of spending money when they went serenading among vacationers' cottages at Lake Manitou, Ind., in their topless, fenderless flivver.

It wasn't long, however, before they turned their bent for comic singing to more profitable channels. They clicked on a Cincinnati radio station and won the interest of Paul Whiteman. It was Whiteman who first dubbed them the "King's Jesters."

Two years with Whiteman and the boys were ready to go out on their own as an independent dance band group. Recruiting four more musicmakers, they remained the "King's Jesters" with orchestra, winning a solid following as an unusual comedy dance band.

On the Ben Bernie program the Jesters include the original singing trio and their accompanist, Sidney Nierman.

The "King's Jesters" have one hobby in common—photography. In the winter they prefer ice skating and in the summer they're off to the golf links.

Singers From 40 Churches To Appear in Concert Tonight

Choir singers representing approximately 40 local churches will take part in the program of community singing at the Watergate concert at 8:30 o'clock tonight.

Clad in traditional black and white vestments, the choir singers will approach the Watergate while the National Symphony Orchestra plays "Pomp and Circumstance."

The community sing will make up the last half of the concert. Josephine Antoine, soprano, will be featured on the early program.

Words of three hymns to be sung by the choir singers and audience follow:

The Church's One Foundation

1. The Church's one foundation is Jesus Christ her Lord;
She is His new creation by water and the word;
From heaven He came and sought her to be his holy bride,
With His own blood He bought her, and for her life He died.

3. Mid toil and tribulation, and tumult of her war,
She waits the consummation of peace for evermore;
Till, with the vision glorious, her long eyes are blest
And the great Church victorious shall be the Church at rest.

4. Yet she on earth hath union with God the Three in One,
And mystic sweet communion with those whose rest is won:
O happy ones and holy! Lord, give us grace that we,
Like them, the meek and lowly, on high may dwell with thee.

Holy, Holy, Holy! Lord God Almighty!

1. Holy, holy, holy! Lord God Almighty!
Early in the morning our song shall rise to Thee;
Holy, holy, holy, merciful and mighty!
God in Three Persons, blessed Trinity.

3. Holy, holy, holy! though the darkness hide Thee,
Though the eye of sinful man Thy Glory may not see;
Only Thou are holy; there is none beside Thee,
Perfect in power, in love, and purity.

4. Holy, holy, holy! Lord God Almighty!
All Thy works shall praise Thy Name,
In earth, and sky, and sea;
Holy, holy, holy, merciful and mighty!
God in Three Persons, blessed Trinity!

A Mighty Fortress Is Our God

1. A mighty fortress is our God,
A trusty shield and weapon;
He helps us free from every need,
That hath us now o'er taken.
The old bitter foe
Means us deadly woe:
Deep guile and great might
Are his dread arms in fight:
On earth is not his equal.

3. With might of ours can naught be done,
Soon were our loss effected:
But for us fights the Valiant One,
Whom God himself elected.
Ask ye, Who is this?
Jesus Christ it is,
Of Sabaoth Lord,
And there's none other God;
He holds the field forever.

4. The Word they still shall let remain,
Nor any thanks have for it;
He's by our side upon the plain
With His good gifts and Spirit.
Take they then our life,
Goods, fame, child, and wife,
When their worst is done,
They yet have nothing won:
The kingdom ours remaineth.

Note: Audience and all choristers please use this text for Hymn Sing at Watergate Concert tonight.

Glass Replaces Sapphire Bearings

Chicago, June 23 (AP).—Tiny drops of fused hard glass, the American Institute of Electrical Engineers was told today, are replacing precious sapphires successfully in the production of war-needed electrical indicating instruments.

F. K. McCune and J. A. Goss of the General Electric Co. reported glass substitutes for sapphire instrument bearings have been developed to the point where they could be produced in quantity and there is little to choose between the two for actual miniature instrument application.

Jungle Chief Offers 3 Sons to Stalk And Slay Hitler

London, June 23 (AP).—The chief of a bow and arrow club in Nigeria has offered to send three of his strongest sons to Germany to kill Adolf Hitler.

Sir Bernard Bourdillon, governor and commander in chief of the Nigeria forces, who is visiting in England, quoted the chief as saying:

"I have many sons. I can easily spare three of them to put an end to the man causing so much trouble. They will stalk and kill him like any jungle beast."

Churchman Resumes Post With Marines

By Robert Tate Allan
Post Church Editor

It's "once a marine always a marine" for a prominent Washington churchman, who has resumed active service in the Marine Corps, in which his son is a staff sergeant.

Martin A. McGrory, sr., 54, of 1345 Quincy Street Northwest, yesterday was back as paymaster sergeant in the Marine Corps the same rank in which he served from 1910 to 1930, and hoping that he would soon be assigned to a post near his son, Martin A., jr., somewhere in the Pacific.

It would not be the first time the father and son were together on active duty. From the time he was 3 years old until 11, young Martin traveled with his dad through Guam, Cuba, China and other places.

In a telephone interview yesterday from the paymaster's office, McGrory expressed delight that he had passed the Marine "physical" 100 per cent, in spite of his age.

He recently resigned from the chief clerkship of the Navy Mutual Aid Association to return to what he called his "first love, the Marines." He was placed on the Marine reserve list in 1931, and fully retired in October, 1940.

Both father and son are active Lutheran churchmen. Martin, sr., is a member of the executive board of the United Lutheran Church in America, is a former president of the Brotherhood of the Maryland Synod of that body, is treasurer of the Washington Lutheran Inner Mission Society, and a lay leader at Atonement Lutheran Church, North Capitol street and Rhode Island Avenue northwest.

Before enlistment in the Marines in 1936 shortly after graduation from McKinley Tech School, young McGrory, now 24, was president of the Atonement Luther League, and active in city-wide Lutheran youth work. On June 26, 1941, he married Helen J. Howes of Parkersburg, W. Va., daughter of Lieutenant Howes of the Marine Corps, now deceased. Mrs. McGrory is now living at 1663 Primrose Street Northwest and is employed with the British army staff art division here.

Nazi Rocket Shells Outranged British In Libyan Battle

Cairo, June 23—(AP)—As analyses continued here, seeking the reasons for the reverse in Libya, it seemed more than ever confirmed that the main reason was greater skill on the part of the Germans in handling armored units and artillery, especially the 88 millimeter guns which knocked out so many British tanks.

Shells from this gun are of a semi-rocket type, said to gain greater range by gases produced after being fired.

The 88 was thus able to destroy many of the best tanks on this side, such as the U. S.-made General Grants, which have 75 millimeter guns, before the tanks could get within range of the German artillery.

The Germans did not have more material in bulk than the British did, but theirs was better selected, better coordinated and better applied.

Many Church Units Holding Parleys Now

Summer religious parleys this week are drawing many delegates from the District of Columbia and nearby States.

The Baltimore Synod of the Presbyterian Church, U. S. A., embracing churches in the District, Maryland and part of Delaware, is meeting at Hood College, Frederick, Md. Among those leaving last night to attend the sessions were Dr. W. L. Darby, president of the Washington City Bible Society, and Grover L. Hartman, director of the Federation of Churches' Defense Commission. Hartman, a Methodist, will speak on churches' work among service men and defense workers.

The Eastern District of the American Lutheran Church is convening at Grier School, Birmingham, Pa., with "The Christian Church in a World at War" as its general theme. Delegates from this area are the Rev. Dr. Gerhard E. Lenski, pastor of Grace Lutheran Church; the Rev. Theodore P. Frickle, St. Matthew's Lutheran Church; the Rev. J. Adrian Pfeiffer, Takoma Park Lutheran Church; the Rev. Raymond A. Vogeley, Christ Lutheran Church, Bethesda, and the Rev. George J. Grewenow, Faith Lutheran Church, Arlington, Va.

Several hundred young adults from District and Maryland Methodist churches will hold their annual assembly from Friday to Sunday at Western Maryland College, Westminster. Walter A. Graham of Mount Vernon Place Methodist Church here is Baltimore Conference director of young adult work and assembly dean.

The general theme of "Preparing a Christian World Order" will be discussed in addresses by Dr. Paul Douglass, president of American University; Dr. John W. Austin, pastor of Mount Vernon Place Methodist Church; Dr. F. L. Gibbs of Nashville, Tenn., representing the Methodist Board of Education, and others.

Picnics and other summer church social functions are slated for this week throughout the Washington area.

Widow Loved Dr. Darlington, Maid Testifies in Will Suit

By the Associated Press

White Plains, N. Y., June 23.—The Mrs. Anna H. Paton, 78 years old at the time of her death last year, was "in love," with the Rev. Dr. Henry Darlington, 53, and "anybody could see it," a witness declared in Westchester court today.

Annie Chalkley, a maid in the Paton household for 18 years, testified for three relatives of Mrs. Paton, who seek to break the will by which Mrs. Paton gave 30 percent of her $1,200,000 estate to Dr. Darlington and the Church of the Heavenly Rest in New York City of which he is rector. Taxes have reduced the estate to approximately $800,000.

Dr. Darlington had "great influence" over Mrs. Paton, Miss Chalkley said.

The contestants claim that Dr. Darlington "unduly influenced" Mrs. Paton by carrying on a love affair with her.

Wrote Checks, Maid Says

Asked if Mrs. Paton ever gave Dr. Darlington money, Miss Chalkley replied, "Yes," and added that once when Mrs. Paton was making out a check for Dr. Darlington in her bedroom, "Dr. Darlington said 'You should be thankful to have it to give' and then he turned to me and said 'Shouldn't she, Annie?' and I said 'Yes.'"

Dr. Darlington lunched or dined with Mrs. Paton almost daily, Miss Chalkley testified, and sometimes he stayed overnight at Nirvana, Mrs. Paton's country estate at Irvington-on-Hudson, sleeping in what was known as the "Darlington room."

Both Miss Chalkley and an earlier witness, Josephine Haw, another former Paton maid, testified that Mrs. Paton was critical of Mrs. Darlington, the rector's wife.

"She said that Mrs. Darlington was untidy and that the seams of her stockings were always crooked," said Miss Haw.

Rector's Wife Laughs

Dr. and Mrs. Darlington, who sat in front row court room seats, both laughed aloud at this and Mrs. Darlington leaned over to inspect her stockings.

Miss Haw said that Mrs. Paton, who has been described as a woman weighing about 230 pounds, put ribbons in her hair and perfume on her dress when the rector came to call and seemed "happy and as flustered as a school girl" when he arrived.

Mrs. Paton and Dr. Darlington kissed each other in greeting, Miss Haw testified, adding that so far as she knew there was nothing "improper or immoral" about the relationship.
